Rural Schools Institute Convenes Here Today

Dr. C. F. Dienst Is One of Guest Speakers at Two-Day Meet

Eighty-two rural and Trinity Lutheran school teachers are in attendance at the annual Wayne County Teachers institute, which opened yesterday and concludes this afternoon. The conference is being held at the courthouse with Pearl E. Sewell, county superintendent of schools presiding. The rural school districts are dismissed these two days while the teachers are attending the institute.

Dr. Charles F. Dienst, deputy state superintendent, is to be one of the main speakers on the institute program. Dr. Dienst was formerly superintendent of the Wayne City schools. Miss Viola B. Shepherd, county superintendent of Morill county, Miss Ida E. Fisher, Prof. John R. Keith, and Prof. H. H. Hanscom are other guest speakers.

Schedule Wayne Prep Physical Checkups Today

Parents Requested to Accompany Grade Youngsters

Through the cooperation of parents and school officials, the health examination of children attending the Wayne City Schools was completed last week. Dr. G. J. Hess, school physician, assisted by Miss Genieve Bruggeman, county nurse, and Dr. Gross of Madison, chairman of demonstration district health unit No. 2 of which Wayne is a part were in charge.

Physical checkup of College Training school children is being conducted this week. Parents of grade school students are requested to be in attendance at the time their children are being examined. On Monday, high school and eighth grade students were examined. The kindergarten and first grade students are to be examined this morning and the second and third grade youngsters this afternoon.

Fourth and fifth grade students will receive medical checkups Wednesday morning and the sixth and seventh grade students that afternoon. Pupils in each grade and their brothers and sisters in the other grades will be examined at the same time so as not to necessitate more than one trip by the parents.

Each child with a record in hand is stopped at the four stations where the different parts of the examination are to be done. This record finally has information concerning the height and weight, vision and hearing, diseases the child has experienced and those for which he has had protection, his state of nutrition, orthopedic and postural defects, the condition of the eyes, ears, nose, throat, glands, heart, and lungs.

Approximately one-half of the children in the grade school of the Wayne City schools were accompanied by their parents. Through this means the parents received information as to the health status of their children.

54 Varieties, Hybrids Grown on Roggenbach Test Plot

Crop authorities have stated that the state corn test plot planted on the R. F. Roggenbach farm is the "best in the state" and although it has suffered some damage from drought it does not show it nearly as much as do other plots in the state. A demonstration meeting is being held at the Roggenbach plot today beginning at 1:30 o'clock. The Roggenbach farm is located 1 mile south of Altona.

The meeting is to open at the farmstead and later a field inspection of the test plot will be conducted by T. A. Kiesslback and D. L. Gross, extension agronomist. Discussions regarding the 54 different commercial and experimental hybrids and varieties will be held.

Ample parking space for cars will be provided and a loud speaker system will be installed at the meeting and field inspection.

141 Students Earn Red Cross Swimming Awards

Outstanding among the activities of the Wayne County Chapter of the Red Cross is the Life Saving and First Aid work which is done under the direction of the chairman of that department, Miss Esther P. Dewitz of the college faculty.

During the 12 months which ended with the close of the summer session, a total of 141 students earned one of the Red Cross swimming awards. Twenty of these qualified as Senior Life Savers, seven for the junior award, 29 received the "swimmer" award, while 85 passed the "beginner" test. In addition to this group, six others passed or repassed the examination for the Examiners Certificate, under the direction of Harold Baker, a staff member of the St. Louis office of the Red Cross.

The First Aid class held during the summer climaxed a busy year for Miss Dewitz and her committee. Seventy-two adults took the Lay Instructors' Course, which was taught by Dr. James A. Ward, also a staff member of the St. Louis office.

Half of the money raised locally for memberships in the American Red Cross is sent to headquarters where part of it is used to finance such programs as those mentioned above. Wayne County is fortunate in being able to cooperate in such a worthwhile program.

Wayne County will again have the opportunity to contribute to the Red Cross during the weeks set aside for the Annual Roll Call beginning on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, and closing Thanksgiving Day. It is hoped that there will be a material increase in memberships in this county.

Prof. K. N. Parkes has been appointed Roll Call chairman for the county. Members of his committee are being appointed, and plans are underway for a thorough canvass of the county at Roll Call time.

Four-County Schoolmen's Club Meets Here Wed.

Four-County Schoolmen's club will meet at the college campus this Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock for a dinner meeting at the cafeteria. A regular business meeting and program will be held at the training school following the dinner. Superintendents and their faculty members from schools in Wayne, Cumming, Cedar and Stanton counties will be in attendance.

A Need for a Natural Rival at S. T. C.

From what we can learn Wayne State Teachers College does not have what might be considered a natural rival. There are of course two or three teams which the Wildcats like to take into camp perhaps a bit more than the rest but there is no single competitor whom the faculty, alumni, student body, athletic teams, and friends of the school center their attention upon.

Most Colleges and Universities have one or two such opponents on their schedule and look forward from year to year to these contests as major school events. Tradition gradually adds color to these contests and record attendances and gate receipts result when the teams meet regardless of their current standing. It is in this type of competition that school spirit and team play reaches its pinnacle. Eventually it furnishes a good topic for long but highly entertaining alumni pep talks on the subject "way back when."

There are several schools with whom Wayne has competed for a number of years such as Omaha, South Dakota, Midland and Morningside. Since Morningside turns out a classy brand of athletic teams and is ideally located we would suggest them as a logical candidate. Morningside chose South Dakota University as a chief rival almost 40 years ago. The Coyotes soundly thrashed every Morningside team they met until the advent of "Saundy." During his 21 years as head of Morningside Athletics the Maroons have achieved more than their share of Coyote pelts. Both Wayne State and Morningside have respect for the other and if they meeting were looked upon from rivalry standpoint definite benefits would result to both schools. It would make an ideal trip for student bodies and bands each year and increased attendance would materially aid the physical education and athletic departments of both schools. This is merely a suggestion and is given for what it is worth. If it is taken seriously by those in authority at both schools we predict the results will be gratifying to all concerned.

Sudetenland and Our Expansion Problems Not Unlike

Whatever is the outcome of the Sudetenland problem students of American history should be able to understand, in a measure at least, the situation as viewed by the Sudeten and the German fatherland.

The expansion of our own country was a series of border crossings to assist harassed settlers. Beginning with the Proclamation of 1763 Americans looked upon borders as a vexation and never as something to prohibit further expansion. Whether seized by war or by purchase the territories lying beyond various borders came into the possession of young America as she pushed her way from coast to coast.

Whenever a sufficient number of settlers across a border became conscious that their troubles were the troubles of the States and government behind them, problems arose and in one way or another the area in question soon became the possession of the good old U. S. A.

We do not mean to be sympathetic with Führer Hitler, nor do we claim the Sudetenland and our acquisition of lands beyond the borders in our westward expansion are parallel situations, but they do have something in common. Enough alike to suggest a little sober consideration on the part of we Americans.

The Good Teacher Will Have Her Pupils Do the Work

By E. G. Littlejohn, in the Texas Outlook
"The human mind," says Dr. Trumbull, "cannot make knowledge its own without effort; cannot add to its permanent treasures by mere passive hearing or unobservant sight. No one really knows a thing until he has in some way reproduced or reshaped it by speaking, or writing, or at least by a conscious act of the will." Socrates insisted that "he who would be a learner must not be merely a listener and reciter, but must also be one who searches out for himself." Dr. Bushnell and Prof. Hart agree that "We never know a thing till we have said it." Roger Ascham gave the chief place to that which the scholar did for himself in the learning process; and Montaign writes in the same vein: "I am sure a man can never be wise but by his own wisdom." Dr. Arnold said "The effort a boy makes is a hundred times more valuable to him than the knowledge acquired as a result of the effort." Dr. Temple adds: "All the best cultivation of a child's mind is obtained by the child's own exertions, and the master's success may be measured by the degree in which he can bring his scholars to make such exertions without his aid." Finally the Scriptures admonish us: "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."

Says Prof. Swift: "The teacher who does all the preparation, all the thinking, and all the speaking is in a fair way to ruin the discipline of even a good and well-disposed class." To paraphrase the words of a one-time popular ragtime song, let the pupil do the work, do the work, do the work. Leave them to discover the truth for themselves—make them truth-finders. Teach them to do their own work—"as if you taught them not." "Better the school tyrant," says Gregory, "who whips his pupils into learning their own lessons than a teacher who tells them all." Rosenkranz and Seeley agreed that "no amount of zeal or skill on the part of the teacher, no approved method, superior instruction, no choice of material, no choice of circumstance, environment or mechanical means, however essential all they may be, can avail unless the pupil by his free activity receives into his inner self what one teaches him and then makes it his own property."

Some teachers do all the work on the assumption that her pupils are lazy and don't like to work. "I teach the lesson," says one, "making the necessary explanations, and it is up to them to learn it." Never was a greater mistake. Children are not lazy. They like to work when the task set is one they consider mark the they-worth-while.

Of course they are not "crazy about doing things" they have no interest in; and neither are you. Children often complain that there is nothing to do in school. Self-activity is a law of nature. Its exercise always gives pleasure. This is true of the grey-haired elders and of the youngsters in pinnafores. I know a dear old lady who is an adept at embroidery. You should see the glad light that comes into her eyes at a word of praise for her handiwork. See the child, when he has constructed a block tower or house, drawn a crude picture, or performed some other act of self-expression, run for mother to come and look and admire. The architect will show you with swelling pride the buildings he has constructed; the cabinet maker the fine polish he has put on a table; the ditchdigger the straight lines, the smooth perpendicular sides of his trench; each has done something; each has expressed himself, and found pleasure and satisfaction in the doing.

The good teacher will have her pupils do the work. She will arouse and guide their self-activities, but further than this she will hardly dare to go.

Personality

As I pass along through life, I meet men and women of charming personality, who are able to get along with people and are clear headed, deep thinking, pleasing in manner, clean in living, aggressive in doing good, and possessed of unusual characteristics. I commence to probe into their experiences, to find out whom they have seen and met. Sooner or later, I find that somewhere they have come in contact with a great soul. The time of contact may have been short, perhaps embracing but a single hour, and not even permitting a personal meeting. I inquire about their teachers, and often find that sometime during their school career a great personality touched them and called them to their highest efforts. Often I have asked, "What did this person say or do that caused you to realize your own soul and aspire to become worth while?" The answer as often comes back, "I do not know. The message reached me and my life has been different." Such inspiration can come only from a true teacher. Through his personality he finds the way to another heart, revealing the possibilities of a life to itself and to the world.—Wills A. Sutton, Superintendent of Schools, Atlanta, Ga.

Roosevelt Solves Unemployment Problem

Yes sir, it's just a question of time!

Working men, business men, both large and small, housewives, farmers, even people on governmental alphabets during the past six years have had headaches. At first they were mild, then the headaches lengthened into morning and afternoon sessions, now the headaches go far into the night. The husband cannot sleep, the wife cannot sleep, so naturally they get up and light all the lights. Business men will go downtown and light up their offices and hold their heads, farmers will take the lantern and go out to the barn, everywhere they are all burning kerosene and electric current night after night. Eventually with all the kerosene, gasoline and electric current consumed it will no doubt take up the unemployed for the mere fact that the oil companies and the electric companies will be forced to pick up the employed because of their volume of business.—V.C.B.

Stars Who Wear Glasses Have Troublesome Problems

HOLLYWOOD has long pondered over the case of Leslie Howard. The versatile Mr. Howard, much to the amusement of screen moguls and other prominent actors, has a remarkable reputation throughout the nation as a great lover.

Leslie Howard
In private life one wears glasses, one wears bedroom slippers.

In the October issue of Pictorial Review, Jimmie Fidler, Hollywood columnist and commentator, takes you behind the scenes in the Capital of Make-believe.

"No one admires Mr. Howard's acting ability more than I,"

Fidler says, "but he doesn't look like a great lover to me, especially when he wears his spectacles, and that brings us to his obstinacy. 'Leslie, being almost helpless without them, insists on wearing those glasses.' Mrs. Howard, wise in the ways of Hollywood, is equally determined that he shall not be seen in them by his fans, and any husband can tell you who wins the little arguments which result."

But if the Howard case is amusing, Joan Bennett's came near being tragic, Fidler relates; since she has been so myopic since childhood that objects only a few feet distant are to her only a formless blur.

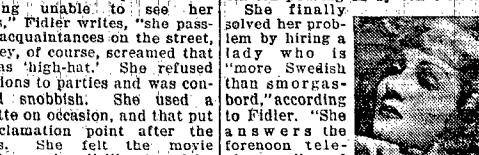

In an effort to discard her glasses, Miss Bennett embarked on an existence which must have cost her the keenest misery.

"Being unable to see her friends," Fidler writes, "she passed up acquaintances on the street, and they, of course, screamed that she was 'high-hat.' She refused invitations to parties and was considered snobbish. She used a lorgnette on occasion, and that put an exclamation point after the rumors.

She felt the movie colony's growing dislike, heard its asides, and naturally developed an inferiority complex which made her seem even more aloof and haughty. It was a vicious circle."

"Suddenly Joan Bennett put her glasses on and walked down Hollywood Boulevard, and instantly became the charming girl she really is," the writer says.

Fidler takes his reader on the set where Loretta Young, Claudette Colbert, and Joan Crawford are playing parts which require

Redeem Other States Compensation Benefits

Lincoln.—Persons now residing in Nebraska, who worked previously in other states, where unemployment compensation benefits are now being paid, may if unemployed file claims for benefits immediately through the offices of the Nebraska State Employment service, it was announced today by Harry Bane, director of that agency.

The Nebraska Unemployment compensation division does not begin paying benefits until after January 1, 1939, according to Nebraska law. However Nebraska has entered into a multi-state agreement with 41 states where covered workers, who earned wage credits toward benefits in those states, may apply for benefits when unemployed, even though they are now residing in Nebraska.

The Nebraska State Employment service accepts the claims and acts as an agent for the unemployed claimant in sending the claims for approval to the states where the claimant formerly worked.

After Jan. 1, 1939, former Nebraska workers who have benefit rights earned in this state, can file claims in other states, which subscribed to the inter-state agreement.

Benefit payments to a multi-state worker are to be subject to the same requirements that would apply if the worker actually were in the state from which he claims benefits.

Baehr Elected to National Honorary Group

Herman Baehr, head of the Wayne High school commercial department, was recently elected to Pi Omega Pi, national honorary commercial teachers' fraternity. Initiatory ceremonies were conducted by the Epsilon chapter at the University of Iowa. Mr. Baehr has done graduate work in the commerce department at the University of Iowa the past two summers.

Election to Pi Omega Pi is the outstanding award that can be bestowed upon a commercial teacher. High scholarship, personal qualities of leadership, and the reputation of signal success in the field is the basis of selecting candidates for the national organization.

Carotene in Silage Provides Vitamin A

Carotene, a yellow pigment of plants from which vitamin A is formed in the animal body, occurs in close association with green coloring matter of pasture plants and other green forages. The green color of cured roughages usually is a good indicator of carotene content.

With silage, however, scientists of the Bureau of Dairy Industry have found an exception to the rule. The green color may be greatly reduced in the fermentation process without losing an appreciable amount of carotene so long as the fresh green feed is packed tightly enough in the silo to force out and keep out air.

Vitamin A is one of the "musts" of a dairy ration, say the scientists, because it is a factor in controlling growth of young animals and influences resistance to infection in animals of all sizes. It is one element of the ration, however, that is likely to be deficient, especially in dry years when green feed is scarce.

Release Enrollment Comparisons

The early September report shows an increase of 34 students in the Wayne Public schools as compared to last year's total. It is a 33 pupil increase over the 1936 enrollment. Four hundred eighty-nine students have matriculated for the current school year. The enrollment figures totaled 455 last year and 456 in 1936.

Non-resident students in high school show a 19 student increase since 1936. At present, 99 students are attending school here. Non-resident students totaled 91 last year and numbered 80 in 1936.

Land Utilization Project Promotes Better Land Use

2,200 Farmers in Great Plains to Benefit in Plan

Approximately 2,200 farmers and live stock operators in the Northern great plains area are looking toward a future of permanently stabilized agriculture through the aid of the land utilization program of the bureau of agricultural economics.

"These people," Rex E. Willard, regional director of the program announced this week, "have been the victims of an unsound agricultural policy, but through their own efforts and the work of the federal government they now have a better opportunity to make a comfortable living than ever before."

Through the purchase of four and three-quarter million acres of land in six states of the Northern great plains region, nearly 21,000,000 acres are being converted to better long-time use.

The 2,200 operators in the adjustment areas of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana, Wyoming and northeastern Colorado have already benefited as a result of the program, it was pointed out.

Following extensive studies of the areas involved, recommended shifts in unit operations, changes in the size of the farm units, stockwater development and reseeding of cultivated areas by natural and artificial means, all are benefiting the operators.

Through the organization of grazing associations to allow only grazing in accordance with carrying capacity in the adjustment areas, the ranges are rapidly returning their natural grass covers.

One of the greatest benefits, especially to the local governments, is the better balance between the rural population and the resources of the land.

Pine Ridge project located in Sioux and Dawson counties in Nebraska totaling 143,194 acres has resulted in better use of 500,000 acres. Other land utilization projects acquired in other states in the Northern great plains region show a huge increase in better land use.

The lands already purchased, or in process of being purchased, are considered the "key" areas which will bring about the proper

File Three New Cases On District Court Docket

Three new cases were filed on the district court docket during the past week. A damage action involving Gail M. Creger vs. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Neely was filed last Tuesday. Emma Mau filed for a divorce from Carl A. Mau last Friday.

An appeal from the compensation court in the case of Wayne county, petitioner in error, vs. Amelia Lessman, defendant in error, was filed last Monday.

BE NOT DECEIVED

It was a wise old Roman philosopher that said "be not deceived" the grass in the other pasture is no greener than the grass in your own." It is an error of common economic thinking that merchandise or service is cheaper or better in far away towns. How many times have we seen chickens cross the road in front of the oncoming car, and we think "How Foolish Chickens Are" and how many times have we seen colts and horses cut their necks by stretching over the barbed wire, when the grass is just as green and plentiful on the inside of the fence. Or, we can bait a fancy trap and sparrows will rush to be caught, and how foolish they are, too.

Well, let's look at ourselves. If we cross the state or county in our high powered cars for unknown merchandise, are we not like the chickens? If we stretch and tug for far away places are we not like the colts, cutting our own throats? Or if we fall for the bait in the far away business trap, are not we like the sparrows? The old Roman was right. It is no better on the other side. Wayne can serve you better, for less money, with uniformly good quality.

The people of this community are not chickens; they are not colts; they are not sparrows; they are thrifty human beings, value wise to the commercial tricks of the distant city. They hear not the clarion call of the commercial racketeer looking for Barnum's suckers.

The people of this community trade with Wayne merchants because they know Wayne merchants stand behind every piece of merchandise they sell.

Wayne merchants treat their customers right because they know they cannot look for an entirely new set of customers tomorrow. So be not deceived, trade at Wayne so that you may know for sure with whom you are dealing.

State Ranks Third Meat Production

Lincoln, Neb.—Nebraska ranks third among the 48 states in the production of meat, according to Howard H. White of the National Live Stock and Meat board who was in this city this week to address retail meat dealers.

"On January 1 this year," said Mr. White, "there were 4,000,336 meat animals on Nebraska farms. The income from the sale of meat animals produced on Nebraska farms totalled $135,135,000 in 1937. Of this amount, 6 per cent was from the sale of sheep and lambs; 30 per cent from the sale of hogs, and 64 per cent from cattle and calves."

Mr. White paid tribute to the splendid work of the University of Nebraska along animal husbandry lines. The intensive work in meat research has been of national interest and value, he said. Nebraska has been represented in the intercollegiate meat judging contest at the International Live Stock Exposition every year since its inception in 1926, he said, and during that time has won first place four different years.

Buy Wisely—Then Care For Purchase, Says Katharine Fisher

A GOOD knowledge of buying must be balanced by an equally good knowledge of use after buying if you want to get full benefit from your dollars, says Katharine Fisher, Director of Good Housekeeping Institute.

In discussing plans for club programs based on consumer education, Miss Fisher presents in the October issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine, a side of the problem which is seldom touched upon—the use and care of products after buying. "The vegetables you picked out in the market this morning will not give you full value in flavor and nutrition if you do not know how to cook them and if the meals in which they are used do not measure up," she writes. "And what is true of vegetables and meat planning is true of almost everything else."

Of the many established consumer laboratories, Good Housekeeping Institute is the oldest of its kind. The Institute is an editorial department of the magazine and was established about thirty years ago for the purpose of serving homemakers as an authoritative source of information on subjects related to home management.

With Katharine Fisher at its head, the department is today constantly conducting research in its laboratories, testing and investigating products and checking results obtained with them. It is the only organization in the field of homemaking today which is staffed and equipped to investigate, to test and prove every word of information it publishes. On its staff are about 40 people—engineers, chemists, home economists and other technicians, all especially trained and qualified to cope with modern homemaking problems.

Abundant Harvests Increase Farm Exports

For over a year now farm products exports from the United States have been rising and imports have been falling.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports that, in the 12 months ended June 30, the value of farm products exports from the United States increased 168 million dollars or 22 per cent over the value of farm products exports in the previous 12 months. The value of imports of commodities which compete with farm products produced in this country decreased 32 per cent.

These changes in foreign trade in agricultural products are attributed chiefly to two major factors—abundant harvests last year and the drop in industrial activity in this country. Both factors operated to decrease imports of farm products. Increased supplies after the years of drought shortage meant less need for goods produced outside the United States and more available for shipment abroad. The decline in industrial activity reduced consumer incomes and consumer buying power and meant lessened demand from workers and from factories for imported as well as domestic raw materials.

The value of United States exports of farm commodities during the fiscal year 1937-38 was the largest in seven years.

Various devices will be used to recognize outstanding work in the Commercial department this year. Honor Rolls will be maintained for those students who have written perfect copy for the various lengths of time the tests run. "B" Honor Rolls will be maintained for those students who have written perfect copy on tests on which they have erased and corrected any errors made during the time of writing. These erasures must be so perfectly made as to escape detection in ordinary reading of the copy. Speed Clubs will be maintained for those students attaining an extraordinarily high score in copying tests.

Vegetable, Fruit Inspection Increasing

A steady growth has been shown in shipping point inspection of fruits and vegetables with 450,006 carlots inspected for grade certification last year, reports Francis G. Robb, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Only 72,000 carlots were inspected in 1923, the first year that the service was offered by the bureau. By 1930 the carlot inspections had grown to 243,129, and by 1935 the number of carlots reached 306,435.

More potatoes are certified as to grade than any other item of produce, says Mr. Robb. Under marketing agreements covering most of the important late-potato producing areas from Michigan to Idaho last year, shipping-point inspection was required for all interstate shipments. Inspection of potato shipments from Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, the coastal region of Texas, and the two western counties of Florida, based on prescribed minimum standards, was required under potato agreements effective in these Gulf States. A further increase in shipping-point inspection is expected this year if the late potato states adopt the potato-marketing agreements now under consideration.

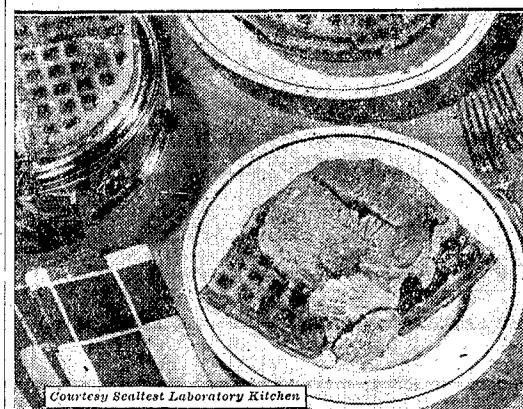

Such a service makes it possible for produce buyers on consumer markets to purchase by wire, on the basis of the government certificates, shipments of produce at the shipping point, although the shipping point may be several hundred miles distant.

Tempting the Tired Tastes!

By BEULAH V. GILLASPIE
Director, Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

HOW often it seems that desserts are passed over with an entire lack of interest from the family or guests. It's disheartening! And of course, it is so often due to the satisfying dishes that have been served ahead of the dessert course. But, we think this is a dessert that will tempt the laziest of appetites.

PERSONALITIES IN MUSIC

EDGAR LESLIE, A. S. C. A. P.

Songwriters Have No Textbooks

By Daniel I. McNamara

THE songwriter uses no textbooks except his lyrics, the unwritten volumes of experience. He doesn't dash off his lyrics in inspired moments. Struggle and sweat with meter and rhyme... perspiration, not inspiration... make for success in songwriting. Believe this on the authority of no less a personage of the songwriting fraternity than Edgar Leslie, for thirty years one of the most successful of his profession, and for many years a leading member of the Board of Directors of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Leslie has written many popular song parodies for dialect comedians, thirty years ago, when he created his original smash hit, "I'm a Yiddisher Cowboy." He followed this quickly by a collaboration with Irving Berlin—"Sadie Salome, Go Home." These two numbers definitely established him as an up-and-coming author of popular song.

Hits multiplied. "Get Out and Get Under," "When Grown Up Ladies Act Like Babies," "America, I Love You," "California and You," "Oh, What a Pal Was Mary" and "Dirty Hands, Dirty Face" followed in quick succession.

Harry Warren and he wrote "By the River St. Marie," and left it, forgotten, in manuscript form, for eight years. It emerged from oblivion to become one of the great hits of recent years. "Among My Souvenirs" was written in London to the music of Horatio Nichols, the composer being in reality a leading English music publisher, Lawrence Wright. Leslie has written songs with Walter Donaldson, Jimmy Monaco and many others.

Recently he teamed with an old friend, Joseph Burke, popular song composer. Six times in two years their creations have led the country in popularity. "In a Little Gypsy Tea Room," "On Treasure Island," "A Little Bit Independent," "Moon Over Manil," "Robins and Roses" and "It Looks Like Rain in Cherry Blossom Lane" reveal the magic touch of this gifted pair. "At a Perfume Counter" is one of their latest,

Songs For Youth

Leslie has evolved a practical philosophy of songwriting. He believes the songwriter must address himself to youth, that the song must carry a simple and direct message. It should be easy to sing, and he points out that popular songs must compete with the movies... that they must paint an attractive word picture.

Leslie is a thoroughgoing New Yorker. His grandparents lived in Seventy-first Street when it was known as Bloomingdale Road, and they used to spend their summers at a cottage in Chelsea (Twenty-third Street). Happily married twenty-one years, he now lives in a midtown hotel; usually retires early.

He follows deep-sea fishing and golf, and enjoys sea voyages. His favorite outdoor sport—as a spectator—is polo. In the writing of songs, he goes into the more mundane memories and experiences of his life, into things more in touch with America as it is to the great mass. And he writes to please them.

Wildcats in Spirited Mood Prepare For S. D. "U" Game Sat.

Morrison Will Take
24 Men to Meet
Coyotes Saturday

Filled Stadium Sees
First Home Game
of Wayne Staters

Once more, decidedly the underdogs, State Teacher's Wildcats will invade the University of South Dakota to tangle with the Coyotes Saturday afternoon. South Dakota dropped a game Saturday night to Creighton University and will be in a fighting mood for the Wildcats who are not second raters to any club when it comes to aggressiveness. Last year Wayne outsmarted the Coyotes in returning a kick-off to score and Bradford kicked the point, but the red shirts punched over four touchdowns to win 25 to 7. In this accomplishment the Wildcats did what South Dakota State, Morningside, Omaha U. and Iowa State Teachers could not do against South Dakota. It was only the University of North Dakota, Champions of the North Central, who could cross the Coyotes' goal line.

On paper South Dakota looks about 3 or 4 touchdowns better than the Wildcats but a surprise might be in the offing for South Dakota when Coach Morrison and the Wildcats walk out on the field. Coach Morrison predicted little at the opening of the season except that his boys would not be a pushover for anyone. Since then 24 Wildcats have demonstrated this fact. It must be remembered the Coyotes are big, fast, smart and very very tough besides being veterans, however Wayne has some star performers and a host of players seemingly without an inferiority complex so it is bound to be a ball game. Without injuries and in a good frame of mind Morrison's boys are working overtime this week convinced they will give a good account of themselves at South Dakota Saturday afternoon.

Home Hospitality Theme of Leader Training Meet

Project leaders of Wayne county home demonstration clubs will meet for leader training instruction at the city hall this coming Wednesday. Miss Mabel Doremus of the extension service will be in charge. A similar meeting will be held at Winside the following day. The round table discussion will be on "Home Hospitality." Subtopics to be discussed are "making the meal our social occasion," "special meals for special occasions," "when company is expected," and "planning the company dinner."

FSA Supervisors Attend Educational Meet

Mrs. Elizabeth Grant, district FSA home supervisor, Dr. William Hawkins, district FSA farm supervisor, and Ray L. Verzel, county FSA farm supervisor, attended an educational meeting dealing with live stock and cropping program for coming year of FSA clients. The conference was held at Pender Wednesday. The newest trend in the FSA program is the writing of home and farm plans by the clients assisted by FSA supervisors. A diversification of crops and live stock is urged to meet farm emergencies. A similar meeting will be held in District 7 of which Wayne county is a part in the near future and will be an instruction school for FSA clients.

Business Women

LAZIEST ON EARTH THRIVING IN MAINE Logging Camp Keepers Begin Summer Exile.

MARILYN thought being a "business woman" was simply wonderful. For almost a year she had sipped the wild essence of freedom, and the intoxication led her to the loneliest men in the world will start six months of forest exile as keepers of logging camps' deserted by their crews until the leaves turn in the fall.

Few men, only those who are natural hermits, want this job of doing nothing for fair pay and a good living. Sometimes one of the crew is willing to stay behind when the others set out with whoop for Bangor, but more often the logging operators hire one of the strange sons of the forest, for the most part French Canadians, who were born in the woods and know nothing of towns.

Life for Marilyn was indeed a song, a syncopating jazz tune but for two minor discords. One was the fact that her boy friends were mostly students or junior clerks making little more than herself, and the other was Aunt Carrie.

Aunt Carrie was also a "business woman," one of the old girls. She was past thirty and addicted to blue tailored frocks with touches of white at the neck and wrists.

Marilyn never forgot the night that she had danced gaily into the living room wearing her new ensemble, black with trimmings of lip-stick red. There was antique jewelry to match and a tight little cloche with drooping red feather. Aunt Carrie had lain back and actually howled.

"Do you intend to wear that costume to a business office, Marilyn?" "I most certainly do. I only hope that it makes everyone as happy as it apparently does you."

Aunt Carrie made for the door. "It wasn't that. I—I just thought of something funny."

"Mother, do I have to put up with that sort of thing? Do I have to work hard all day and come home to be insulted by hysterical old maids? If I do, I'm through. I'll stay in town—get an apartment."

A few days later a perfectly marvelous thing happened. It put Aunt Carrie and her little "jokes" entirely out of Marilyn's head. She was hurrying to the office, when she heard a voice. "Hi, Miss Morgan! Want a lift to the subway?" It was Mr. Nelson, branch manager, over forty, and idol of all the typists.

While protecting the camp against fire, he must also guard the axes, cantdogs, sleds, harness, blankets, kitchen utensils and provisions, such as pork, flour, molasses, beans and canned goods. He needs his rifle. For nothing edible is safe from the most expert of all burglars, the bear.

The skill of the bear at breaking and entering, larceny and general destruction is amazing.

Mystified by Mathematics.

So, always mindful of bears, the camp keeper eats, smokes, sleeps and, if he can read, peruses his literary legacy. More than likely he is illiterate and most of his tribe are blissfully ignorant. They are especially untutored in arithmetic, keeping time and accounts by notches on a stick or on the brim of a hat.

One Canuck, employed by a Bangor lumberman known for sharp practice, let two seasons go by without a settlement. When he asked for his money, the bookkeeper began reading "offset" items, such as "three pairs of gum boots, $24." To his protest that he had had only one pair the bookkeeper replied:

"Why, there it is in black and white, the pair you had, the pair you didn't have and the pair you ought to have had."

The dazed Canuck finally admitted that the book must be right.

There are men like him who stay buried in the woods so long that, as Con Murphy, boss logger, used to say, "the world could come to an end without their knowing it."

Beauty Is Secondary, Say University Men

New Concord, Ohio.—A recent survey of men students at Muskingum college revealed they believe beauty is more than "skin-deep."

The men were asked to answer the following questions:

"Do you have your own beauty ideals?"

"And is it the type of loveliness as personified by co-eds?"

"Does the man-about-the-campus favor collegiate pulchritude?"

Muskingum men believe mere facial features are not the yardstick to measure co-ed beauty.

The "stronger sex" insisted their ideal girls have naturalness, poise, charm, sense of humor, average facial beauty, intelligence, cleverness and be religiously inclined.

While he was away on a business trip Marilyn played around with Bob Evans. Bob strummed a wicked ukulele and took one upstairs at the movies.

"No, honey boy, I can't make any more dates this week. I'm thinking of taking some night courses. Toodley-oooh."

She opened the hall door. Aunt Carrie was standing there, and in the shadows there was a man.

Marilyn stopped, a smothering feeling in her throat.

"Why, why, Mr. Nelson?"

He put his arm about her, laughing rather foolishly. For a moment she thought he had been drinking, and then she became conscious of a terrible thing: his other arm was around Aunt Carrie.

In the solitude of her little cretonned room she fought her battle. It was not the fact that Mr. Nelson was to marry Aunt Carrie; it was the devastating knowledge that he had PREFERRED Aunt Carrie.

Rhesus, a confirmed egg eater, made short work of the nests. The sparrows gave up, seeking other nesting spots.

POOR SERVICE

He entered a Yonkers drugstore one afternoon recently, looked all about him warily, while mentally taking stock of the many and diversified articles for sale there, and shook his head approvingly as he ambled up to the counter.

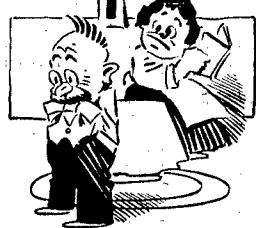

"Well, my young man," queried the clerk, "what will it be?"

"I want an automobile tire."

The clerk was amazed, needless to say, not knowing whether the man was serious, and stammered: "We don't sell rubber tires here."

A look of utter disgust suddenly took hold of the man as he shot back: "What blanket-blank kind of a drugstore is this?"—New York Sun.

Among the Wild Animals

Mike was going to Dublin for the first time in his life, and his friend, Pat, was giving him a few hints on what to do and where to go in the city.

"What do I do when I go to the zoo?" asked Mike.

"You be careful about the zoo," advised Pat. "You'll see feline animals if you follow the words, 'To the Lions,' 'To the Elephants,' but take no notice of the one, 'To the Exit.' for, Mike, it's a fraud, and it's outside I found myself when I went to look at it."

Wrong Number

He had been trying to secure the attention of a waitress for 20 minutes, but at last got up from his chair and, going to the desk, demanded to see the manager.

"What for?" asked the girl.

"I've got a complaint," he replied.

"Complaint?" retorted the girl, haughtily. "This is a cafe, not a hospital."—Labor.

Shame!

The immigrant had finished his first month on a Canadian farm. "I'm gettin' boss," he said. "You promised me a steady job."

"Well it is a steady job, isn't it?" said the farmer.

"No," replied the man, with a wan smile, "there's at least three hours in the middle of the night when I've nothing to do."

Careful Peter

"Mind you don't hurt the kittens, Peter!" called mother, as Peter was carrying them along to show the visitor.

"No, mother," Peter replied. "I'm carrying them very carefully by their stems!"

CLOSE QUARTERS

"Are the rooms in your apartment narrow?"

"No, mother," Peter replied. "I can't even indulge in a broad grin!"

New Words

While he was visiting with a neighbor, little Tommy saw his friend drop and break a dish.

"Well, now, isn't that a fine kettle of fish?" she exclaimed.

When Tommy went home he was anxious to use the new words before his parents. He slipped off the davenport, falling to the floor.

"Wasn't that a good dish of fish?" he asked.—Indianapolis News.

Touching

The Scotsman had lost a pound note. Sadly he entered the advertisement office of the local newspaper and handed in the note he wanted inserted in the "Lost and Found" column.

The clerk read: "Lost, a £ note. Sentimental value."—Sarnia Observer.

Called

"Now, as to salary," said the boss to the new help. "Suppose we call it $150 a week?"

"Swell!" enthused the new help.

"Understand," cautioned the boss, "that's just what we call it. What you get is $15."

Quite!

The contributor wrote: "The enclosed are original and have never been published."

The editor (returning them) replied: "I can quite believe it."
