College Drama Class Will Present "Heart of a City" March 19

"Heart of a City," a three-act play under the direction of Miss Lenore P. Ramsey, faculty director, and Frances Blezek, student director, will be given by the college dramatics class Friday, March 19, at 8 p. m. at the college auditorium.

This play vividly shows the effect of the war and its blitzkriegs on the chorus girls of the Windmill theater. Every other theater in London has closed, but the Windmill theater, with undaunted courage and grim determination, remains open. These girls are not content with merely performing on stage for the public, they use every spare moment they have off stage to go Red Cross work, spot incendiary bombs, and entertain soldiers at various camps.

During one air-raid a nearby cafe is a direct hit, and the girls are first on the scene to help. Each does her share—Lila Saddle, the theater manager, leads horses out of the burning stable, Judy even digs into the smoldering ruins with her bare hands trying to rescue the buried people. Rosalind is busy bandaging and giving first aid to the injured.

In another air raid Judy and the boy she loves are in a building which is bombed; both are instantly killed. Although this is a tragic blow to the rest of the company, another chorus-gir takes Judy's place and the show goes on!

After seeing this play, you will better realize the great amount of courage and heroism that the English people possess. It's a play well worth your time to see, so don't forget the date, March 19. There will be a first presentation for children up thru high school age on the evening of March 18.

Wayne Knights Lose To Norfolk in Third Round of Tournament

Wayne high school was eliminated in the third round of the class A regional basketball tournament held at Norfolk last week. After winning their first two games handily, beating Bassett 43-11 and Plainview 31-11, the Knights lost to a highly rated Norfolk team 30-15. Norfolk led all the way with the half ending 17-8. Kanzler was high point man for Wayne with 2 field goals and one free throw. Robinson and Farmer got eight points each for Norfolk. Norfolk won the tournament by defeating Albion in the finals 39-18.

Out of 13 starts this season the Knights have come out on top 10 times, losing only three games. This is a good record for any ball club.

Rev. Hazzard Talks Before Kiwanians

Tells of Spiritual Work by Chaplains Among Armed Forces

Rev. H. H. Hazzard, pastor of the Baptist church, was the speaker at the regular weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club Monday noon at Stratton hotel. Lt. Aldo Molinari was a guest of Dean Clarence McGinn. Club as a new member. Dr. Ingham was in charge of the program.

A vocal solo, "Sweet Little Jesus Boy," by Julian Tongerson with Miss Genevieve Lundak at the piano, opened the program. Rev. Hazzard extended the club members a special invitation to attend the first Sunday evening lenten service to be held next Sunday evening at the Baptist church.

Rev. Hazzard opened his talk by telling of the spiritual work being done among the armed forces by the army and navy chaplains. The very cream of the country's ministerial material has been selected for this service, said Rev. Hazzard. Qualifications, both physical and as to personality and experience, are very high. Parents, even though they do very little at home to further the Christian cause, are very glad to have this influence available to their sons in service and the government has gone to a great deal of expense and effort to give them the best of chaplains, declared the speaker.

Statistics show, said Rev. Hazzard, that while the boys are at camp in this country they show little concern over things of a religious nature. For instance, at Omaha, out of 800 boys stationed there, only about 20 attend a Sunday afternoon vesper service. However, as soon as they are sent abroad, and especially after they are under fire, their attitude changes and the saying that there are no atheists in a fox-hole has become a tradition.

Dr. Victor West, in behalf of the Wayne ministerial association, extended an invitation for the Kiwanians to give their support and attendance to the entire series of lenten meetings.

Red Cross Workers Busy Collecting For War Fund Campaign

A little over one-fourth of the goal for Wayne county has been reached so far in the war fund drive and membership roll call now being waged on a nation wide scale. With 22 out of 88 country districts already reporting and 11 town districts out of 36, approximately $1200 has been reported collected by workers.

It is once more emphasized that this is a campaign to raise funds for all the many important activities of the Red Cross in regard to the war effort in combination with the regular roll call drive.

RATION BOARD HOURS

Beginning March 31, the office of the ration board located in the basement of the post office, will be open between the hours of 10 and 12 a. m. and from 1 to 4 p. m.

Survey Shows High School Students Are Well Adjusted

According to a recent survey of the students in Wayne high school, they seem to feel that they are happy in their school adjustment. A questionnaire compiled by experts in the study or environment was used in making this determination. The questionnaire was unique in that the correct answer had to be "No" rather than the usual "Yes."

Eighty-three and two-tenths per cent of the students indicated that they are average or above in this adjustment; 14.8% indicated below average and 2% indicate extreme dissatisfaction or unhappiness. By classes the seniors ranked high and the sophomores lowest—93.5% of the seniors indicating average or above, 6.5% below average and none poor; 84% of the freshmen indicated average or above, 14% below and 2% poor; 81.7% of the juniors indicated average or above, 16.3% below and 2% poor. Sophomores indicated 76.1% average or above, 19.6% below and 4.3% poor.

Pupil relationships rank high with 96% answering "no" to the question, "Do you dislike helping your classmates with their schoolwork for fear they will get better marks than you?" 93% answered "no" to "Would you rather go out of your way than have to walk home with some of your classmates?" 84% answered "no" to "Do you think most of your classmates are dishonest about their schoolwork?" 78% answered "no" to "Do you dislike teasing by your schoolmates?" and 65% answered "no" to "Do you purposely avoid some of your classmates because they annoy you?"

Pupil teacher relationships seem to be very good as 92% of the answers to "If you aren't doing well in your school work, do you regard it as your teachers' fault?" were "no." 90% of the answers were "no" to the question "Do you think your teachers' pick on you?" 88% "No's" to "Are you afraid of any of your teachers?" 84% "No's" to "Do you feel that your teacher doesn't allow you enough chance to express yourself?" and to "Do you think most of your teachers give you lower grades than you deserve?" 76% "No's" to "Do your teachers sometimes punish you for something you didn't do?" 72% "No" to "Do your teachers give you assignments which are too hard for you?" 42% "No's" to "Do you sometimes feel that your teacher plays favorites in your class?"

The greatest difficulty seems to be in classroom relationships because only 60% answered "no" to "Do you hesitate to recite in class?" 32% to "Do you dislike making reports in front of the class?" and 25% to "Do you ever know the answers in class but hesitate to volunteer?"

Funeral Services for Mrs. Quillen Fox Held in Eagle Grove

Funeral services for Mrs. Quillen Fox, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Fox, were held in the Congregational church at Eagle Grove, Iowa Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Fox was formerly Miss Lucille Verma Lineveaver and is a graduate of the Wayne college. She is well known here and at Winside where she and her husband lived following their marriage. Mr. Fox was an instructor in the Winside schools prior to his enlistment in the navy.

Mrs. Fox was the victim of an accident in Long Beach, Calif., Sunday, Feb. 28. She and a neighbor boy had just stepped out of a car belonging to friends. They started across the street toward their homes and were both hit by a passing car. Mrs. Fox was killed and the neighbor boy was seriously injured.

Mr. Fox, who is stationed at Washington, D. C., flew to California and accompanied his wife's body to her home town for burial.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Parity Vote Heralds Farm Price Rise; Allies' North Africa Strength Grows As Yanks Erase Rommel's Advance; RAF Raids Strafe Nazi U-Boat Nests

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

On their way to continue the offensive against the Japs at Salamaua in New Guinea, Australian troops pass through a group of Americans who had been in action earlier. This photo was made after the successful close of the Pappan peninsula campaign against the Japs.

TUNISIA: Rommel Pays Dearly

The 50-odd miles that Marshal Rommel had originally advanced against American forces in Tunisia had cost the "Desert Fox" dearly. For not only had most of that gain been lost in retreat, but the Axis offensive had been converted into a first-class Axis setback, with heavy casualties.

Pell mell through the Kassarine pass Rommel's Afrika Korps tank forces had retreated to the southwest under powerful Allied gun and aircraft attack. Seasoned observers termed Rommel's maneuver, a typical Axis hit-and-run action. The Axis had found the American forces overextended and trying to man untenable positions. The Axis had struck hard. When the American high command met this offensive with a more powerful counter-offensive, the Axis ran for cover.

Thus Rommel's first major bid to cut Allied communications lines had been thwarted.

As the Allied fortunes in Central Tunisia thus turned brightly upward, reports disclosed that General Sir Bernard Montgomery's British eighth army had been on the move in North Africa and had struck with augmented power in southeastern Tunisia. Smashing with tanks into the Mareth line, General Montgomery had seriously threatened Rommel's rear.

HITLER BOASTS: Nazis Not Yet Beaten

Adolf Hitler's absences at key Nazi party gatherings had caused speculation as to his health and reasons for remaining under cover. But wherever he was, his remote-control message to the German people via a Munich proclamation was as harsh and fanatical as if der fuhrer had delivered it personally.

Ominous to the people of occupied Europe was Hitler's declaration that "we shall not scruple about foreign lives when such hard sacrifices are exacted from our own lives."

Germany's future and the future of Europe, he said, will be decided on the Eastern front. He boasted that enemies who believed they almost had Germany down would be "terribly disappointed."

4,403 NEW SHIPS: To Help Beat Axis

Funds for the construction of 4,403 ships for the Maritime commission were approved when the house appropriations committee reported an appropriation bill providing $9,290,830.435.

The current shipbuilding program to thwart the Axis submarine peril and provide transoceanic facilities for men and supplies has been mapped through 1943, according to Admiral Emory Land, director of the Maritime commission. The schedule called for construction of 2,242 ships of which 554 were delivered before January 1, 1943. In addition, he said, it was proposed to extend the program to provide for 2,161 additional ships to be contracted for during 1943.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

WASHINGTON: More than 3,000,000 babies were born in the United States last year, the census bureau estimated. This was the largest number of births in any year in the nation's history. The previous record was in 1921 when 2,850,000 were born. The 1942 record compared with an estimated total births of 2,715,000 in 1941 and 2,560,000 in 1940. Officials estimated fewer 1943 births.

FARM PRICES: Wickard vs. Senate

When Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard requested congress for a "clear mandate" to proceed with his 1943 farm production program, he asked for sanction to attempt the difficult feat of increasing farm prices without raising prices to consumers. The "clear mandate" was appropriation by congress of $100,000,000 for incentive payments.

But the senate farm bloc had ideas of its own about solving the farm income riddle. Legislation providing higher ceilings on prices of some farm commodities passed the senate by a 78-2 vote. Under the terms of the new act, the government no longer would deduct benefit payments from ceilings.

How much this measure if finally approved by all branches of the government would add to the food bills of consumers was a question neither the department of agriculture nor the OPA was prepared to answer immediately, because of technical factors involved.

OPA officials, however, expressed the view that increases in living costs would be considerable.

AIR OFFENSIVE: Allies Harass Europe

Although Allied land operation offensives against Hitler-held Europe were still in the blueprint stage, the offensive by air continued to gather momentum.

Wilhelmshaven, the major Nazi naval base, and Lorient, the vast Axis submarine base on the French coast, were repeated targets. The RAF celebrated its 16th raid on Wilhelmshaven by bombing key objectives without the loss of a single plane. In one of the raids on Lorient Allied fliers dropped more than 1,000 tons of explosives.

In a summary of operations, an RAF spokesman revealed that 100,000 tons of bombs had been dropped on German objectives to date in the war and that 2,000 daylight sorties had been made by the bomber command in 1942 alone.

CAFE RATIONING: Streamlines Bill-of-Fare

Diners-out in restaurants and hotels faced siltmer helpings on their plates and a streamlined bill-of-fare reducing the variety of foods offered, as enforcement of the food administration's rationing orders for commercial eating establishments was undertaken.

Aimed primarily at food waste, the orders governing restaurants, hotels and other institutions, did, however, provide a larger proportionate allotment of canned and processed foods than individual householders were permitted to have. Because allotments were based on the number of persons served in December rather than on the amount of rationed foods actually served, small cafes and stands would get a proportionately larger share of canned and processed foods than places that serve for the most part complete meals.

Restaurant and hotel allowances were set at a minimum rate of 13 per cent larger than those for households.

NEW YORK: Unless certain merchandisers cease encouraging mailing of an excessive number of parcel post packages to the overseas navy personnel, the mailing privileges may be restricted, according to a navy statement. While army personnel abroad must obtain prior permission from commanding officers to receive parcel post packages, navy men do not.

EASTERN FRONT: Russians Roll On

All along the eastern front the Russians had continued a series of blasting offensives. Each offensive was a battle unit in itself, but added to all the others it formed a pattern that was inexorably moving westward across the map toward the Dnieper river.

Military observers were asking whether the German defenses on the Dnieper line were as strong as the anchors the Axis had lost further east in the Don and Donets river basins. If sufficient time had not been available to strengthen this secondary line, then the Nazis faced a crisis more serious than anything that yet confronted them.

In the upper Ukraine the Red armies had moved steadily forward on a wide front toward the Moscow-Kiev railway, their offensive based on a triangle formed by recaptured Sumy, Lebedin and Akhtyrka. To the south the Germans had fought violently in an effort to halt the Russ maneuver for enveloping the remainder of the Dnietz basin from which hundreds of thousands of Axis forces were seeking to retire in some semblance of order.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC: To Have and to Hold

Three activities had continued to occupy the attention of American and other Allied forces in the Pacific war theater. These were 1—To hold the territorial gains they had already exacted from the Japs; 2—To destroy enemy aircraft installations, dock facilities and ships in nearby occupied territory; 3—To gather strength and momentum for further full-scale land and sea blows at the Japs.

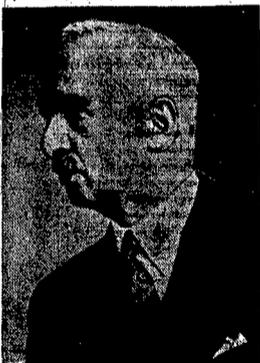

In unremitting "softening up" tactics, heavy American bombers in attacks on the Jap base of Rabaul in New Britain scored hits on two Japanese warships, drove a third onto a reef and damaged a 10,000-ton cargo vessel. U. S. planes scooped hits on a Jap barge at Rekata bay in the northern Solomons and strafed enemy positions at Munda.

Indications appeared that the British were gaining the Japs in Burma was against steam preparatory to a major movement to retake Burma and open the supply road to China. The strength of the Jap effort was indicated by the fact a Jap effort to raid Assam airfield resulted in the loss of 30 planes.

TURKEY: Watches and Waits

A watchful waiting policy based on a determination to stay out of the war if possible but to enter the fight if necessary was enunciated by President Inonu of Turkey. Inonu pointed out that the final decision might not be in Turkish hands.

Calling all Turks to intensify their preparedness against any eventual-ties, President Inonu declared: "We are grieved by and suffer from the global disaster. We shall do our utmost not to be entangled in it nor contaminated by it, but we know that it is not entirely within our power to stay out of the war."

PRESIDENT INONU . . . 'decision not Turkey's'

Turkey has spent more for defense in the last four years than at any time in her history, he declared.

4 TO 1 RECORD: For U. S. Airmen

Americans learned with pride that their fighting airmen had destroyed four enemy planes for every one of their own knocked out of the skies in 1942.

An official tabulation covering complete operations for the last year showed that army, navy and marine fliers shot down at least 2,587 of their foes. This total did not include hundreds of planes listed as probably destroyed.

Aircraft losses by all American armed services last year totaled 809. Some of the fliers were shot down by anti-aircraft fire, others simply did not return from combat missions for reasons unknown. A majority of the 609 losses, however, resulted from actual combat with enemy airmen.

4TH FDR TERM?

As informed observers were predicting that the war would still be in progress in 1944, politicians were prophesying that the Democrats would draft President Roosevelt for a fourth term.

In the van for the fourth term for Roosevelt's movement were Governor Neely of Maryland and Congressman Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois. Dean of the house, Sabath said he had discussed the proposition with the President and told him "he wet it to the country to run again."

Pennsylvania Turnpike Aids 'Flight Strip' Boom

Super-Highway Serves as Ideal Emergency Landing Field for Planes; Postwar Advances to Emphasize Need for Runways.

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The great bomber was in trouble. The pilot knew it. One engine was coughing like Camille in the last act. He looked down. Below him lay sleepy Somerset country, Pennsylvania. On the far horizon was a smoky blur he knew was Pittsburgh. He had been following the long, brown ribbon, wide and straight as a string for many hundreds of yards before it gently curved with hardly a grade—the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

The pilot picked a wide green field beside this highway, dropped down, made his landing and his repairs. A quick call to the state police and the road was ready, for it is a defense highway now, a vital part of the arteries of transportation of war supplies. But here was a new use for this wild dream that has become a stern reality.

Traffic was stopped, the great bomber taxied out of the field and onto the highway. The pavement made a perfect runway. The straight-way was of sufficient length, the cuts were low and the wing-spread passed over all appurtenances. The good ship rose and was on its way.

This was no flight of the imagination. It was a real flight which took place and was described a little over a year ago by Representative Jennings Randolph of West Virginia, one of Washington's air-minded congressmen.

And so a super-highway becomes an adjunct of what is to be America's super airways. More than 35 planes, Mr. Randolph tells me, have taken advantage of this emergency landing highway.

New Chapter Opens

And so a new chapter opens in American roadbuilding. A new reason for the development of the countryside that is to come after the war—must come if we are to meet the demands of tomorrow's transportation, of tomorrow's demand for public works to take up the slack after the war until industry can absorb the returned soldier and the jobless warplant worker.

In spite of the many pressing war needs, congress is more awake today to the needs of the air and the collary developments on the ground than it ever has been before.

Today, a Pennsylvanian, transported to Washington, cons the press and listens to the radio each day (he is retired from an active business life in which he has amassed a modest fortune) for word of some new benefit that child of his, the Pennsylvania Turnpike, has given to the country. He is Walter Jones. The Turnpike was a peacetime venture. He obtained funds from the $29,250,000 federal grant and the Reconstruction Finance corporation purchased bonds amounting to $40,800,000. The first issue was oversubscribed by the public by 60 per cent. The Turnpike is a toll road and the first year of operation, the revenue was nearly three million dollars.

No wonder. It was an engineer's dream come true—and a motorist's, too. As near a curveless, gradeless, intersectionless, straightaway that one could wish. When war came with the overtaxed railways, it was a Godsend for it opened a veritable Volga of trucking from Pittsburgh, its western terminal, to Harrisburg.

Dual Purpose

"I feel confident," says Representative Randolph, "twenty years will liquidate the RFC loan."

So much for that highway which may well be the father of many.

It has served another purpose. The emergency plane landing merely symbolizes what can be done by the highway for the plane.

The answer is the "flight strip" for which congress appropriated ten million dollars as experimentation.

What is a "flight strip"? Officially defined, it is "an area of land with clear approaches located to an adjacent highway for use as an auxiliary landing area for aircraft."

have talked "flight strips" for years know, what the development of these runways will mean.

As Fred Schieffe, special engineering consultant to the administrator of the Federal Works agency, says: "The congress, the state highway departments, and the contractors are pulling together toward the end that the projects will be built in the shortest possible time."

About Poached Eggs—And the Awe of a Kitchen

Only recently, when my wife was away for some time, did I learn to poach an egg, and in so doing, at last lost my awe of the kitchen. It was my early training that gave me that awe. Neither my grandmother nor my mother would permit "men in the kitchen" unless they had specific masculine business there.

"No, you sit down in the corner and read the paper to me. I can dry the dishes quicker without you helping. And there won't be any streaks on the cups."

Of course, there were times when a man's presence was permitted. Naturally, when he was allowed to eat there or when the kindling had to be brought in or the coal hold filled. But even then, only when Milana, the young Scandinavian giantess who was the hired girl, was otherwise engaged.

When I was quite small, I was allowed to play in the kitchen when traffic was light. But that was a special privilege. The bare scrubbed floor was excellent for tops. And, of course, was that much nearer the cookies, and if I was present during the early stages of cake-baking, there were the odd pieces of sweet dough that I loved, and sometimes, a chance to "lick the pan" which was not as unsanitary a practice as it sounds. It really meant a chance to scrape out the dish after the frosting had been mixed.

But there were bitter memories of cake-baking time, too, the stimulant for which added to my respect for the kitchen. Once, coming back from school, I leapt into the room and started to stamp the crisp snow from my rubbers. There was (oh culpa mea!) a cake in the oven. It fell and soon my pride followed for I was placed in a most embarrassing position—a horizontal position I might add.

Other Reasons

There were many reasons why my love of the kitchen was mingled with a respect that has not quite gone even though the graceful curves of the range whose covers could glow like a summer sun and whose insulating eyes beamed so cheerfully, has long since gone. The kitchen table with its white oilcloth, with only a few scars at one end—another why men weren't allowed in these sacred precincts—"Now who has been cutting bread without the breadboard again?"

I am not, of course, describing the spacious room of the farmhouse when I talk about my kitchen memories for I lived "in town" although the orchard began just beyond the back fence and fields, an easy walk beyond the place where the sidewalk became two parallel planks with a space between (perilous to maneuver on a bicycle) and then ended in a pathway.

No, mine was not the spacious kitchen where half a dozen could eat at once. But it took care of the family with a little crowding on Sunday nights around the remnants of the last night's baked beans and the other delicious leftovers.

Souvenir Calendar

We had room for the little rag rug under the rocker by the window and the Journal's bright "souvenir" calendar adorned the wall—that "annual gift" of the newsboy is about the only thing left in today's white kitchen where you can't tell the sink from the gas stove or the cabinet or the ice box. That and the dotted swiss curtains in my kitchen.

But you may break, you may shatter my dream if you will, when you open one shiny door, the scent of the spices cling about it still. I have lost my awe of the kitchen but loving memories linger and latterly it has, in a measure, increased my self-respect. At long last, no one to stop me, I have learned to poach an egg.

Building A Peaceful World

By Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

One of the great lessons we Americans will have to learn if we ever hope to build a better foundation for peace is that human beings the world over have to be approached as human beings and not as members of a race or as adherents of a certain religion—but just as people whom you may like or dislike according to their individual characteristics.

I may be a Chinese, an Arab, a Jew, an Indian, a Negro, a German, a Frenchman, or a Britisher—still I must be evaluated, if I am to be fairly judged, on the basis of being just a human being.

"We have never done this in the world before—and we have never had peace in the world thus far."

Freedom From Fear.

One of our four freedoms states that we shall have "freedom from fear." Freedom from fear, of course, means that the world over, people will be protected from aggression, people will be protected from persecution because of their race or their religion.

People will be safeguarded from hunger and want, too, by an economy which takes into consideration the basic needs of all the people, the world over.

If that is going to become a reality, then the first thing we have to do is to learn to meet our fellow human beings, recognizing the fact that we will not love all of them, but we will love some, and we must get on with all, regardless of difference of race or creed.

Those who are evil will have to be restrained. We do that in our own countries everywhere.

The Chinese philosopher, Lin Yutang, says in substance, in a recent article, that our moral attitudes the world over are the important factors, not what we know or what we have, but our ability to choose between right and wrong. This may be the basis on which we shall have to develop some of our future cooperation.

Our boys in Africa and in the Solomon Islands deal with natives who haven't yet had a chance to develop a very high type of civilization. These boys are going a step beyond their first contacts in Great Britain and Australia, and wide differences will develop, but the beginning of the development is in Great Britain.

If we can build on the good will which Great Britain has toward us at the moment (largely brought about because, in the trials through which the British have gone, the generosity of the American people has made them grateful) we will be beginning a new era in the world.

Generous, Not Sacrificial.

Over here, it is hard to understand just what certain things have meant to Great Britain, because while we have given money which has sent mobile canteens, ambulances, medical supplies, clothing, food, etc., in great quantities to Great Britain, we were only being generous, not sacrificial.

We have sent old clothes, but they were things we could do without. However, the people who received them over there could not do without them.

A woman in a London crowd, for instance, one day plucked at my sleeve and said, "My little girl would have been cold if it had not been for the warm clothes the children of America sent us."

The British people show their gratitude by wanting to do things for our American soldiers. They realize that our coming into the war is a great help to their own boys who have fought in all parts of the world for the past three years. But their gratitude goes deeper than that: it touches the lives of everyone in that group of islands.

It calls out a traditional feeling which I think is ingrained in the people of the United States and in the people of Great Britain—if we have received something, we want to make a return, at least in good will.

This is a basis on which I believe we can readily and permanently build.

Well, to be really effective, the United Nations will have to build among the people of all the nations an understanding such as is now growing between the people of Great Britain and the people of the United States.

It will be slow, but the building of a peaceful world is not something to be accomplished by the writing of a treaty. It takes time to work out the relationship of men and women, but if we hope for peace, it must be done. And I think a good

THE SHE-MARINES

From the halls of Montezuma To the shores of Tripoli We will fight our country's battles Any way the rules decree; Though we cannot leave the country In far places we'll be found— In the spirit that the ladies, When aroused, can toss around.

Oh, we can't get into battle— That is what the rules now say, But it wouldn't be surprising If we somehow found a way; We will do all we are asked to— We will help 'em everywhere In a way to make our buddies Feel that we are with 'em there.

The Marines are noted scrappers— This their slogan "Give 'em H—!" And the "She-Marines" will surely Have that quality as well; Oh, we can't do foreign duty— On this point the book is clear— But we'll have that certain something That will keep us pretty near.

WAACS and WAVES and SPARS . . . they're dandy! And we know they'll bravely score But Marines are legendary And they do a little more; Omph and wallop are traditions When the male ones stage a fuss And before this war is over They will say the same of us.

"First to fight!"—Well, now a lady Doesn't stress that point a lot, But the spirit may be catching When the Leathernecks get hot; Work behind the lines is scheduled— Foes we're not supposed to smack— But when Nell's a Devil-Doggie Who is gonna hold her back?

Play that "Balls of Montezuma," And we'll proudly take our place; (With a very little training We'll be singing it in bass); We're Marines—we have our papers.

We are in a conflict grave; If it helps we'll get a haircut— And we'll even get a shave!

Shoot the work and call us buddies! That's our plea to the Marines; They can always count on us— Even if behind the scenes; And when they get in there swinging They may find us at the bat; All the foe need to be below, "Girls, where did you get that hat?"

We've a uniform authentic With a scarf of flaming red And it helps provide the color— That will knock the Axis dead; We are not equipped with weapons In the strictest sense, that's true, But a woman is a woman— And she's bound to have a few!

Help your Grocer

Let's Get Behind Him and Make Rationing a Success—Start Now to

use more of the plentiful NON-RATIONED FOODS

THE man who runs your grocery store has his headaches these days. For months, in the face of shortages and lack of experienced help, he's been trying to carry on... trying to give you the kind of service you've always expected of him.

Now he has a brand new problem—point rationing. He has to collect the stamps from you as well as the cash.

It's a burden for him—sure—and for you. But he knows and you know that it's got to be done. It's the only fair way of making sure that everybody gets a fair share. That's our way of doing things.

So it's his job—and your job—everybody's job—to make point rationing work... as smoothly, as efficiently as possible. Traffic jams in food stores aren't going to help anybody.

Now there are a number of ways in which you can give this grocer of yours a real hand... in a good, neighborly American way. You can shop early in the day, early in the week. You can shop as infrequently as possible—once a week only, if you can manage. You can always make sure to have a shopping list, and to have your "point values" added up before you go to the store.

And you can help yourself as well as your grocer by using the plentiful, non-rationed foods as much as you can, instead of the scarce, rationed foods. Foods such as cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, home-cooked soups, home-canned fruits and vegetables are not rationed and they deserve an important place in your wartime meals.

Because cereals are one of these abundant unrationed foods, we here at the Kellogg factory in Battle Creek have been doing everything we possibly can to meet the unprecedented demand for our products. We're sending millions upon millions of packages of crisp Kellogg Cereals to the boys in our armed forces. We're packing Kration for troops in the front line of fighting. Even our machine shop is making gun parts! And we're short of help, too. There are 423 stars on the big service flag hanging in the lobby of the Kellogg building.

Other ways to help your Grocer...

1. Shop early in the day.
2. Shop early in the week.
3. Shop only once or twice a week.
4. Prepare a shopping list.
5. Add up total "point" values before going to the store.

But in spite of these wartime difficulties, we've doubled our efforts to be sure that we can supply Kellogg Cereals to the millions of American families who are depending on cereals more than ever.

Always famous for marvelous flavor, every Kellogg Cereal is made of WHOLE GRAIN or is restored to WHOLE GRAIN NUTRITIVE VALUES through the addition of thiamin (vitamin B1), niacin and iron. With milk alone, or with milk and fruit, a bowl of crisp, delicious Kellogg Cereal gives you vitamins, minerals, protein, food-energy in one dish!

And remember this about cereals in your daily meals. They're quick and easy to prepare. No cooking, no pans or skillets to clean up. Even the dishes are easier to wash.

Cereals save time—work—fuel—other foods. Used in hamburger, meat-loaves, croquettes, etc., they help you stretch your meat... and they make milk go farther, too.

Think of cereals as one of your best, most nutritious, non-rationed foods and think of Kellogg Cereals as the finest you can buy.

FROM O.P.A. CONSUMER INSTRUCTION SHEET

"EAT MORE CEREALS—There is an abundance of cereals and, as you know, they are mighty economical. They are nourishing and delicious—what's more, cereals can be used to stretch your rations when mixed with vegetables and fruits."

AN OBJECT LESSON

Advocates of peacetime laws to kill competition in retailing should now look about them. Competition has been definitely ended, as a war measure. Instead of trying to attract business, the average merchant has to discourage it in his attempt to comply with price regulations and other restrictions which became inevitable when the natural laws of supply and demand, and free competition, were suspended.

The new system has been cheerfully accepted because war made it necessary. Out of this necessity, we will gain valuable experience. We will have a practical example of how restricted competition immediately reacts on the consumer.

The effect would be the same from laws passed in peacetime to destroy competition, as it is from regulations in wartime, which eliminate competition.

Under peacetime competitive detailing, consumers were able to buy what they wanted, when they wanted it, at reasonable prices. Their standards of living rose year by year. The establishments in which they made their purchases, whether chain or independent operated, steadily became more attractive and sanitary. Service became better. These things the public came to take for granted without realizing that they would not have occurred but for the magic of wholesome competition which is the handmaiden of progress.

The war emergency should warn all of us against peacetime crippling of competition. When peace returns, the free competitive system should be restored. Frozen prices mean frozen progress—that is now being proven.

SAVING OUR SHIRT

For many years, "soak the rich" was the slogan for raising tax money. It was very misleading, but a vote-getter. Taxes were something for the guy who had three shirts, instead of one or two, to worry about.

So the three-shirt man was finally squeezed dry. Then the two-shirt man was put through the wringer.

Last year, the tax collector, for the first time, was forced to turn to the one-shirt man. Tax waste of peacetime had come home to roost in wartime.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, says that we face a "crisis in Federal taxation" and advocates prompt passage of a pay-as-you-go tax law. Millions of "first time" taxpayers find themselves faced with paying taxes on 1942 income, without much cash saved for that purpose. On top of that, taxes on 1943 income are already accumulating.

So far, the only definite solution that has been proposed is the so-called Ruml plan. Briefly stated, it would provide that taxes on 1942 personal incomes be disregarded and that the payments which we will all have to make at the new and higher rates during 1943 be considered as taxes on 1943 income rather than 1942 income. "No one would escape the payment of taxes," says Senator Clark. "The only difference would be that we would each be paying in 1943 on 1943 income, instead of paying in 1943 on 1942 income and waiting for 1944 to pay for the old dead horse of 1943."

Theoretically, the government would lose a year's taxes scattered over a period of 40 or 50 years as the present generation of taxpayers cease to be taxpayers. This would, in the opinion of the most responsible authorities on accountancy be far more than offset by the greater promptness and certainty of collection.

"Says Senator Clark: 'I urge every man and woman who is interested in this vital problem, to write his congressmen and senators expressing his view, whatever it may be.'"

FREE CHOICE MEANS PROGRESS

A basic principle of democracy is free choice. Significantly, extremists who urge adoption of broad compulsory health programs give scant attention to that basic principle.

Free choice guides every act in our daily lives. We can go to the church we choose, we can buy groceries from whom we please, we can choose the car in which we ride, we can say what we choose, we can choose the schools we wish to attend.

Whenever we abandon the principle of free choice, we hurt no one but ourselves. And that goes for medical service. Free choice of a doctor automatically encourages medical competence. The most qualified are the most patronized. As a result, every doctor is spurred on to achieve the reputation of being a good doctor. This incentive, or whatever you wish to call it, is the background of every doctor's training. It embodies more than mere financial success. Pride of accomplishment, the heart-warming feeling that people come to him because they believe in him, these are part of the incentive inspired by free choice which governs the career of the average doctor. The same inspiration has been responsible for the miraculous scientific discoveries that have come from research laboratories of American medicine.

THE FOOD PROBLEM

The president of a leading farm organization touched the crux of the food problem when he said: "There has been a failure on the food front. That failure can be traced to the failure of administrative agencies. Empty store shelves, empty meat counters, disruption of production and distribution, are the inevitable result. Now these same people express great concern over food shortages. They have not yet worked out with farm organizations a sound program based on the knowledge of farmers and their organizations."

Subsidies and laws will not create food. Only the farmers can do that, and they need manpower, machinery and stability of government policies which will encourage production instead of keeping it in a constant state of confusion.

ANTICIPATING AVIATION REQUIREMENTS

The Lea-Bailey bill to amend the civil aeronautics act, not only represents a continuation of the far-sighted policy of congress to promote further successful effort of the aviation industry in assisting the government in war work, but it also fosters peacetime development of aeronautics.

The current annual report of the civil aeronautics board attests the value of this aviation policy. It shows how, under the act, our air lines have been able to cooperate with the military services and continue to operate under private management, although their peacetime functions were subordinated to war needs.

When war was declared, our air carriers had available the equipment and personnel for transfer to direct military service. They had the organizations and plants capable of undertaking many operations other than the conduct of transportation, thereby relieving the military commands of time and effort necessary to provide such facilities. Both army and navy are utilizing the carriers' organizations to send supplies to every theater of war.

Congressional leaders recognize that the United States needs far-sighted aviation policies to maintain world leadership in air defense and commercial air service.

Commenting on the 412 feet of reports a manufacturer is required to fill out each year on one of scores of government forms, an investigating committee said, "horizontally this is not quite twice the length of a football field, but vertically it is considerably higher than the great pyramid of Egypt."

AAA Notes

LINCOLN—Abner K. Chestern, Burt county farmer and chairman of the Nebraska State AAA committee, today made the following statement:

"The attitude and the actions of the Congress on the eve of the 1943 planting season have created among farm people a feeling of confusion that threatens maximum wartime food production.

"If food production in 1943 is curtailed for any reason other than drought, the blood of blame will stain the hands of congress and the people who influence congress in the name of the so-called 'farm bloc.'

"I have no objection, and farmers generally have no objection, to continued debate on national agricultural policy for 1944. That is the function of congress. That is the way to determine policy in democracy. But it is too late to make a political football of farm production policy for 1943. The time is here to plant—not to play politics.

"Every phase of farm war production outlined by the Secretary of Agriculture is aimed at maximum production of the foods needed most in wartime. His price program is designed to encourage planting of critical crops and maximum use of corn and wheat for production of meat, milk, eggs and poultry. His administrative program is one which puts major responsibility upon farmers themselves, through their elected representatives in each community.

"Selfishness and sabotage creep out in many of the plans offered as alternatives. There appears to be a determined effort to maintain a profitable short staple cotton economy in a period when a bushel of soybeans, corn or peanuts means more to a fighter or worker than a shirt. There appears to be a determined effort to crack the price controls and unleash a flood of inflation that will float few and drown many.

"We're going to be short of food. Try as they will, farmers and their families cannot meet in full the bottomless demands that come from all over the world. But if we can have united action on the farm front and a sensible production policy that will encourage rather than confuse our people we can and will have production that will give America and our allies enough food to keep strong and aggressive for victory and the formation of the peace.

Inflation in food will create a sorry spectacle for American consumers. Millions will have points in their ration books they cannot use because they don't have enough dollars to match them. I know farmers, and consumers oppose such a situation.

"I do not favor a soft, long war. The thousands of farm men and women in Nebraska, who have sent boys to fight the Axis do not want a soft, long war. We want those boys to win and to come home as soon as possible. The future of free Nebraska, agriculture, in war and in peace to come, rests upon their shoulders."

Addresses A. A. Men

Frank Reed, AAA field man from Knox county, was in Wayne last Wednesday and addressed a meeting of community committeemen on the aspects of the farm program as it is now planned and the dangers which threaten the planned production. These committeemen in turn took this information home to their farmer neighbors. Mr. Knox also attended a meeting at Bell school Monday evening and talked to the farmers.

"Please take good care of your telephone"

Trips to repair telephones take tires and man-power. Also, in spite of development of substitutes, some copper and other critical materials must be used.

You save to speed victory when you safeguard your telephone in the following ways:

- * Keep your telephone cord straight. Twisting injures the wire.
- * Keep your telephone on a firm, safe support.
- * Keep both telephone and cord dry when cleaning or decorating.
- * Replace the receiver carefully. Banging it down may break it.

Your cooperation in preventing telephone casualties helps the war effort and will be greatly appreciated.

Fire in Booth At Co-Ed Theater Damages Machines

Fire, breaking out in the projection booth at the Co-Ed Theater about 9:30 o'clock Saturday evening, destroyed all the film in the booth and badly damaged the equipment. P. L. March, manager of both the Co-Ed and Gay theaters, says that he is unable as yet to estimate the amount of damage to the machinery. However, he has ascertained that he will be able to get replacements and the damage is practically all covered by insurance.

The cause of the fire is not known but it is thought that a splice in the film broke and the film piled up in front of the light and ignited from the heat. The flames jumped from one machine to another. Warren Noakes was in charge of the projection booth at the time. A friend, Earl Larson, was also there with him. The fire department extinguished the blaze before it had a chance to spread beyond the confines of the booth. The audience was notified of the fire and exited in orderly fashion.

Library Notes

From the Book-of-the-month Club News comes the following poem by Walt Whitman:
"Long, too long America,
Traveling roads all even and peaceful you'd learn'd from joys and prosperity only,
But now, ah now, to learn from crises of anguish, advancing, grappling with direst fate and recoiling not,
And now to conceive and show to the world what your children en masse really are..."

The last week of the Victory Book campaign was very successful. The final report is as follows: Cash $20. Fiction 68 volumes. Non-fiction 12 volumes.

Christopher Morely's new book "Thorofare" shows the public how versatile a writer he is. This is the story of Geoffrey Barton, an English boy who came to the United States, and his adventures of mind and feeling in the years until he became an American citizen. It is rather a long novel with a rich gallery of characters and an underlying seriousness of theme. Thorofare is the name of the little winding street that runs through an ancient English town. But it becomes more than that: it becomes a symbol of the westward instinct of the English-speaking race. It becomes a story true for most of us either in our own or in our parents' generation. Story hour for the children will be held at 2:30 Saturday afternoon.

Temperature Record Shows February 1943 Was Warmest in Years

The month of February was marked by much higher temperatures than any February for a number of years. There was not enough snow to record and roads were extra good. Records compiled by Chas. W. Long, official weather observer at Wakefield, show a mean maximum of 46.18 degrees in contrast to 31 degrees during February a year ago. The 1943 mean minimum was 17.72 in contrast to 13.80 for 1942. The thermometer reached 67 degrees February 21 as the highest temperature of the month. A year ago that day was also a nice one but the thermometer only reached 40 for the maximum for that month. Low temperature for the month last year was 10 below, with the mercury only falling to 4 below on February 14, this year.

Precipitation for 1942 from Jan. 1 to March 1 amounted to 1.14 inches; this year during the same period it amounte to .75.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS . . .
"How do you feel about this idea of stopping 'em from selling liquor anywhere near army camps, Judge?"
"I was just talking about that with Will down at the barber shop about ten minutes ago. Tell you what I told him, Ned. I say it's up to the Army to decide. Why should we walk in and tell the Army how to do its job . . . any more than I should tell you how to go about putting out a fire? And here's something that strikes me funny. All this worrying seems to be about the boys' conduct around the camps here in this country. You never hear a word of worrying about them drinking when they go abroad. Kind of queer, isn't it, Ned?"

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE STORY SO FAR: After a chance meeting and swift courtship, Will McPhail starts for Moose Bay, leaving Robin Dale to wonder how a career girl could be so completely swept off her feet. She knows little of Will, except that he is named Angus, a four-foot boy who hates women. Tired of the city and eager for adventure, Robin decides to take the next steamer up the St. Lawrence to Moose Bay. Driving to the port where she is to take the boat, she meets a strangely interesting man who tells her about salmon fishing. She nicknames him "the Salmon Man." On the road again, she comes face to face with another car.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

They stopped, almost touching. There was no chance to pass, either here on the trestle or along the narrow road in either direction, nearer than the spot where Robin had turned around. Just as Robin realized this, a man got carefully out of the other car. She recognized him by his shapeless hat. He was the Salmon Man. He came along the trestle to her side and said in a cold politeness:

He chuckled. "They shut down from midnight to one, to let the babies go to sleep."

A car came out along the dock and stopped near them, but no one got out. "More passengers?" she wondered.

Mr. Jenkins laughed. "I've seen four-five cars out here, a couple in each one, some nights." He said: "It's the sea air, I guess. Let's sit down. Cold? I've got a flask."

"No, really, thank you?" Robin told him. She wished desperately that someone would come. This was a lonesome place, with the foghorn blowing on Father Point, ha-rumphing so ominously; and this man so persistently friendly. She wished someone would come, and a taxi came bouncing out the long dock, the shafts of its headlights bobbing up and down. It stopped near them and the passenger alighted. It was too dark to see his face, but she recognized his hat. It was battered and old and shapeless, a hat unique and unmistakable. Robin knew it at once, knew him. He was the Salmon Man. She moved toward him gratefully.

er at the harbor mouth, were hidden behind a white wall. She laughed. "Mercy, there is now!" He said nothing; and she asked, making conversation: "Do they have many accidents here?"

It was a moment before he spoke. "They had the Empress of Ireland."

Robin had never heard of the Empress of Ireland. She said so; and he looked at her briefly. "It was before you were born," he decided. The fog was tight about them. "We lived here in Rimouski. I was a boy. The Empress was out there off Father Point with about fourteen hundred people aboard, in a fog like this, and a freighter ran into her."

"Let me take the wheel. I'll back you up to the turn around."

His tone was so polite it was almost profane. "Oh, I'll do it!" she told him jolly. "I'm sorry to be in the way!"

The Salmon Man said uncomfortably: "If I'd known there was another car up here, I wouldn't have come. You did that backing very well."

"Did she sink?"

"She sank in fifteen minutes," the Salmon Man said in his quiet tones. Robin had a curious feeling that he had forgotten she was here. "It was about four o'clock in the morning. The water where she sank was shallow enough so that sometimes at low tide when the light was right you could see the tips of her masts, down in the water. But after a few weeks she tipped on her side. You can't see the masts now."

"There must have been a lot of people drowned?" She felt naive and young and stupid and in the way.

His eyes touched hers. "Four hundred bodies came ashore between this dock and Father Point in one day," he said. "And others later. They were stacked in piles in the shed back along this dock. Trains came loaded with empty coffins and went back with every coffin full." Memories in him seemed suddenly to demand release in words. "Over a thousand bodies came ashore, within a few miles."

"Do you remember it?"

"Yes, I remember it."

She thought she could understand now that look in his eyes, so grave and stern and still. "It must have been terrible for you."

"Yes," he assented. "It was. My father and mother were aboard her. He added: "I found mother, myself. They never found father."

She wanted suddenly to take him in her arms. He was a little boy, running to and fro along this dreary shore, peering into dead faces, hurrying on, crying out at last a dreadful broken cry. Her eyes were streaming. The fog had thinned. They could see the blinker light at the harbor mouth; and the Salmon Man remarked:

She felt that was a great deal for him to say. He was nicer than she had thought. She left Madeleine next morning and reached Rimouski at first dark, tired and hot and dusty from the road. The steamer would stop at Quai Rimouski about midnight; so she went to the hotel to change and dine and rest; and about eleven o'clock in the evening she checked out and arranged with a garage to house her car. The young Frenchman in charge of the garage drove her out to Quai Rimouski to leave her there on the end of the dock with her baggage.

She walked to and fro, looking here and there. Two Norwegian vessels lay along the north side of the dock, one preparing to take on a jeekload of lumber, the other a cargo of coal. Except for the few men visible on their decks, the dock was deserted. A blinker light at the entrance to the harbor winked reassuringly; and the fog-bean was blowing at Father Point, four or five miles away. Robin wondered why, for there was no fog here where she stood, and she could see the light at Father Point flashing in monotonous rhythm; but the great horn ooted insistently. She sat on the stringpiece beside her luggage and wished it were light enough so that she could use a pencil; and a car came bumping out the long dock and deposited a man and his bags a few paces off. The car drove away; and Robin thought hopefully that here was company. She said, raising her voice to be heard above the pile drivers:

"That may be the White Queen coming now."

She saw a ship's lights through a blur of tears; but she did not try to speak. She felt him watching her, and she knew suddenly that he was a little surprised and approving because she did not cry out in pitying empty words how sorry she was for him. Robin said eagerly:

"You'll enjoy your trip, won't you?"

"Yes. My brother and I don't have much time together." He filled his pipe. He said: "We've been pretty close, since then." She knew what he meant by that final word. His tone was strangely gentle when he spoke of his brother. This quiet man had an eloquence in him, without effort. Robin liked him tremendously.

"Good evening. Going on the White Queen?"

"Sure," the man assented. He wore a checked suit which she did not particularly approve; but he seemed friendly. "I'm crossing to Moose Bay."

"Oh, so am I!"

He looked at her swiftly. "That is? Your menfolks there?"

She smiled happily. Will McPhail was certainly her menfolks, all of them; but not even Will knew she was coming, and it was certainly no affair of this man in the checked suit. "No, I'm just going to see the place," she said. "Are you working there?" Perhaps he knew Will.

He shook his head. "No, I'm going on down to Labrador. My name's Jenkins," he added enquiringly.

"How do you do?" She was amused at herself for feeling that she was safer if he did not know her name.

"That may be the White Queen coming now."

She saw a ship's lights through a blur of tears; but she did not try to speak. She felt him watching her, and she knew suddenly that he was a little surprised and approving because she did not cry out in pitying empty words how sorry she was for him. Robin said eagerly:

"You'll enjoy your trip, won't you?"

"Yes. My brother and I don't have much time together." He filled his pipe. He said: "We've been pretty close, since then." She knew what he meant by that final word. His tone was strangely gentle when he spoke of his brother. This quiet man had an eloquence in him, without effort. Robin liked him tremendously.

"You'll find Moose Bay quite a place," he told her. "Three thousand men working there, and no women at all except a few wives." He said approvingly: "A girl as pretty as you will own the town."

Robin had been told often enough that she was a pretty girl; but this was the first time she had ever been made uneasy by the telling. She decided to stand up, and did so; and she was relieved to find that she was almost as tall as he.

"But Labrador's way beyond Moose Bay," she said at random.

"Oh, sure. I'm picking up my own boat at Moose Bay, going down along the coast in that, selling canned goods."

"It must be interesting."

"It's wild country, all right." He offered her a cigarette. She declined it, and he lighted one himself. "I'll bet you'd like it," he said. "I've got a good boat, clean and roomy and dry. I always take a friend along."

"I expect it's lonely if you go by yourself," she agreed, and wished the White Queen would come, or something.

He said: "We might as well sit down."

He came along the trestle to her side.

"And last night, up the Madeleine. Remember?"

The Salmon Man did not speak, and Mr. Jenkins protested: "Now, sister, we were doing all right."

Robin said quickly: "But this gentleman and I are old friends, you see."

"He don't act it."

The Salmon Man said quietly: "Old friends, yes, of course." He said no more than that, but it seemed to be enough. Mr. Jenkins looked at him for a moment, appraisingly. Then he muttered something and moved away to the other side of the dock. The Salmon Man seemed uneasily disposed to leave Robin too, and she said, almost pleadingly:

"I'm afraid I'm a nuisance again. But—please stay. You did tell me about the salmon, remember?" And she asked: "You know a lot about salmon, don't you?"

"They're my business. I'm in the fisheries department, the Government."

"Oh, really?" She had to hold him somehow. "Are you going fishing now? You must be going on the White Queen?"

"Yes. But not fishing as you think of it. My brother and I are going along the North Shore and down the Newfoundland coast, tagging salmon."

"Tagging them? You mean, like ducks?"

"Yes, to get data on their migration."

"Oh! She looked toward the man in the checked suit. "He's going the same way. It must be a wonderful trip. Is your brother meeting you here?"

"No, he's at Moose Bay. Our boat is there."

"Just you two?"

"We have a cook and boatman."

Robin tried to think of other questions. The Salmon Man was hard to talk to. He was courteous, but his answers had each a cold finality, and completeness.

"Why does the foghorn keep blowing?" she wondered.

"There's fog in the river."

"Oh! Will that make the White Queen late?"

The Salmon Man seemed to resign himself to conversation. "They might have to anchor," he admitted. "There's too much traffic in the river for them to go blind through fog."

"But there's no fog here," she said, and as though to contradict her, mist came wreathing around them suddenly, damp and chill. The light of Father Point, and the blinkment. She exclaimed in an unreasonable relief: "Thank goodness they've stopped. That noise is terrible!"

He came along the trestle to her side.

"And last night, up the Madeleine. Remember?"

The Salmon Man did not speak, and Mr. Jenkins protested: "Now, sister, we were doing all right."

Robin said quickly: "But this gentleman and I are old friends, you see."

Then he muttered something and moved away to the other side of the dock. The Salmon Man seemed uneasily disposed to leave Robin too, and she said, almost pleadingly:

"I'm afraid I'm a nuisance again. But—please stay. You did tell me about the salmon, remember?" And she asked: "You know a lot about salmon, don't you?"

"They're my business. I'm in the fisheries department, the Government."

"Oh, really?" She had to hold him somehow. "Are you going fishing now? You must be going on the White Queen?"

"Yes. But not fishing as you think of it. My brother and I are going along the North Shore and down the Newfoundland coast, tagging salmon."

"Tagging them? You mean, like ducks?"

"Yes, to get data on their migration."

"Oh! She looked toward the man in the checked suit. "He's going the same way. It must be a wonderful trip. Is your brother meeting you here?"

"No, he's at Moose Bay. Our boat is there."

"Just you two?"

"We have a cook and boatman."

Robin tried to think of other questions. The Salmon Man was hard to talk to. He was courteous, but his answers had each a cold finality, and completeness.

"Why does the foghorn keep blowing?" she wondered.

"There's fog in the river."

"Oh! Will that make the White Queen late?"

The Salmon Man seemed to resign himself to conversation. "They might have to anchor," he admitted. "There's too much traffic in the river for them to go blind through fog."

"But there's no fog here," she said, and as though to contradict her, mist came wreathing around them suddenly, damp and chill. The light of Father Point, and the blink-

Robin said quickly: "But this gentleman and I are old friends, you see."

"He don't act it."

The Salmon Man said quietly: "Old friends, yes, of course." He said no more than that, but it seemed to be enough. Mr. Jenkins looked at him for a moment, appraisingly. ## Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

IN THE UPPER ROOM

LESSON TEXT—John 13:20-24; 14:1-6. GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Calvary and crucifixion were just ahead. Jesus gathered His disciples for a time of communion and instruction as they spent their last evening together. On the morrow would come betrayal, but now they and their Lord were together in the upper room.

But even here strife and dissension had apparently come in. There was probably some difference of opinion as to who should have the place of honor. To teach them the virtue of humility Jesus gave them an example, after which He continued with the precious counsel and prayer which are found in John 14 to 17.

Our lesson presents three things which our Lord gave to His disciples and to us (see John 17:20).

I. His Example—"Do as I Have Done" (13:12-20).

The act of Jesus in washing the disciples' feet placed Him, their Lord and Teacher, on the level of the most menial servant. It was an astonishing thing that He did, lowering Himself below their level to serve them.

His application of the object lesson was equally startling. "Ye call me Teacher and Lord, and ye say well," said He. Then as learners and servants He required of them the humility which would make them eager to do lowly service in His name.

There are more than enough folk who are willing to do the nice, pleasant things in the church, where they will be given recognition and praise. All too scarce are those Christlike folk who will serve in the hidden places where darkness, suffering, disease and sin make the natural man recoil in distress or fear.

II. His Assurance—"If I Go I Will Come Again" (14:1-3).

Following His resurrection Jesus was to go to the Father. He wanted them to be prepared for that time by making known to them the fact of His coming again. In that day His own shall be received unto Himself to abide with Him forever.

The second coming of Christ is not a strange doctrine held by little groups of people who are riding a theological hobby. It is one of the most blessed truths of Scripture. The hope of the Christian—yes, the only real hope of this disordered world—is the coming of Christ to reign. The New Testament is full of plain and helpful teaching on this subject.

While we await His coming, then, is there any encouragement for us as the burdens bear down and the way seems long? Yes, He says: "Let not your heart be troubled" (v. 1). There is little question that this passage has comforted more people than any other word in Scripture.

Countless bewildered and broken souls in all lands and times have here found the steady assurance of the one who has the power to give them rest and comfort.

There is good foundation for their composure of heart in a troubled world. They believe in God, and in Christ, who is one with the Father. Here is real security—infinite superiority to aught the world can give.

Then at the end of the road are the eternal dwelling places. What they are like is sufficiently revealed in the fact that they are in the Father's house. How shall we reach them? That is our last point. We have

III. His Guidance—"I Am the Way" (vv. 4-6).

To Christ's declaration that they knew the way, Thomas responded with a request for a definite statement. He wanted to be sure, and Christ responded by reminding him that He, their Lord, is the "way, the truth, and the life." Surely there could be no more complete provision for the guidance of the heavenly pilgrim.

NO SEWING machine should be idle today. No matter if yours is not the newest model, keep it in good repair and include it in your decorating scheme. This sketch shows how one was fitted into a living room to look very smart and to do extra duty as a table.

Plywood or composition board may be used for the removable top, (see sketch). The top cover is of blue felt with a scalloped band stitched around it. This is quick and easy to do as it is not necessary to finish raw edges of felt. The full skirt is made of the best part of old sheets dyed a soft ecru tone. This is sewn to the seam allowance of the felt and all is tacked to the back of the removable top so that it may be removed easily. A pair of kitchen stools are painted cream color and topped with blue felt for lamp stands. Scalloped felt also trims the lamp shades and the cover of an old side chair to match the table.

Victor Herbert could write two scores at the same time, turning from one to the other, as they were spread out before him. He could also, between afternoon and evening performances, tear off an orchestral composition and have it rehearsed well enough to be played at the evening performance.

Weekly Farm Review

By WALTER R. HARDEE
Wayne Co. Extension Agent

Extension circular, "Control Cattle Grubs a $50,000,000 Pest" No. 1527 is available at the local county extension office. Local reports, states County Agent Walter R. Hardee, indicate that the southern feeder cattle fed in Wayne County are infested with many grubs. These cattle should be treated, if possible, to improve the quality of the hides for leather and to prevent them spreading the grubs to local stock cattle. Circular No. 1526, "Control of Cattle Lice" may also be obtained at the county agent's office.

A series of meetings will be held in Wayne county soon for neighborhood leaders, on food production. The new 1943 4-H club programs will be discussed. The production problems as related to the general farm will also be given some attention, as well as, women's project club work and birdweed eradication. County Agent Walter R. Hardee will be assisted by a state extension agent in the first few meetings.

About 50 farmers attended the Farm Machinery Clinic last Tuesday at Winside by the County Extension Service. Carlton Zink, extension engineer, conducted the meeting. Attention was given to implement care and repair. Labor saving equipment was discussed and shown in pictures. Zink also exhibited some haying equipment that can be built on the farm or built from other farm equipment.

Wayne County Agricultural Agent Walter R. Hardee will talk on the radio station WJAG, Norfolk, this Friday at 1:15 p. m. Hardee will discuss briefly some of the County Extension Service activities and other activities in which the service cooperates.

The Wayne County Farm Bureau met Tuesday night to organize for the year. Mrs. Oliver Klesau is a new member on the board for 1943. All other members were re-elected.

The new safety program in Nebraska 4-H Club work offers a real opportunity for organizing more Keep Well 4-H clubs, it was said this week by Assistant State 4-H Club Leader Dorothea Follmer. Every type of 4-H club might well have a safety and fire prevention program, but the plan for a Keep Well Club includes a complete set of subject matter material for use in carrying on the work. Information on the Keep Well club can be obtained from the county extension office or the County 4-H Club chairman, Mrs. Basil Osburn.
