

Legion Basketball Tournament Brings 16 Good Teams Here

Basket Ball Tournament Gets Under Way With Much Enthusiasm

The second annual American Legion Basketball Tournament to be held in the city auditorium Feb. 6, 7, 8, and 9 is all set to go. Wayne has two teams which would like to enter the tournament, namely the Wayne Creamery aggregation and the Eighth Street boys. Only one of them will enjoy the privilege of tournament participation. However these two teams will meet Friday night to decide which team will play in the tournament and which team will see it from a comfortable seat with the other spectators.

This game will be played as a preliminary to the Wayne-Norfolk High school game here Friday night and promises to be a real curtain raiser. Both teams are determined to come out of this fracas as the favored tournament team.

Ross Jacobs, Legionnaire tournament manager, is leaving nothing undone that would produce a bigger and better tournament. "Jake" began planning this year's tournament the moment last year's tournament was over. He not only has more teams this year, but he points out the play will be more competitive. Out over Northeast Nebraska the teams coming to the Wayne tourney have a lot of local support. These fans as well as the sponsors of the teams and the players, welcome the opportunity of tournament competition. It advertises the representative town and builds an abundance of good will and as host this community undoubtedly will give the tournament 100% support.

Following is a list of towns and their sponsors that have entered the town-team tourney sponsored by the American Legion to be held at Wayne Feb. 6, 7, 8, and 9.

South Sioux, Norfolk Meet Wayne Hi

Sioux Cardinals Meet Wayne High Tossers In Auditorium Tonight

Coach Simons will bring one of the outstanding High School basketball teams in Northeast Nebraska here tonight when his South Sioux Cardinals tangle with Coach Morris' Blue and white tossers.

The Cardinals will present one of the tallest and best balanced teams to be seen here this year. They have dropped only a game or two this year and have won by wide margins over all other opponents. Last year they defeated Trinity of Sioux City 35 to 22 and Lyons 38 to 21 with their second string playing a considerable proportion of the game.

Wayne Hi has regained their poise as was evidenced in their win over Wisner and fans can count on them to give the Sioux outfit a busy evening. If the Blue and White can set the Cardinals down handily, the boys should be in a fine mental frame of mind for their encounter with Norfolk here Friday night, but the Sioux game comes first and you can wager a peanut or two that Coach Morris will see to it, that South Sioux gets first consideration.

Panthers Boast Win Over Les Davis' East Hi Team

"It's in the bag," is probably what the Panthers of Norfolk are thinking regarding their Wayne engagement here Friday night. "How come?" Well, a team which succeeds in conquering Coach Les Davis' East Hi Black Raiders just gets that way when considering their next opponents. And if the victory over the Iowans was short of the necessary emphasis to develop such cocky confidence, add to it the Panthers victories over such top notch teams as Fremont, Albion and Pierce and you should be able to surmise that Norfolk will come to Wayne fully confident of roughing the Blue and White. They would like nothing better than to hand Wayne a beating we would all remember for years to come.

Taking a look at the other side of the dope sheet, Wayne is not to be counted out. In spite of Norfolk's numbers, and admitted superior source of material, by a comparison of the teams play with Pierce, Wayne may spring a surprise. Pierce was hard pressed on their own plan to eke out a win over Wayne. Playing at Norfolk, the Panthers had difficulty keeping ahead of a fighting

130 College Men Play On Intramural Basketball Teams

Intramural Basketball introduced at State Teachers college for men not on the varsity squad has proved an attraction to 130 men.

Twelve teams have been organized and are playing a schedule which has developed into real rivalry. A battle for top honors characterized last week's play in the Intramural League with each of the 12 teams having won at least one game out of the five played and no team winning all of their games.

The games are played on Monday and Thursday nights and are proving popular with the student body with a goodly number of students on deck to root for their favorites. No admission is charged for these games. At the conclusion of the regular season the three leading teams will be presented with medals to be given to each member of the team.

The standing of the teams prior to last night's is as follows:

BLUE AND WHITE ROUT WISNER BY 37-18 SCORE

Tight Defense Holds Wisner to Five Goals While Getting 17

Presenting an almost impregnable defense, which featured the type of guarding a coach enjoys, none of Wayne's players had more than two personal fouls in holding Wisner to five field goals to win over their host 37 to 18.

Berry was high point scorer for Wayne with 12 points with Seymour and Granquist following with 9 and 8 points each. Fitch rang up three buckets and H. Johnson one to give Wayne their 37 points.

The Wayne second team lost to the Wisner seconds 9 to 15.

Complete Road Trip At Hastings This Week

In their final six games they will meet York Feb. 3, Chadron, Feb. 11 and 12, Midland, Feb. 21, Peru, Feb. 23 and Hastings, Feb. 25. The three games with Shadron and Peru are conference games and the Wildcats will have to win all three to finish their conference standing higher than last year when they won two conference games.

High School News

Wayne High has a group of boys that practice basketball at noon instead of going out for regular basketball after school. These boys are called Cornshuckers. And they too have regular games. Last Wednesday evening the Cornshuckers played Laurel on the Laurel Future Farmers floor trouncing them 27-14. Both teams looked very good and each of them played a good game. There were very few fouls. Kenneth Gamble shot up 12 counters. The second team played a very close game but finally came out on top, winning 13 to 12.

Science-Math Club

Last week the Science-Mathematics club of Wayne High presented pictures to the grade school with the exception of the first three grades. Altogether there were five reels shown. The club borrowed Professor Griffiths' projector. The pictures were again shown at the Sigma-Mu-Gama meeting last Thursday evening. Also included in the evening program was a fine mathematical demonstration by Miss Clark. This was also the evening for the initiation of new members. Those included are: Marjorie Harrison, Herbert Tenme, Allan Splitgerber, Catherine Cavanaugh, Lorraine Johnson, Donna Loy Reese, Jim Pile, Richard Claycomb, Reva Barnes, and Evelyn Auker.

Typing News

At the beginning of the second semester a new project was started in the typing classes. Mr. Baehr has set a definite goal for the people who want to get a 1 for each week's work. In order to get one of these much worked for grades, each person must complete seven letters and five time tests in a week. It is even fixed so that it won't be too hard on any one. If a person can not do any one day, he has the chance to do several the next. Of course there are a few rules as to how many erasures can be made, but with a goal to reach, the typing students work hard.

Omaha U Professor Finds Fallacy In War Referendum

The war referendum, if Professor Dayton Heckman of the University of Omaha has his way, will be put where it belongs on the shelf by that lovable fantasy, Ferdinand the Bull.

Professor Heckman, a specialist on public opinion and a member of the history and government department at the University, sees little to commend the current proposal that the Constitution be amended so that Congressional declarations of war are subject to popular vote.

The expert on public opinion believes that a major fallacy of the supporters of the referendum is their belief that "men-hate-war."

"The contrary is more likely true," he asserted. "For the clerk and the factory worker war has its attractions—it offers a escape from the hum-drum of everyday existence with the possibility of heroism."

"Men are not united by their feeling of affection for each other but by their common hatreds. Every society is united by its common 'demonology,' or objects of hatred. Once popular sentiment and propaganda have created these 'devils' the referendum can only delay but not avert war."

"With the referendum, the very fact that Congress calls for a vote would be almost conclusive evidence of the temper of the people. The delay involved in the referendum would only give the enemy an opportunity to strike first."

Wildcats Win One Lose One on Road Basketball Journey

Lose to Kearney 40 to 33, Defeat York 34 to 32

Kearney State Teachers made its two conference wins over Wayne State on the Kearney floor Friday night when they won a hard fought game 40 to 33.

The high light of the game was the scoring of Kearney's star forward Church who caged 7 baskets in the first half to place the game on ice. His team was leading 28 to 15 at the half. In hitting the bucket seven times during the first half, Church gave an exhibition of shooting unequalled in his basketball career. Several of his shots were made one-handed when he was going in the opposite direction from the basket. He was held to one basket by an improved Wayne defense during the second half.

Wayne outscored Kearney 14 to 13 in the second period.

The game was marred by a total of 34 personal fouls. Kearney drew 18 and the Wildcats 16.

Johnson, Ellermier and Blessing went out on the maximum, for Kearney and Wayne lost Huntermer and Bemhold.

Defeats York

Trailing at three half 19 to 12 the Wildcats returned to outscore York in the second half 22 to 12 and win by the narrow margin of 34 to 32. This half was the first time in several games that the Wildcats were really connecting a reasonable percentage of their shots. Good ball handling and ability to drive through the tightest defense has characterized Wildcat play in recent games but as a whole the percent of baskets made has been far below a reasonable expectancy. It is this part of the game that every player will try to improve upon in the remaining games.

Marshall Leads Wildcat Scoring

In the games played prior to the Midland game Monday night, Marshall was leading the scoring for the Wildcats with 82 points. Bradford was second with 66, Rembold third with 55, Whitmore was in fourth place with 41 and Ahern had 39. Huntermer lead the rest of the squad.

Carroll Elects Winside Man, Latter Names Community Building

At a meeting of Carroll business men and members of the Carroll Co-Operative association held Tuesday evening, Mr. W. E. Mr. Scribner will also handle the insurance business which Mr. Williams had. The Community club met Thursday evening at the Trinity Lutheran church parlors with 23 members present. Members of the Trinity Lutheran aid served the dinner. Plans for summer free entertainment were discussed at the business meeting. It was decided that the community building now being constructed will be officially named, "Winside Auditorium."

CLUB WOMEN OF STATE ADOPT DIST. PRES. IDEA

Mrs. S. A. Lutgen of Wayne is President Of Third District

Grand Island, Nebr. — The Nebraska Federation of Women's clubs are planning a tree planting and beautification program for the rural school grounds of the area, according to Mrs. S. A. Lutgen of Wayne, Nebraska, president of the third district. Shade trees, shrubs, vines, and hardy flowers plus a few demonstration tree windbreaks will be planted.

The program, which is getting under way this spring was originally conceived by Mrs. Lutgen and it is now being considered as a state-wide project by Mrs. Walter Kiechel, president of the State Federation. It is hoped that the showing this year will arouse interest enough to carry the work to completion in years to come, thus removing Nebraska from the list of states in the Great Plains where more than 90 per cent of the 29,000 rural schools are completely at the mercy of the continuous winds which frequently whip up into blizzards in winter and sand storms in spring and fall.

One of the finest offerings of horses, cattle and hogs to be sold at auction this year will go to the highest bidder at the Wayne Sales Pavilion this afternoon according to Col. Gus Herkens.

Mr. Herken's will be assisted today by Auctioneer Paul Raphael.

ers' association, district presidents of the Teachers' association, county superintendents, and many civic organizations are cooperating with the Federation of Women's clubs. The aid of the Forest Service of the U. S. department of agriculture was enlisted to help get the work off to a good start, and this spring the Forest Service will assist by planting two demonstration windbreaks in Antelope, Wayne, Cedar, Madison, Pierce, Boone, Knox, Colfax, Platte, Nance, and Stanton counties in addition to the beautification or landscape plantings made by the Women's clubs. These windbreaks will consist of a planting around the school yard of the same general type of the field shelterbelts which the Forest Service regularly plants on farms.

In charge of the work in each county will be a committee, consisting of the president and past president of the county federation, the county conservation chairman, and the county superintendent, with a Forest Service officer as adviser. The county committees will determine the schools where planting is to be done, complete agreements for planting and furnish a design of the plantings, and arrange for soil preparation of the area to be planted, for excluding live stock from the area planted, and for the cultivation and care of the plants.

Insofar as practicable, it is said, school children will plant the trees, shrubs, vines, and flowers and care for them. In this way the youngsters will gain a working knowledge of the principles of plant culture of the plains which in turn can be applied at their homes. In addition, it is pointed out, the plantations will be valuable textbooks for the children in the study of trees and flowers in respect to their value in the Plains States, as well as showing patrons of the school what can be accomplished.

South Dakota's Course In Sleeping

Editor Herb Evans of the Volante, University of South Dakota Student publication has a warning word regarding a certain course of study offered at the University. The course referred to is one in Sleeping offered to Women.

What we would like to know is why the course is limited to Women students when men are just as able to benefit by it. Another thing we would like to know is why the course is confined to reclined sleeping in a room of two cots, when some class rooms are more adaptable. It seems to us the Economics department could work out a curriculum whereby in those instances where a student could derive greater benefit by sleeping than listening to a lecture he could receive credit. As it is now a slumbering student runs the risk of being flunked. One can readily see the student's angle of this problem. With the credit system on a sort of sliding scale basis, an athlete for instance having to receive a passing grade on 12 hours in order to be eligible to participate, would never be disappointing his coach or misplacing confidence in his professors. He could, under this arrangement be passing in 9 hours of solid contact and 6 hours in slumbering. At the worst he should be able to hold up in 3 hours of slumber.

Anyway, South Dakota U has such a course for women and here is what Editor Evans has to say about it:

Should you some time wander up to the third floor of the Women's Armory and happen upon a room containing two cots, do not be astounded. That's the sleeping classroom, the room in which the special physical education course in sleeping is taught. Oh, yes, there's such a course—for women physically incapable of taking the required courses.

This subject should meet with the hearty approval of all those fundamentalists who decry the theoretical in education and applaud the practical. For this course is eminently practical. There are no theories, no lectures, no textbooks. You merely sleep. The latest enrollee, whose doctor says her back is too weak for sports participation, is to sleep one hour a day, five days a week.

A few years ago one girl took the course, got a "B," the only grade lower than an "A" which she received at the University. Perhaps she was a light sleeper. Or maybe she normally went to bed early, and couldn't really put her heart into the course.

Any expansion of the course could easily result in havoc. Imagine, for instance, the amazing popularity of a course in sleeping offered in the government (or any other) department at 7:50. Also I'm afraid the professor would restrain himself with difficulty the first time the tardy student said, "I'm sorry; I overslept."

Most of us really won't be interested in such a course, however, until we can take it by extension.

Friendly Relationships Strengthened

Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in his capacity as President of the United States, is doing an excellent job of establishing friendly relations between our country and the Roman Catholic church.

Last week Roosevelt appointed George McDonald, rich Manhattanite and one of the foremost U. S. Roman Catholic laymen, a hereditary papal marquis, to head a committee to distribute three million bushels of surplus U. S. wheat to non-combatants in Spain.

Visitors at the White House during the past few days have included Bishop James Ryan of this diocese and Rev. Maurice Sheehy of the Catholic University. But most important of all, Roosevelt has appointed a Roman Catholic, Frank Murphy, to be his attorney general in the cabinet.

These gestures of American friendship toward the Roman Catholic church have not gone unnoticed by the Pope, whose followers are being persecuted in many dictatorial countries.

To show the rapidly growing community of interest between our democracy and the Vatican, the Pope's daily paper, "L'Osservatore Romano," has just praised the Pan-American conference, so largely the creation of Franklin Roosevelt and Secretary Hull. The significance of this pat on the back lies in the fact that all other papers published in Italy have been ridiculing the Lima gathering.

In Washington, D. C., near the British Embassy's palatial building is now being completed to house the Apostolic delegation from the Vatican. And we would be pleased, and not at all surprised if the democracies are obliged to set up a bloc to protect their interests from fascist encroachments, that the Roman Catholic church will throw its weight on the side of the democracies.

In such a case diplomatic relations would be revived between the United States and the 108-acre Vatican State. Then the Stalins, the Hitlers and the Mussolinis would discover that the power of organized religion, Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant, will support those governments which guarantee freedom of religious worship and abstain from anti-God movements that try to replace the church with worship of the state.—Howell's Journal.

Quakers to the Aid of German Jews

If you wish a huge relief job quietly, promptly, efficiently, without beating of drums or blowing of horns, turn it over to the Quakers.

One of the most significant stories in last week's dispatches from abroad was hidden away on the inside pages of most of the dailies.

It told of the return to Philadelphia from Germany of an American delegation representing the Friends' Service Committee. For a month, the members of the delegation had been discussing with Hitler's lieutenants, plans for aiding the Jewish victims of Nazi persecution.

"We received only the greatest cooperation," said Dr. Rufus M. Jones, a Haverford college professor, who headed the delegation.

They perfected arrangements to "send out as soon as possible" 150,000 of the younger Jews to new colonies in other countries. Their families will follow later. Thus probably 300,000 Jews will be taken out of Germany and sent to lands where they may live in peace.

In addition, the German government agreed that these American Quakers might send representatives into Germany to direct relief among 200,000 aged, infirm, and very poor Jews "who will never be able to leave Germany."

So these descendants of William Penn. are in a fair way to solve a problem which has aroused the bitterest feeling throughout the English-speaking world. It should be noted that in doing the job they have not indulged in a single unkind word, or threatened either military or economic reprisals.—Labor.

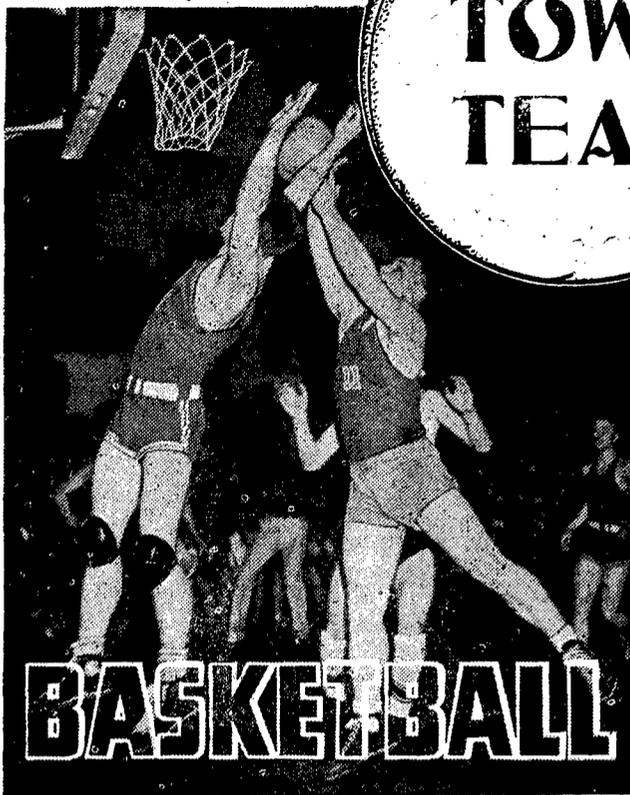

Wage-Hour Act Gains Popularity

The Federal Wage and Hour Act has gained popularity, until 71 per cent of the American people approve its provisions, according to a Gallup poll. A year ago, when the legislation was before Congress, 61 per cent of those polled favored adoption of the regulation.

Both Northerners and Southerners are for the act, the survey showed. So are skilled and unskilled workers and white-collar employes. Even a majority of employers are declared to be reconciled, although many will have to raise wages, shorten hours or pay overtime.

The greatest support for the law among workers, as might be expected, came from persons in the low-income groups, but the survey showed that 79 per cent of the employees polled believe the act is a good thing.—Labor.

Who Says So?

The American people have got a rather rude shock in the last few weeks. They have discovered, through sheer accident, that they have been talked to, and "inspired," and made ballot-box "wise," all in the name of simon-pure legislation for their own moral and physical and economic improvement.

Only to find the whole hullabaloo was bought and paid for.

Bought by special interests looking for profit from this legislation, but paid for by the people, the consumer, with a proved price rise of 33 to 67 per cent.

Yet even this economic result is not the crux of the matter. The real issue is whether elected representatives, paid out of the taxpayers' sweat—members of Congress, Senators, State Legislators, State University and College Officials and Professors, all who draw their sustenance from taxes—have a right to appear as public servants, advocating legislation as of the public good, and take money behind their backs from special interests.

Recent exposures of "honorariums" and "travel expense" accounts may explain the artificial antagonism toward various forms and methods of business in this country. Who goes around telling you, for example, that house-to-house selling should be prohibited? That prohibition if honestly enforced, bars your neighbor farmer, your insurance solicitor, your refrigerator salesman, your newspaper carrier, from asking you whether you want this commodity or need this service.

Watch out for "any" proposed law that would hamper, limit or abolish any decent form of selling. It is intended to compel buying in certain places only and at fixed prices. It is afraid to "let the consumer decide."

Well, it looks as if the Honorable Cackaloo Cockalorum, next time he appears in the town hall series to evangelize in favor of higher prices, fewer stores, few-

HONOLULU

ADAPTED FROM THE METRO-GOLDWYN PICTURE BY LUCY HUFFAKER

Chapter One

VICTIM OF HIS POPULARITY

A trickle of filmgoers emerged from the doors of Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Los Angeles where the premiere of Brooks Mason's new picture, "My Broadway," supported as usual by Gale Brewster, had been held with the usual pomp and ostentation of such first nights. The trickle grew into a stream and then into a torrent among which were numbered Hollywood's most glamorous film stars, the creme of Los Angeles society, politicians, critics, scenarists and other production attaches, and ordinary citizens.

The emerging crowd met and mingled with the mob of the stars' fans which, unable to gain admittance to the theatre, was waiting more or less patiently for the appearance of their favorite, jostling, elbowing and shoving amid much good-natured "joshing" and typical of "fan" crowds.

Suddenly a woman's voice sounded shrill above the clamor: "I see him! Oh, I see him!"

A wave of motion swept over the waiting throng, dashing itself against the portals of the theatre. "Mason! Mason! There's Mason!" shouted many voices.

The mob rushed forward in a tidal wave that swept spectators and police alike onward into the very lobby, crushing emerging auditors against walls and doors until further movement was next to impossible, so tightly were the people jammed together.

A segment of the mob surrounded a young man coming out of the orchestra, laughing, chaffing, extending autograph books for his signature. His hat was jerked from his head, buttons yanked off his coat. A woman with scissored pulled out his necktie and cut off a piece of it. The man denied that he was Brooks Mason, but the crowd was on to all the dodges of screen stars to avoid being mobbed, and those nearest to him were pushed forward by the pressure of those behind, until the young man was knocked off his feet, and the nearest fans in turn sent sprawling on top of him amid wild flying legs and arms, cries for help, angry shouts and curses.

An extra cordon of police was necessary to extricate the hapless and unconscious young man and carry him to an ambulance that had been hastily summoned by the theatre manager.

With the victim of the mob swaying on a suspended cot, the ambulance, siren screaming, sped through the streets. One of the two internes examined the patient for broken bones. Suddenly he straightened up.

"Holy mackerel! This is Brooks Mason, the actor!"

"The picture couldn't have been that bad, could it?" asked his companion.

"My girl thinks he's terrific," said the first interne.

"Yeah, so does mine, Bill. Every time I kiss her, she shuts her eyes and says, 'O Brooks!' Look, he's coming to."

"The eyelids of their patient fluttered, opened, for a moment. 'Did anyone get the number of that truck?' he murmured.

"Don't worry, Mr. Mason," said Bill. "We'll have you at the hospital in five minutes."

"Never mind the hospital. Take me home."

"All right, Mr. Mason. It's all right to take him home, Ralph. No bones are broken."

"When let's break some," said Ralph, savagely.

"Don't be a wise guy."

"You mean I can't sock him in the jaw once — for luck?"

"No," said Bill firmly. "We're taking him to his home."

It happened that the mobbed young man was telling the truth when he denied that he was Brooks Mason, for at that hour Brooks Mason was in his luxurious home, befitting a No. 1 Hollywood glamor boy, throwing darts at a large picture of a bald-headed man. As he picked up another dart, Gale Brewster, his leading lady in "My Broadway," swept into the room; rosy with pleasure and excitement.

"Well, we were sensational, Brooks! The crowd went wild. What a demonstration! They nearly murdered you!"

"Nearly murdered me?" queried Brooks, puzzled.

"Well, someone who looked like you came out of the theatre, started for the street and was grabbed by some autograph hounds and —"

"And what?"

"I don't know. I left before the ambulance came."

"Was it bad?"

"Oh, they just knocked him down, tore off most of his clothes. Outside of that they were pretty orderly. Gosh, Brooks, when I think it might have been worse!"

"Her voice changed and softened. 'Don't you see, Gale,' said Brooks tensely, 'it was me. It was

Living Standards And Food

The New York Times turns the spotlight upon another phase of the farm problem which has received but scanty attention. The higher the living standards, the smaller the consumption of basic farm commodities, including wheat for bread, and beef and pork, the Times suggests. When the living standard reaches the highest level, people gorge themselves upon caviar and other delicacies instead of consuming the staple products of the soil.

There may be some truth back of the statement. But if there is, nothing is going to be done about it. All of us, from the lowest to the highest aspire to higher living standards. The greater the income, the more expensive the tastes. Only on rare occasions does the rule work otherwise. Now and then one of great wealth lives in the most simple fashion.

No doubt the ability of the American people to indulge themselves in a much greater variety of food than the peoples of most European nations accounts in some degree for the failure of an increased population to consume proportionately increasing amounts of breadstuffs, even making generous allowances for rigid dieting to preserve the slender figure. Take the case of bread. In the pioneer era of large families it was the principal article of diet on the table. Mother baked at least once a week, and not infrequently twice or three times. Each member of the family ate not a single slice of bread but several slices, depending entirely upon the sharpness of the appetite. Now around the table few members consume more than a single slice of bread, and some of them do not care for it at all. Some of them will sit down to several meals without touching bread. It would be all so simple in a country governed by a dictatorship. All that would be necessary would be a rule Sally and John each should eat five slices of bread at each meal. But here under democratic government one of Sally's inalienable rights is to forego bread until she has lost three pounds and to endeavor to square accounts with her stomach through a half grapefruit.—Lincoln Star.

Mrs. Stella Chichester, Mrs. George Wert and Archie Wert were Sunday afternoon visitors at the H. C. Lindsey home in Winside. They were supper guests that evening at the Melvin Wert home.
