Library Notes.

The library was first opened to the public February 18. Since that time three hundred fifty-two books have been loaned.

At the close of Saturday March 21 one hundred and fifty-seven persons had enrolled readers of the Wayne Public Library.

So many encouraging things have been said concerning the interest the children are manifesting in this movement, that the committee feel amply repaid for the work they have done.

The committee find they have not enough books in the juvenile department to fully supply the demand. A list of suitable books is being prepared to be submitted to the executive board at their next meeting when this need will be fully met.

Many do not seem to know who are entitled to the advantages of this library. To answer this question read the following rules and regulations:

1. Persons are permitted but one book at a time.
2. The book must be returned within 2 weeks when it can be withdrawn again for one week.
3. Keeping a book longer than two weeks without renewing it, imposes a fine of 2 cents per day.
4. If any book is lost or unduly injured the person holding it shall pay to the librarian enough to replace the book.
5. No person having incurred a fine shall be permitted to take any book from the library until such fine is paid.
6. Any person under sixteen must have application card signed by parent or guardian.
7. A non-resident of Wayne county must have application card signed by a responsible person and pay a fee of five cents.

About the one thing necessary next to the "know how" in making bread, and she will answer "kneading." Ransack the world and gather together the best flour, the best yeast, the best water and the best of every ingredient that goes to make up the best bread recipe known to woman kind, mix them together in a hap-hazard way and with only slight kneading and even a tramp will refuse it with scorn. On the other hand get the best ingredients, mix them in the proper proportions, knead them thoroughly and you are certain of having the kind of bread that mother used to make. The best ingredients and best recipe or formula are a necessity in making mixed paint as in making bread. Thorough mixing or grinding is as necessary to mix good paint as kneading to make good bread. In both cases there must be kneading or grinding and mixing until every article of the original ingredients has become part of the harmonious whole. It takes muscle and a good deal of it to thoroughly knead bread. In exactly the same way Heath & Milligan's best prepared paint is made; it is properly ground and mixed and it will spread evenly and smoothly and will not chalk or peel. Sample shades at

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF
"ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

What did it all mean? If Mary Holland were not to be trusted, if this strange girl had for years deceived him, if his mother's warning were after all correct, what was to be done at the eleventh hour, when he was in great trouble? The door opened, and Mary Holland came into the room.

"You sent for me?" she said.

"Yes," he said, "in misery and fear I sent for you. Sit down, please," he said, "and anxious to ask you many questions."

The old parlor which Sarah Easthall had perceived stole to Sarah's face as Reuben spoke, but she took the chair which he had indicated, and which was at a little distance from the couch, and sat down facing him.

"Though we have not seen a great deal of each other in our lives, Mary," he began, kindly and earnestly, "still it is through you that great changes have occurred—that I have lost my father's love, and home, and fortune."

"Yes," said Mary sadly, "that is true."

"I lost the three without losing confidence in you. As I learned to respect you, so I began to think of the possibility of many past mistakes on my side and my mother's. Of late days I have considered you the friend of all in this house."

"I have done my best to be the friend," she answered.

"Last night, and for the first time in my life, a suspicion seized me. I hardly know what it was. It came again to-day, but that it came again to-day, strengthened by your words. You read this letter? Are you aware of its purpose?"

"No, save that it was written in my presence by Captain Peterson. Dave—he does he refer to me in that?—he cried, with the color mounting to her cheeks for a moment, and then dying away into the old gray tint."

"By your work. He is as silent respecting the past relations between you as you have always been."

"You know, then?" she said, in dismay.

"I know that you and he were confiding together in the garden last night; that there is a secret between you which I do not share, and which you have made no effort to reveal; and I believe that man knows where Sarah Easthall is, and is in all respects a villain. Tell me what you know of him, and when you knew him first."

"I cannot," she said in a low voice.

"He is at the bottom of a terrible mystery; he has brought grief to me; he is linked with Thomas Easthall; and the peace of this house, and you will not give me one clue to his life."

"I know him," she said, "I know Reuben. He is a man of great energy, and I know him now. It is more than my life's worth to attempt it. I could not explain to Sarah Easthall; I cannot explain to you at this time. I can only say that I am a woman grievously misunderstood."

"Miss Holland," said Reuben, "my own sorry, but I cannot trust any more in this house."

She did not speak again. She looked at him steadily for a few moments, and then went away, and the stairs to her own room, at the end of the corridor, and it was some hours before she was seen again in that house. It was nearly midday when, dressed as for a journey, she reappeared in the corridor and faced Hartley, still at her old post, a woman forever on guard.

"You are a trusty servant, Hartley," she said, as she advanced; "but you must be extra vigilant, extra-straight, and clever, and cunning, while I am away."

"Are you going?" at this time, Miss Holland?" exclaimed Hartley, in surprise.

"Yes—for a little while. I will write to Miss Sarah by next post."

"To Miss Easthall?" exclaimed Hartley.

"Meanwhile listen at this door—you are good at listening, he believed."

"Oh, madam!—I—what makes you say that?"

"All is mystery in this house, and I set you on the watch for all of us—I have seemed part of the mystery, too. It was your place to warn one who will soon be rightful master here. But listen now to me."

"I do not understand, madam."

"On the brink of many strange confessions, that poor woman lies in death security. It has been our mission more than once to keep the truth from killing her, and heaven will pardon the fiction we have woven round her life, as I pray that heaven will pardon me."

Mary went swiftly down the stairs, and on of the house wherein she had spent nearly six years of her life, winning no man's love, or woman's gratitude.

CHAPTER XXI.

Sedge Hill was more desolate after Mary Holland had departed. Though Miss Holland knew it not, she had been the ruling agent of that house, for good or for a longer period than that from which the opening of the mystery had forlorn little woman, set far away under suspicion by an adverse fate beyond her power to resist, she was still to be missed when she had passed from the home into which Simon Culwick's charity had installed her.

The news reached Thomas Easthall when he was at his study, and he ran into the picture gallery after lunch and for it, not before. It was strange, and a small amount of respect he had gained from the servants during his stay, and with what distrust he was regarded. In response to one or two questions, the news was elicited from the man servant that Miss Holland had left Sedge Hill for good.

"And a good job, too," said Thomas Easthall frankly and inelegantly; "what did the old gal want with her about the place? It's full enough now of people who've no business here, although they're where they are—where I shall have."

"The young man?"

"The young hump?" the young parrot screamed Thomas Easthall with unnecessary violence; "you shut up about the young man, or you'll go next, if I have anything to do with this house—what I may have, which I shall have, mind you—though everybody treats me bad here."

Thomas Easthall consumed his lunch with difficulty. He had no appetite, but it was necessary to keep himself up, but the captain had said, and his life he had believed in Captain Peterson. He fell asleep by his meal, and when he woke up he stared vacantly round, and fought hard to recollect where he was, and how long he had sat huddled in the armchair, an angular distortion in his comfortable number.

It was night, and the huge room was full of darkness, which had crept upon Sedge Hill before its time, or he had slept long and late, and all that unsettled house had forgotten his existence, were his first ideas when he began to remember that he was in the picture gallery which Simon Culwick had built. What a heavy sleep he must have been, for he sure? He stood up, and tried to pierce through the darkness, and a sudden chill seized upon his veins, and turned him sick as he fancied that he might have woken up blind like his grandmother! Why not?—it was in the family—and all before him was awfully black and thick and impenetrable. It was raining outside, for that accounted for the hissing in his ears which he had awakened with, and which he had thought was his brain.

Finally he groped his way toward the door, keeping his hand on the wall, or the varnished surfaces of the paintings with which the wall was hung. He had made a mistake, for he would see, Grandmother Easthall, and tell her the truth, and more than the truth if it were possible. He was being imposed upon. People of no principle had taken advantage of his slumbers, and were sowing his nearest and dearest relation against him. Reuben Culwick was at the head of affairs, and Reuben was a villain!

Reuben had turned upon him, and brought him no dinner, and left him in the dark. He came to a full stop, and fell against the pictures, scratching them with his trembling hands, in his alarm; for the door behind him in the distance—the side door leading away from the picture gallery—was open, and he was looking towards a fitful gleam of light which narrowed and then passed away. In that fleeting moment he had seen enough to scare a stronger nerve than his—for a white figure had glided into the chamber, and was advancing toward him, he was sure. He remained silent and trembling till the running of garments assured him that something was approaching him, with noiseless steps, that reminded him of the ghost in the "Castle Specter," which he had seen once from the gallery of a theater. He made a swift plunge for the door in his horror.

It was his sister's spirit, he was sure—she had been so kind to those from whose clutches he had made no effort to save her—and she had come for him. His last hour had arrived, and it was all over with his dreams of glory.

"Tom Easthall," said a sharp voice in his ears, "are you here? Why don't you speak to me?"

"Grandmother," he ejaculated, "is it you that?"

"Come here and sit down—we can talk best in the dark, and I want to talk to you."

"I'd rather have a light, thank you," said Tom, who still had his suspicions that all was not right. He found his way to the principal door, and opened it, being in a stream of light from the corridor, and he looked back at his grandmother, who was standing by the chair which he had quitted, a strange phantom enough in her white night dress, and with a counterpane wrapped round her torso-fashion, and trailing on the ground behind her.

"What's the matter?" said Tom irresolutely; "ain't you well? What have you come downstairs for, such a night as this?"

"I can't rest. There's something wrong, Tom. I'm unhappy. They're all—yourself with the rest of 'em—keeping something from me. Where's Sarah?—oh! where's my Sally?—tell me."

"Wait a moment—I'll tell you everything."

An idea had seized him at last. The opportunity which he thought that he missed had come to him in this manner. There was no time to lose.

"Sally's run away," he said.

"Eh—what?" shrieked Mrs. Easthall, "run away—from me?"

"Yes—that's it," asserted Tom, his own father in law's statement as his grandmother put implicit faith in every word he uttered.

"Run away—forever, do you mean?" exclaimed Mrs. Easthall, in her highest key.

"Yes, forever."

"Ah! don't say any more," said the old woman, piteously; "I'll try and die now, Tom. I don't want to live an hour longer. I was always so fond of Sally. Tom?"

"Yes—so was I," he explained; "but if she don't deserve our love, what's the use of it? I've been out all day, but I'm getting more composed like. Don't think that you see what she expects, please—can't you see it all?"

The hands that were muffled in the counterpane were brought down with their covering from the face, which showed harder and sterner now, and looked so like her brother Simon's that any one acquainted with the late owner might have thought that he had come back in the flesh.

"Ah, yes; I'm beginning to find out what a wicked and ungrateful world it is, Tom," she said.

"That's right. Cheer up, and look about you."

"She and that Reuben planned this, then? They've gone away together, ain't they—gone without a word?"

Thomas Easthall hesitated in his reply. He would have been extremely glad to offer that as a solution to the mystery, and turn the tables against Reuben Culwick and his sister, but Reuben might come back at any moment and defeat his machinations.

"No, they ain't gone," he replied; "it's Sarah and Mrs. Easthall's high note, rung out again with startling shrillness, and vibrated through the room."

"They planned to go away. Sally was to get you to make a will in her favor, but to pretend to be fond of Reuben Culwick all the while, and then she was to steal off, and the Captain was to get away in the morning, as he did leaving a line or two to me, which I found on the table in my room."

"It matters a great deal to me and my prospects—that's all."

"Yes—yes; but I shan't forget you. Why, I can make another will at once, if you will help me."

"I'm not at a good hand at writing, but I don't mind trying," said her willing grandson.

"Yes—yes; but there's Reuben, too. He has been served terrible bad. Where is he?"

"He's looking for her. He don't know yet of the Captain's letter to me. He hasn't been home all day. He thinks something's happened to Sally."

"I'll wait till he comes back, Tom. He writes a will like any lawyer."

"He said—he left word that he wasn't sure of coming back at all. If you could let me write out a few lines. I have got a form here—handy, too, and that's singular, ain't it?"

"Very singular, as I say, too—a merciful dispensation like; why not a few lines now, if you've left everything to Sally?"

"Very well. Write me out a line or two, and then call in witness as Reuben did, and then let me see the will—letting to that ungrateful girl, to begin with—and half to yourself—you mustn't forget yourself, Tom."

"I'll neither of your own faults nor those of others."

"Thankee, I won't," said Tom, approaching the table.

He took a printed form from his pocket, and began writing in great haste, blotting and smearing as he went, being chiefly with his pen, and mostly of hand that day. He and the Captain, prepared for business, had brought down a form of will, praying for a chance like this, and lo! it had come in an hour of such a nature. It didn't look like a will, but it would stand its ground, he hoped, being a natural sort of testament in its way, and leaving all things fair and square.

The old woman was standing by his side, with two cold hands pressing heavily upon his shoulder, and—great earnestly—the gray eyes were unseeing and staring at him!

"Don't—go on—with it," she whispered. "Sally wouldn't—wouldn't—go away—forever!"

"I tell you—"

"I tell you that—you—!"

She turned, as if to totter feebly to her chair again, and he sprang up with a shout of horror as she fell back heavily. "Grandmother!" she cried.

"Tell my dear Sally—that I—"

"I'll write you a letter, and I'll take a paper shade upon myself from that hour, Grandmother Easthall was dead!"

SHALL WE FLY BY 1904?

THE United States Commissioner of Patents declares that in his opinion one of the chief problems in progress to be dealt with in the coming years is aerial navigation. Experience, he asserts, has demonstrated its practicability, and he ventures the prediction that when the difficulties that stand in the way are overcome, American brains will do the work.

This assumption may be rather far-fetched, for it must be confessed that the greatest advance made in this direction has not been scored by a citizen of the United States, but by a young Brazilian, Santos-Dumont. But the head of the Patent Office doubtless has in mind the numerous applications for patents for flying devices which have been made by Yankee inventors, and it may be that sooner or later, the nation which has done so much to forward useful invention will succeed in solving this problem also.

At any rate, a generation which has just seen trans-Atlantic messages exchanged without the medium of wires should not be unduly skeptical regarding future achievements. Whether really useful flying machines are desired by Americans or foreigners is a minor matter. The possibility that within the next twelve months some material advance may be made toward their construction is one of the phases which promises to add to the interest of life during that period.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

WHEN SHOULD A MAN MARRY?

NOT. When should a young man or an old man or a middle-aged man or any astronomical edition of man marry? Marriage presumes youth. The bride particularly is never old. The groom may have white hair, but, bless your soul, it's the widow under the shawl that tells the season. The widower with six children who is going to marry the widow with five may seem mentally superannuated, but who can say. Matrimony despises calendars and age distinctions. All people about to marry are young—and that ends the first part of the discussion.

Now the second part is more prosaic. General Corbin still pleads that army officers should not marry too early. Love, he intimates, cannot thrive on a lieutenant's pay. A bishop stands before a conference in the South and says preachers should avoid early marriages. In four recent articles we have read rich men advise the juniors to go slow on the matrimonial market. So it runs. Some of these advice-givers married early, and when brought to book by that fact, think they save themselves by declaring that conditions nowadays are different. But it is a million to one that if they had it to do over again under modern conditions they would be ahead of their first records. When should a man marry? About half-past after he falls in love.—Baltimore Herald.

THE PROPER USE OF LEISURE.

TIME, as somebody has said, is the stuff that life is made of, and we ought to keep a strict account of how we spend it. The evening is the leisure time of most men, and leisure should not be wasted in idleness, but should be turned to use. Every man and woman ought to read some good book for an hour or two each day. Having resolved to do this, a man ought to make it a solemn duty, as if it were a religious office, to stick to his resolution.

SHE KNOWS HISTORY.

How an Indiana Girl Surprised a Young Man in Chicago.

At the athletic club the other night this was George Ade's contribution to the stories that went around the table:

"Dear papa struck a gas well down on the Indiana farm," said he, "and Maybelle and mother came to Chicago to see life. The first night dear Maybelle went into society she made good with a young fellow who was home from college for the holidays. His father owned four or five banks and a few railroads, and he was the catch of the season. He had his name down on Maybelle's dance card so often that all the other girls began to talk about her. About the time they began to call for carriages Archibald said he wanted to call at her hotel the following night."

"I must ask mamma first," said she. Mamma said she was foolish—to grab him and hold him tight. Why mamma had sized him up as a catch. Maybelle had a scheme, though, and told him he mustn't call for two days.

"Then Maybelle hunted up her dearest Indiana friend, and asked what she ought to do to make herself solid with Archibald. Maybelle was a little shy on polite conversation and she wanted pointers.

"He's a college man, and I must be careful what I talk about," she declared.

"History is always a good topic," said her friend. "Put in all your time from now until to-morrow night reading some history. English history is a cinch."

"Maybelle got an English history and never let loose of it for two days and was most of both nights, and by the time Archibald was due she could tell the date of everything from the reign of Alfred the Great to the Boer war and back again.

"Well, Mr. Archibald called. Maybelle was a trifle disappointed when, instead of putting on a lot of dog, he seized her hand and shook it like any ordinary person, without assuming the expected abstracted air and running his fingers through his hair. In fact, he started right in giving Maybelle her own bunch of talk about what a pretty dress she had on, and how he liked her dancing, and regretted that she did not have him call the previous night as well, and a lot of the regular line that she would have enjoyed down home.

"But Maybelle had not read English history without an object, and she never boded even when the strange hold got Archibald's conversation for a minute. But Archibald got his second wind pretty quick and continued the hot air until suddenly he was all in."

"Then came Maybelle's chance. She had listened for twelve and a half minutes to Archibald's commonplace, and now she was going to show him that she knew a thing or two. So in the middle of a painful silence she gazed conqueringly at Archibald and exclaimed:

"Wasn't that awful about Mary, Queen of Scots?"

"Archibald started, stared, and stammered:

"Why! What about her?"

"My goodness! Didn't you know that the poor thing had her head cut off?" asked Maybelle proudly.

THE SHOE RAG IN LONDON.

The Only Bit of Yankee Shoe-Shining Methods Introduced There Yet.

New Yorkers who go to London are always surprised at the elementary methods of the street bootblacks who still carry the traditional box and expect their patrons to lean against a wall until their shoes are cleaned. This kind has practically disappeared in New York, but London is still ignorant of any better.

But progress is not altogether unknown among the London bootblacks, and they have recently taken to what is regarded as an American innovation. This is the rag with which the final polish is given to shoes. Only the most enterprising of the boys have taken to this improvement, which they proudly describe as an importation from America.

"I have often thought that there would be ample return for any man with the courage to establish bootblack rooms in London," said a New Yorker, who has just returned to this country, "for at present there are no such conveniences to be enjoyed there. Situated in the right part of London, a bootblack room, in my opinion, would make a fortune for its proprietor."

"To-day the average Londoner who has been brought up with the idea of having his shoes cleaned by the chambermaid at home or a small boy in the street, has no conception of the comfort of the American bootblackening methods."—New York Sun.

Roasting Coffee.

In Norway, where superb coffee is made, a bit of butter is added to the beans while they are roasting in the covered shovel used there for that purpose. In France, as well, a piece of butter the size of a walnut is put with three pounds of coffee beans, and also a dessertspoonful of powdered sugar. This brings out both flavor and scent, and, moreover, gives the slight caramel taste which will be remembered as a pleasing part of French coffee.

Despite laws against adulteration, "olive oil" is secured from the cotton plant, marmalade from the turnip, and cherry jelly from the foot of a calf.

"He said—he left word that he wasn't sure of coming back at all. If you could let me write out a few lines. I have got a form here—handy, too, and that's singular, ain't it?"

"Very singular, as I say, too—a merciful dispensation like; why not a few lines now, if you've left everything to Sally?"

"Very well. Write me out a line or two, and then call in witness as Reuben did, and then let me see the will—letting to that ungrateful girl, to begin with—and half to yourself—you mustn't forget yourself, Tom."

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

SHALL WE FLY BY 1904?

THE United States Commissioner of Patents declares that in his opinion one of the chief problems in progress to be dealt with in the coming years is aerial navigation. Experience, he asserts, has demonstrated its practicability, and he ventures the prediction that when the difficulties that stand in the way are overcome, American brains will do the work.

This assumption may be rather far-fetched, for it must be confessed that the greatest advance made in this direction has not been scored by a citizen of the United States, but by a young Brazilian, Santos-Dumont. But the head of the Patent Office doubtless has in mind the numerous applications for patents for flying devices which have been made by Yankee inventors, and it may be that sooner or later, the nation which has done so much to forward useful invention will succeed in solving this problem also.

At any rate, a generation which has just seen trans-Atlantic messages exchanged without the medium of wires should not be unduly skeptical regarding future achievements. Whether really useful flying machines are desired by Americans or foreigners is a minor matter. The possibility that within the next twelve months some material advance may be made toward their construction is one of the phases which promises to add to the interest of life during that period.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

WHEN SHOULD A MAN MARRY?

NOT. When should a young man or an old man or a middle-aged man or any astronomical edition of man marry? Marriage presumes youth. The bride particularly is never old. The groom may have white hair, but, bless your soul, it's the widow under the shawl that tells the season. The widower with six children who is going to marry the widow with five may seem mentally superannuated, but who can say. Matrimony despises calendars and age distinctions. All people about to marry are young—and that ends the first part of the discussion.

Now the second part is more prosaic. General Corbin still pleads that army officers should not marry too early. Love, he intimates, cannot thrive on a lieutenant's pay. A bishop stands before a conference in the South and says preachers should avoid early marriages. In four recent articles we have read rich men advise the juniors to go slow on the matrimonial market. So it runs. Some of these advice-givers married early, and when brought to book by that fact, think they save themselves by declaring that conditions nowadays are different. But it is a million to one that if they had it to do over again under modern conditions they would be ahead of their first records. When should a man marry? About half-past after he falls in love.—Baltimore Herald.

THE PROPER USE OF LEISURE.

TIME, as somebody has said, is the stuff that life is made of, and we ought to keep a strict account of how we spend it. The evening is the leisure time of most men, and leisure should not be wasted in idleness, but should be turned to use. Every man and woman ought to read some good book for an hour or two each day. Having resolved to do this, a man ought to make it a solemn duty, as if it were a religious office, to stick to his resolution.

SHE KNOWS HISTORY.

How an Indiana Girl Surprised a Young Man in Chicago.

At the athletic club the other night this was George Ade's contribution to the stories that went around the table:

"Dear papa struck a gas well down on the Indiana farm," said he, "and Maybelle and mother came to Chicago to see life. The first night dear Maybelle went into society she made good with a young fellow who was home from college for the holidays. His father owned four or five banks and a few railroads, and he was the catch of the season. He had his name down on Maybelle's dance card so often that all the other girls began to talk about her. About the time they began to call for carriages Archibald said he wanted to call at her hotel the following night."

"I must ask mamma first," said she. Mamma said she was foolish—to grab him and hold him tight. Why mamma had sized him up as a catch. Maybelle had a scheme, though, and told him he mustn't call for two days.

Co-Education.

THE University of Chicago will hardly regret its decision to separate the sexes in their pursuit of their studies. They have hitherto mingled in this great Western institution of learning, but with Jan. 1 the "segregation" system went into operation, and women students henceforth will be guaranteed freedom to enjoy all the privileges of the university. The new plan will, it is said, permit co-instruction only in those courses offered to junior college students for which the registration is not sufficiently large to warrant division on an economical basis. For example, at the present time one-third of all the courses offered to junior college students, roughly speaking, will be offered to men, one-third to women, and one-third will be open to both men and women. As students increase, the number of courses retained as co-instruction will be diminished. The plan makes necessary the provision of separate classrooms and laboratories, and implies that officers of instruction shall divide their time with approximate equality between men and women. This seems like a sensible reform. Co-instruction is all right, probably, in kindergartens and primary academies, but when young men and women have attained the age and the habit of thought of university students it looks like an axiomatic proposition that each sex will give the curriculum better attention when the other sex is not around.—Pittsburg Press.

The Risks of Shaving.

IN spite of the fact that those who use the razor frequently cut themselves yet it is rarely that anything more serious than a cut follows, the slight wound generally healing quickly, and the risk of septicæmia arising in this way would seem to be almost nil. In the majority of cases therefore it is clear that the razor blade must be bacteriologically clean—i. e., free from septic matter—which may be attributed to the fact that probably it is dipped into hot or sterilized water before its use, or else that the soap lather is antiseptic. The latter explanation seems the more probable of the two. The amount of soap rubbed on the skin is considerable if the shaving is to be in any degree comfortable, and soap has considerable antiseptic powder, a six per cent solution being sufficient to destroy the typhoid bacillus. . . . In a word, soap in the operation of shaving not only facilitates the process but plays the same valuable role when the shaver is unlucky enough to cut himself as does the antiseptic in surgery.—London Lancet.

THE PLANTATION MULE.

He is Sagacious and Quick-Witted in Many Respects.

"The plantation mule has a curious and interesting way of calling out the time of day," said a man from Mississippi to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and with men who have spent any considerable length of time on a big plantation in any section of this country south of Mason and Dixon's line I suppose the observation is very common. Mules are wonderfully sagacious and quick-witted in some respects. They are particularly apt in learning things which have to do with bodily comfort; such things, for instance, as relates to feed time, watering time, and so forth. But the particular thing I had in mind was the habit of mules along about turning in time at the noon hour, and in the evening. They have a way of telling the time, and when more than one mule is to be found in the field, they have a way of calling out to each other. They bray at each other. One curious fact in connection with the habit is that they are never behind time with their braying. At the noon hour they never wait until the time for the dinner hour to sound. They call out to each other, and in a short while you will be certain to hear the horn blow. As a rule they are only a few minutes ahead of time with their braying, which shows how accurately they reason with respect to the time of the day. This habit furnishes a part of the music of the big plantation, and it may be said that the mule is the leader of the farm orchestra, for the negroes invariably follow the first call of the mule with a halloo peculiar to the negro farm hand, and the sound is taken up again and again until every mule and every negro on the place has joined in the strange orchestration. You can imagine what this means on a plantation containing thousands of acres, and where many mules and many negroes are scattered over a vast cultivated plateau. It is an inspiring sort of thing to the man not familiar with plantation life, but a man long accustomed to it becomes dead to the sounds, and scarcely notices them. The point I had in mind, however, was the shrewdness, and good sound sense of the mule with respect to matters immediately concerning his welfare and comfort. He is a wonder in some respects and is not to be judged by the dullness of his appearance."

STARCH HAS A HISTORY.

First Made in Flanders and Invaded England in Elizabeth's Time.

"A package of starch?" asked the intelligent and learned grover, and as he wrapped the package up he talked. "Starch originated," he said, "in Flanders. It was introduced into England with the big ruff in the time of Queen Elizabeth. It was like our starch of to-day, except that it was made in colors—red, yellow, green, blue. The effect of this was to tint delicately the white linen to which the starch might be applied."

"Before Queen Elizabeth's time ruffles and ruffs were made of fine Holland, which required no stiffening. Then, the ruffs of cambric came, and Nothing should be permitted to interfere with his reading. If, on any day, he must be otherwise employed during his reading hour, let him make it up at some other time in the same day. And if he cannot read the full time to-day, let him make up for it to-morrow. Perseverance will make reading a habit and a pleasure. The keenest pleasures of life are drawn from books, and a man that has the reading habit would rather have it than fifty thousand dollars. . . . The expression "killing time" is abhorrent. Why should we wish to kill time? Time is given us for a purpose. We ought to make the most of it. The man who says he has nothing to do is ignorant or negligent of his duty to himself—the duty of making himself a better, wiser, broader-minded man day by day. Killing time is intellectual and moral suicide. Moments are precious. They are not to be thrown away. There is always something to do.—San Francisco Bulletin.

One Answer for All.

Lancaster, N. Y., March 30.—Postmaster Tenner is still in receipt of many letters asking if his cure has held good.

It will be remembered that some time ago the particulars of Mr. Tenner's case were published in these columns. He had been very low with Diabetes. Physicians could do nothing to save him and he grew worse and worse till someone recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. A treatment of this remedy was begun and when eight boxes had been taken Mr. Tenner began to see an improvement which continued as the treatment proceeded till he was completely restored.

The Fear of Fear

WHEN a man has passed his fiftieth year, is unmarried, has no near and dear relatives or friends to whom he is especially attached, when his life, whether in business or in leisure, is methodical and unchanging, and when things that divert and give pleasure to others have become a burden—then let him beware of his own mind, for he knows not what trick it may be making ready to play upon him.

It is with souls as with animals—starvation and ill treatment will render even the most gentle of them unmanageable, eccentric and dangerous. I am moved to set down these reflections by the peculiar fate that recently overtook Andrew Dawley—a man whom I had known for ten years or more with some degree of intimacy, but whom I hesitate to describe as a friend of mine, for the reason that I have once or twice heard him say—coolly and without bitterness—that he had no friends.

There were twenty years between our ages, an interval that would be likely to forbid close relations between two men who were without common tastes and interests. Propinquity gave us acquaintance, for I occupied at that time the room next but one to his, on the fourth floor, in the east wing of the Hotel MacMahon; but it was an acquaintance that was as slow of growth and almost as frigid as a glacier.

The first year, I think, we merely nodded when we met in the hall. During the second and third years we exchanged an occasional word. About that time, I remember, he captured a sneak thief on the stairway, overcame his fierce resistance, and held him until the police came, and I heard of it, went to his room to talk it over.

Then I left the hotel for a matter of five or six years, and on my return found Dawley the only one I knew in the place—still occupying the same room, and living the same unvarying life. And now, at rare intervals, we spent an evening together, usually on his invitation, and in his room. He seemed to be ill at ease elsewhere.

Up to the time that he explained to me his peculiar theory on the subject of fear, I had regarded him as a dull and commonplace character. Conversation with him was difficult, by reason of my apparent inability to discover a topic in which he was genuinely interested. There were interminable pauses, during which he drew slowly and regularly at his pipe, and stared into the fire.

On discussion on the subject of fear began with my commenting on the fact that a light was burning in his room the night before at one o'clock, which I had noticed, coming in at that hour, after a dance.

"I keep a light in my room all night," said he, "I hate the dark."

Now, this had not been his custom when I was a neighbor of his some years before, and I commended upon the change.

"I suppose it is an evidence of the weight of years," said he; "but I am troubled of late with peculiar fancies and dreams. Sitting alone here in the evening, things somehow get on my nerves, and the thought of suddenly waking out of a sound sleep to find myself shut in by blackness is quite intolerable to me."

Now this sentiment was so utterly at variance with my conception of Andrew Dawley, a cold, practical man of business and of the world, as I knew him—that instead of dropping the subject, as I might have done with a more sensitive man, I pursued it somewhat further.

"As a child," I remarked, "I had a great terror of the dark; but it ceased entirely when I was old enough to reason with myself."

"What was the course of your reasoning?" he asked.

"Well, I had become convinced that supernatural beings did not exist—such as ghosts and goblins and gnomes—and, on the other hand, I knew that in a well-protected house there was practically no danger from burglars or wild animals. So, having completely assured myself that there was nothing in the dark, any more than there was in the light, I ceased to be afraid of it."

"Good logic," said Dawley, with a smile. "I remember working out the same conclusion when I was about twelve years old. And it held with me ever since, until recently I discovered a flaw in the reasoning. Oh, it doesn't apply to anyone else," he added hastily, "as I undertook to speak. 'It is purely personal, and I hesitate to disturb your equanimity by describing it.'" some time, even though you are unable to anticipate a reasonable excuse therefor. Let me give it to you in more concrete form. A year or two ago I had a dream of a peculiarly vivid and impressive character. It was of my sudden awakening here in bed, in this room, to behold a man leaning over me. He was in strange, uncouth dress—not of the modern day, I should judge—and he was surrounded by, and seemed to give out, a fierce red light. He shouted some words to me—I don't know what they were; only, at the sound of them, such a mighty and overwhelming terror came upon me that I lay paralyzed as to motion and thought. Then I awoke, really awoke this time, and I found my body wet with perspiration, and my heart beating so fiercely and with such great pain that I feared some blood vessel must give way."

At this point I interrupted him, for his voice was trembling with excitement.

"You say you are not superstitious," I said. "Then you surely are not going to allow yourself to be affected by a dream? An overloaded stomach is always likely to disturb the heart. Its rapid movement causes a sensation exactly similar to fright, and the wandering brain conjures up a scare situation to fit it. Did you never dream out an elaborate series of events, culminating in a pistol shot, and then awoken to find that a window sash had dropped, and you had pined out the dream backwards, as it were?"

"How do you account for my having this same dream, without a lot of change, half a dozen times since that first experience?" I asked Dawley.

"It results," I answered, with the easy confidence one shows in disposing of the problems of others, "from the profound impression the first dream made on your mind and memory."

He smiled, and looked at me with half-closed eyes. Then he relighted his pipe, which had gone out, and I remember that the hand holding the match trembled a good deal.

By this time the subject had become distasteful to me, revealing a mental weakness or eccentricity in Dawley that was not pleasant to contemplate. So I turned the conversation into other channels.

Only on one other occasion did we speak again of this fear and the dream, and then, as before, it was brought up by a careless question.

Entering his room one night, I noticed a powerful bolt that had been newly fastened on the inside of his door, and I asked if the lock had been broken.

It was a natural inquiry, and there seemed to be no cause for the trouble in his voice and the peculiar light in his eyes as he replied to me:

"A lock can be picked. I wished to satisfy myself that it was impossible for a human being to enter this room while I sleep."

I glanced up at the transom. It was held shut by a heavy iron bar. Then I looked out of the window. It faced the court between the wings of the building, with a sheer drop of nearly forty feet.

"Utterly impossible," said I.

Then I noticed for the first time a certain waxiness in the texture of the skin over his forehead, and a sunken depth to his eyes.

"Has the dark reappeared?" I asked.

ley, nor did I at any time attempt to get over into the east wing of the building. It was on that side that the flames were fiercest, and the elevator shaft and stairway between that wing and the main building were roaring like a furnace. Suddenly the halls began to fill with firemen in long coats and helmets, some with axes and others dragging up hose.

There seemed to be nothing more for me to do, so I ran down the main stairway and out into the street, where a great crowd was assembled. I noticed that their faces were turned toward the east wing, and as I instinctively glanced in that direction, I remembered Dawley and the man of his fearsome dream.

The man was on his way—a huge bulk of a fireman, running up the long ladder that had been hoisted from the wagon and now rested against the wall, just below the window of Dawley's room.

But was it possible that he still slept through all this uproar and the glare of the flame, and the odor of burning wood? Surely, he must be asleep, else he would have appeared at the window. Then it suddenly flashed into my mind what was the meaning of the white skin and sunken eyes—a narcotic! Without doubt, he was still sleeping.

The fireman made his way through the heat to the top of the ladder, and swung into the open window. Streams of water played upon the flames beneath him, to protect his retreat. Two other men ran up the ladder, and had just reached the top, when he returned to the window, carrying a human figure wrapped in a blanket. The others assisted him, and they made their way slowly down the ladder again.

"Overcome by the smoke," said a man standing near me. But I noticed that no smoke came out of the open window.

I ran forward to a pile of mattresses and bed clothes that had been carried out from the hotel, and arranged a place for him to be laid. The call for a doctor flew along the line of spectators, and presently one came running. I asked the fireman what had happened.

"He was sound asleep when I entered the room through the window," he said. "I had to shake him hard to wake him up. He just stared at me a moment, and said, 'Ah! You have come,' and then his face turned kind of black, and his jaw dropped, and he went into a dead faint."

"How is it?" I asked the doctor, as he rose from stooping over the prostrate figure.

"Heart action ceased entirely," he replied. "Man is stone dead from mere terror."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Epitaphs in New England. Old-Time Ways of Faking Leave of the Proud World.

Among those time-worn burying grounds in which New England is so rich are many dog-eared monuments of the departed which, but for the solemnity of death in which they are enshrouded, would partake of the farcical. In an obscure corner of York's ancient cemetery is an epitaph which quite evidently was not dictated by the sculptor, for it thus memorializes the departed:

Here lies the body of Jonathan Drew, Who cheated all he ever knew. His Maker he'd have ever knawed, But that his God he never knew.

Here is one worthy of oblation for the warning of the indiscreet: "Emma, daughter of Abraham and Matilda Cox, and wife of Theodore Shallen, died July 9, 1847, aged 26 years, leaving five children; married two years against her father's will. Single women take warning."

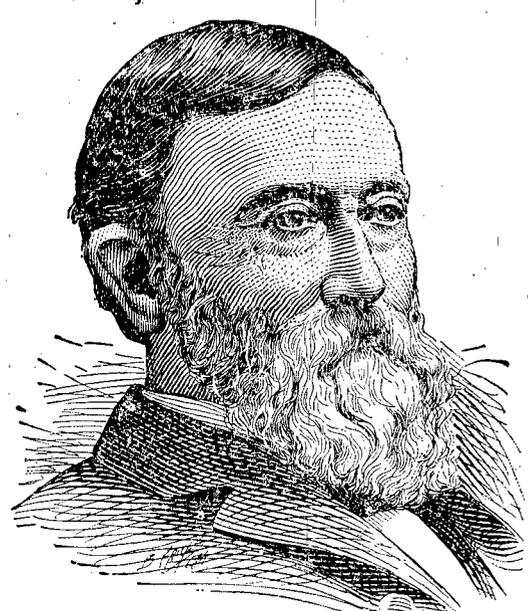

In the quiet old Kittery Point (Me.) cemetery, prostrate upon the bank of the Piscataqua, is a granite block bearing these words, rough hewn by the hand of a member of the only race in the world that could have originated such a "bull":

Bridget and I have two children dear, One in Ireland and the other here. Maine is particularly rich in gravestone oddities, but no inscription of them all can top this one, which displays to such advantage the bitterness of a local warfare over the individual medicinal qualities of the noted springs of two old towns:

Here lies John Jones and his two daughters, Who died of drinking Cheltenham waters; If they had drunk the waters of Howe, They might have all been living now.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Pe-ru-na is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy---I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."

DAN A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says: "I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, yes."

A County Commissioner's Letter. Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna:

"How is it?" I asked the doctor, as he rose from stooping over the prostrate figure.

"Heart action ceased entirely," he replied. "Man is stone dead from mere terror."—San Francisco Argonaut.

HOW THE SHAFT WAS SAVED Engineer's Skill Prevented Washington Monument from Falling.

If there is a man in the world who might restore the placidity of Venice, which has been so disturbed by the fall of the Campanile and the precarious condition of its other famous works of architecture, he is the new American major general who is shortly to relieve Cebu of the Philippine command. For it was George W. Davis who saved the Washington monument from destruction, and by the application of his ingenuity solved fundamental problems in his unique, off-hand manner that had baffled the highest engineering skill of modern times.

After the great shaft to the father of his country had risen slowly to the height of 197 feet and rested there like a rough factory chimney, an unfinished eyesore for twenty years, Congress determined to complete it and gave the job to the army. Built on the edge of the Potomac marsh, as unstable as the soil of the queen of the Adriatic, the shaft had already leaned five feet out of plumb and nobody could be found to set it straight and insure its permanent stability until Davis, lately a quartermaster, then an infantry captain, volunteered to lift the hundreds of tons of masonry back to the perpendicular and build under it a foundation that would permit the lifting of its top to the highest point ever attained by a monument erected by man.

To hold the soft earth in place he built a huge barrel 100 feet in diameter around the base and dove it deep into the earth below the tidal level. He bound together the inclosed mass with piles and braces, weighting it all down with stones and concrete, until he had secured a stability that would endure forever. Then he wedged up the monument and put an everlasting foundation under it, and finally turned the work over to the engineers under Colonel Casey, who eventually set the capstone 555 feet above the earth. Up to this day the great structure has not moved a hair's breadth and frequent inspection demonstrates how wonderfully Davis planned. But as he cannot be spared from Manila to save Venice perhaps it would be as well for the Venetians to come to Washington and study his triumph.—New York Tribune.

The first draft of Gibbons' "Decline and Fall" went to the printer direct from the pen of the author and with very few changes of any kind.

MONEY TO COOKS. $7,500.00 Donated, to Be Divided Among Family Cooks.

The sum of $7,500.00 will be distributed between now and midsummer among family cooks, in 735 prizes ranging from $200.00 to $5.00.

This is done to stimulate better cooking in the family kitchen. The contest is open to paid cooks (drop the name "hired girl," call them cooks if they deserve it) or to the mistress of the household if she does the cooking. The rules for contest are plain and simple. Each of the 735 winners of money prizes will also receive an engraved certificate of merit or diploma as a cook.

When a man makes a very long prayer in church, somehow his hearers get the impression that when he scolds in the privacy of his family he keeps a long time at it.

"I can conscientiously recommend your Peruna as a fine tonic and also around good medicine to those who are in need of a catarrh remedy. It has been commended to me by people who have used it, as a remedy particularly effective in the cure of catarrh. For those who need a good catarrh medicine I know of nothing better."—H. W. Ogden.

W. E. Griffith, Cochen, Texas, writes: "I have been suffering with chronic catarrh for many years. I took Peruna and it completely cured me. I think Peruna is the best medicine in the world for catarrh. My general health is much improved by its use, as I am much stronger than I have been for years."—W. E. Griffith.

A Congressman's Letter. Congressman H. Bowen, Rusk, Texas, writes: "I can heartily recommend your valuable remedy, Peruna, to any one who is suffering with catarrh, and who is in need of a permanent and effective cure."—H. Bowen.

Mr. Fred D. Scott, Larue, Ohio, writes: "I was afflicted with chronic catarrh of the bladder for many years. I have used it myself for colds and catarrh of the bowels and it is a splendid remedy. It restores vitality, increases blood strength and makes a sick person well in a short time. I give Peruna my hearty endorsement."—Fred D. Scott.

Green, Dr. C. Abbott, 906 M street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "I am fully convinced that your remedy is an excellent tonic. Many of my friends have used it with the most beneficial results for colds, coughs and catarrhal troubles."—Ira C. Abbott.

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council No. 138, Northwest, League of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2535 Polk street, N.D.:

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for a month and now I think I am perfectly cured. I believe that for catarrh of your kind, and in all its forms, Peruna is the best medicine of the age."—Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with chronic catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for a month and now I think I am perfectly cured. I believe that for catarrh of your kind, and in all its forms, Peruna is the best medicine of the age."—Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head. If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Many women and doctors do not recognize the real symptoms of derangement of the female organs until too late.

"I had terrible pains along my spinal cord for two years and suffered dreadfully. I was given different medicines, were plasters; none of these things helped me. Reading of the eyes that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought about, I somehow felt that it was what I needed and bought a bottle to take. How glad I am that I did so; two bottles brought me immense relief, and after using three bottles more I felt new life and blood surging through my veins. It seemed as though there had been a regular house cleaning through my system, that all the sickness and poison had been taken out and new life given me instead. I have advised dozens of my friends to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Good health is indispensable to complete happiness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has secured this to me."

Representative Gregg's bill prohibiting the use of tobacco in any form to minors under 18 under penalty of $10 fine or two days imprisonment, passed the house this week.

The legislature is playing horse by appropriating excessive amounts of money. It will appear that the good business sense of Governor Hickey and the Senate will be the safeguard of the taxpayers against a reckless and irresponsible House. Spending money one hasn't got—running into debt is so bad a practice, it would seem we ought to expect more by example from those who would be honored by the appellation of Representatives.

The Wabash railroad injunction against the employees of that road striking has been dissolved by Judge Adams in the U. S. District court. A temporary injunction was granted March 3 by this court upon the petition of the Wabash on allegations that the threatened strike would interfere with interstate business and the transportation of the United States mails. The dissolution of the injunction is a great victory for the labor unions and will force the Wabash to accept the demand for increase. It also establishes a precedent that will be regarded as fixed and will simplify the position of the parties to labor differences in the future.

A DISC GANG PLOW

POINTS TO THINK ABOUT--BUY A DISC GANG PLOW.

1. Will revolutionize the methods of plowing as twine has changed the methods of harvest.
2. Pulverizes the ground leaving it in better condition than both mould plow and harrow together.
3. No other disc plow like it. None could be equal to it as patents cover the field.
4. Guaranteed against breakage or wear from defects for one year.
5. Guaranteed to plow hard, dry ground where all others fail.
6. Guaranteed to scour in any soil where any plow will scour.
7. Inter changeable—can convert sulky into double, triple, quadruple, or larger by adding extra section or vice versa.
8. 50 to 100 per cent less draft than any other plow made.
9. No side draft—buy a double gang and you will wish it were triple—its draft is so easy.
10. Dealers report, "Sold 21 in thirty days. Never saw plow equal to it." "Sold 26 this fall. Enclosed find order for two car loads for next season."

On exhibition, call and see it. The above are but a few of the good things said of it, we can show you ten times as many more. We sell Osborne Binders, Corn Binders, Mowers, Rakes, Harrows, and Disc Harrows. Sold two car loads the past season.

ABOUT THE OSBORNE DISC

Square axle, extra lock nut, holding discs in position firmly. Best of frame, steel weight boxes, neat looking and most desirable. Discs of best tempered steel. Other discs leave an unbroken strip of soil in the center, the Osborne has a spring tooth which tears up this strip—a big thing when you think of it, bigger when you use it.

"Cranks, Fools and Dudes" is the subject of a lecture by Prof. J. M. Pile at the Baptist church Tuesday evening April 7 under the auspices of the young men's class of the Sunday School. The proceeds will be used to help fix up the Sunday school room in the basement in which they stand in need of, owing to the healthy growth of the Sunday school. Prof. Pile has frequently given his lectures to many cities surrounding us, but to Wayne this has been denied for some time. It will be a well filled house, and of most appreciative friends too, that will greet the Professor Tuesday evening. There is a bit of curious speculation among those who expect to be present as to which class they will enter under or whether they will classify after the lecture.

Woodmen Meet.

Wayne county Woodmen held their county convention in this city Wednesday. For delegate to the State Camp convention E. R. Gurney, of Winside, was elected and Geo. Weatherholt, of Hoskins, was chosen as alternate. Resolutions were passed endorsing A. R. Talbot, of Lincoln, for Head Counsel and Dr. E. S. Blair, of Wayne, for reappointment to the office of Head Physician, also J. R. Gilquist, of Nebraska City, for Auditor. Mr. Gurney favored the delegates with a short talk, speaking in opposition to the "Committee Plan" yet in favor of "readjustment," holding views quite in harmony with the majority of Woodmen who are framing a definite policy for the readjusting of Woodmen insurance rates that will mean a great deal for that order if done correctly.

Martin Bower was down from Randolph Thursday to visit his sister Mrs. U. G. Shipman.

F. C. Schroeder and two young sons were down from the west side of the county Wednesday, by way of Carroll. Mr. Schroeder had a chance to buy "that piece of land" next to his home farm and lost no time in cinching the bargain, which deal he has just closed. We acknowledge a pleasant call.

W. N. Rogers, of McCook, Nebraska, manager of a combination sale of registered Herefords to be held at Wayne on May 5th at the Chas. Madden barn south of the railroad, was in Wayne Monday looking after the interests of the sale, and placed a liberal order with the REPUBLICAN to advertise the same. Mr. Rogers is a very pleasant gentleman and one of those fraternal souls known as "stockmen." He assures us the quality of the stock offered will run high and they will follow up this sale with many more in the future. Col. Cunningham and Col. Calahan will make the sale.

An Observation.

Last week the Democrat severely arraigned Rev. Peter Birrell for daring to exercise a citizen's privilege of doing a little mixing in city politics the week previous in connection with the city caucus nominations. Mr. Goldie not only was unfair but purposely misstated the matter. Mr. Birrell did not act alone but was acting in conjunction with all the other pastors of the city. Every clergyman in the city is opposed to saloons being licensed at all, they are sincere in their belief of this and exercise only a citizen's privilege. The gentlemen who conduct licensed saloons know this and respect the clergymen for their conscientious convictions and do not gain anything by the maudlin statements made by the Democrat, nor thank the writer of them for unnecessarily creating active differences where comparative inaction exists. To hold the ministers responsible for the third saloon is the height of silliness. If the new council grants a license to the third saloon it is a matter of city business endorsed by the voters of the court house primary at which few if any of the clergymen participated. This paper does not attempt to defend the clergymen--they need no defense. They have citizens rights and exercise them independently. We have no reason to express individual opinion upon the Wayne saloon question, it is sufficient to say each saloon in the city is conducted by a man who knows his business, and maintains his place of business on a footing with the most orderly and best of the state, and the city officials are very competent to take care of the city's interests. Mr. Goldie does the clergymen no harm, does the saloons no good, does himself no credit, it were better he had said nothing. But to say nothing when a chance to assail some well intending, conscientious citizen--doing creditably (especially a Baptist or Presbyterian churchman) is a chance Mr. Goldie never loses. Some folks are built that way and probably for the same reason that the Creator made donkeys, geese and sheep with blattant voices, loud in their own praises, sweet with melody to themselves and others of their kind, but a whole drove of them carry less esteem than a patient plow horse and accomplish about the same relative good to the community.

How To Select Seed Corn

To get the best seed is always an important question. No farmer can raise a good crop if his seed is poor. The proper time to select seed corn is when you are husking. When you find a stalk that is 14 feet and 6 inches tall and 3 1/2 inches thick, with two big ears 16 1/2 inches long, take one ear for seed. We don't know how that sounds to a farmer. It may sound to him as it does to us to hear some merchant who never saw the inside of a coat tell how their clothing is made. We never raised a crop of corn and we may be mistaken about the right way to select seed corn, but that is our opinion without any experience. If our opinion is worth anything use it, if not don't try it. If you want advice that is backed by over 20 years of experience, ask us about clothing. We manufactured men's suits to order for over 20 years and know all about how a suit should be made to fit and stay in shape until worn out. We know all about the inside of a coat and any suit you buy here is made right on the inside and will stay in shape. If we are mistaken you get another suit free of charge. No matter how well a suit may fit, if it is not made right it will soon get out of shape and look bad. It is not all to find a good looking horse but you want one that will stay good and that has no faults. Just so with a suit. Buy of us and you will get a suit that looks well and will continue to look well as long as you wear it. Remember we save you money on clothing and you take no chance as our suits are warranted to give satisfaction.

Our spring suits now all in. Call and look at them.

WILSON RICKABAUGH.

Wednesday the Baptist ladies aid society held their regular meeting at Rev. Weldon's. As this day was also Mrs. Weldon's birthday the ladies worked a little surprise on the unusual spotting hostess and about five o'clock the men folks presented themselves with refreshments, also a handsome rocker for the pastor's wife. There is something very old fashioned and genial in those Baptist folks and their regard for their hard working pastor that just about fills the bill for an ideal of human nature at its best. They seem to get so much out of the little things that we very orthodox folks forget--who bless you every pastor's wife in the city has had a birthday within a year.

THE BURDICK MURDER.

Buffalo Authorities Do Not Think Pennell Was Slayer.

Buffalo, Although the prosecuting authorities of Buffalo seemingly tried to fix the responsibility for the murder of Edwin T. Burdick upon Arthur R. Pennell, it can be stated on the highest authority that they do not believe he committed the crime.

The suspect is a woman who, according to the police theory and the theories of nine of the women who are in touch with the Burdick family, had a strong motive for wishing him out of the way than did Mr. Pennell.

They firmly believe that she killed him, possibly with assistance, but more likely without, and that the crime was perpetrated after long waiting and most careful planning.

Notwithstanding that the last acts of Pennell and his associates of the last few days place him in a sinister light, paint his character far blacker than any one had predicted, the views of the highest officials do not change.

They are bringing out the shame, the licentiousness and duplicity of his life in order that, in the final absence of a solution of the mystery, the public may form its own opinion, but they cannot convince themselves that he killed Burdick.

They base their belief in his innocence largely on his physical cowardice and what they believe is a lack of motive. The woman whom they have in mind has been mentioned continuously in the case, particularly since Mrs. Paine was eliminated as a possible suspect.

The men engaged on the case are surprised at the facility with which the lawyers representing Mrs. Burdick and Mrs. Hull have directed suspicion at Pennell. That, to them, is an indication that the finger of suspicion should be directed elsewhere.

Sale of Shorthorns.
 L. Mason & Sons, the well known Shorthorn breeders of Pierce, Nebr., having sold their Elkhorn Valley farm, will hold a grand disposal sale of their entire fine Shorthorn herd at Norfolk, Nebr., April 30, 1903, at the Dudley livery barn and yards. Offering will consist of 85 head, 20 bulls and 65 females, better to have calves or bred to Merry Lad blood, by the great Merry Hampton. Offered by LAYNER, Chief and Esq. Monmouth. Write for catalogue at Pierce, Nebr.

Sweet Prune Plums.
 Sep 1, 1901, three bushels of plums were picked from one five-year-old tree in E. D. Hammond's orchard of sweet prune plums. The tree commences to bear two years after planting and grows most every year. It is the only prune plum that has been a success with me and I have tried many kinds. It stood the dry years of 1893 and 1894 and the cold hard winter of 1899 and bore fruit the following season. It is a grand success for Northwestern Nebraska. It is a dark purple in color, large size, skins can be easily removed and can be pitted like a free stone peach. They are excellent for canning or preserves and are so sweet that they require very little sugar. I sold this plum at $2.50 to $4.00 per bushel the past season, when other varieties of sour plums were selling at from 75 cents to $1.00 per bushel. It has taken first premium at several fairs, a premium at Lincoln State Fair and limbs and branches loaded with plums shipped to the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., were shown in the Nebraska fruit exhibit that took one of the gold medals. I also received an honorable mention diploma on this plum from the Pan-American exposition. We believe this plum has more good qualities and is the best plum in existence for this whole northwestern country. If you plant some of these trees you will make no mistake and will be well paid.

We have a choice, fine lot of five to six foot trees to sell for the spring of 1903. These trees were grown from grafts cut off of bearing trees that bore these plums, and they will bear fruit at two or three years old if planted and are sure to be genuine. If you want some of these trees send your order early and get the best plums in existence. Trees five to six feet, $1.25 each; $12 per dozen. All kinds of nursery stock. Call at Norfolk Nursery or address E. D. Hammond, Norfolk, Nebraska.

Lincoln Notes.
 The new revenue bill has at last passed both houses, and at this writing it seems certain to receive the governor's signature and become a law before the end of the week. It is not drawn to take effect until next year, which will give time for the officials to become familiar with its provisions. It will in some respects bring about a revolution in county elections, as it provides for a new official in each county in the person of the county assessor, who is to work in conjunction with the county commissioners in the appointment of the deputy assessors, and in the supervision of the work. The county assessors will in turn work under the supervision of the secretary of the state board, who is expected to keep in touch with the work in all of the counties.

One good effect of the revenue agitation is noticed in the reports of the meetings of precinct assessors now being held over the state. The usual practice has been for these officials to meet and under the old "full valuation" law agree to assess property at from one-fifth to one-twelfth of its cash value. The reports this year indicate a general tendency to an increase in the valuations of personal property. Should there also be an increase in the efforts to collect, the new revenue bill will have done a good work for the state funds before it really goes into effect as a law.

Now that the legislature is about to adjourn it is not out of place to mention the general character of the membership. It is apparent that last year the people of the state were aroused to the necessity of electing representatives of good habits and good character and who would not trade off their work in the session for jobs and other perquisites. The result is that a better lot of men never came to the state house. There is no boozing or rowdyism such as has sometimes marked past sessions. Not one-half of the members even smoke, and there is no suspicion of "hold-ups" or "hold-up" bills. The old style lobbyists with their free whisky and free lunch and dance tickets have met with a cold reception. The republican party has reason to be proud of the men it has sent to Lincoln and of the conscientious work they have performed.

Last Wednesday night unknown parties attempted to assist Welch Lowry out of the Stanton county jail. Last September Welch Lowry fled from the state, having been charged with the burglary of the premises of W. S. Bordner of Stanton and also with assaulting Anna Bilawa. He was subsequently recaptured and is now confined in the Stanton county jail awaiting the convening of district court on the 23rd of this month. The city of Stanton employs a night watchman only for the period of six months during the year and that time expired April 1. Last saw the figure of a man, dressed as Niegenfind had been when he went to his doom. The ghost was looking for someone on the walls of the penitentiary with a revolver in hand, but when it discovered Lutz it gave pursuit and chased him home. Lutz claims to have fired both barrels of his shot gun through the figure with no effect, and when the man was discovered by his employer, chattering and trembling in a corner between the "corn crib and barn, he had the gun clutched to deal the restless spirit another blow. Lutz took a deep interest in the fate of Niegenfind, had seen the body on dis-

ron an annual pass, with a letter remarking on the unusual nature of the case. The honest patron told a neighbor, who spread the news, and the next development was the receipt of another letter containing a 5-cent piece and this bit of gushing confidence: "Dear Mr. House—I neglected to pay my fare yesterday, and enclose it. Please send me a pass."

AROUND ABOUT.

This is a new story the traveling men are telling in Wayne. An enthusiastic citizen died and went, as supposed to heaven. After looking around he remarked: "Well, this isn't much better than Wayne." "But," said the bystander with a but pitchfork in his hand, "this isn't heaven."—Winside Tribune.

Miss Laura Holtz who has been taking a three week's vacation from her school duties returned to Hartington Wednesday noon and will resume her work in the Holmes district Monday. Miss Holtz spent a part of the time at the Samaritan hospital at Sioux City where she underwent an operation and the rest of the time at the home of her sister at South Sioux City.—Hartington Herald.

D. K. Hern, the piano man from Wayne, was at the Gladstones over Wednesday night. Mr. Hern has an acquaintance of long standing with the Advocate folks and we acknowledge a pleasant call. Misses Jessie and Lela Tucker, of Wayne, sisters of Mrs. H. J. Fybor, have been guests at the latter's home this week, also Mrs. Jones, of Minneapolis, the first of the first of the week.—Laurel Advocate.

The current rumor is that J. C. Schreyer expects to start a new paper in Schuyler sometime this month. It is said that the name will be the "Free Lance," and the politics independent. Mr. Schreyer was in Omaha last week and informed some of his friends on his return that he had purchased a complete newspaper plant and would open his office in the rooms over the Folds bank.—Schuyler Sun.

This morning a deal was closed whereby E. A. Tucker and his son, Ed J. Tucker purchased the Pender Drug Store from C. M. Bilger. In the transaction, C. M. Bilger becomes owner of the F. A. Leavitt home on McCabe street which Mr. Tucker recently purchased. E. J. Tucker is a Thurston county boy who is a graduate pharmacist, and will undoubtedly prove a successful business man. Mr. Bilger will remain in Pender until fall when he will take a trip west and upon his return will take up his studies in pharmacy. Mr. Ceoney will remain with the new firm for a while.—Pender Times.

Six pairs of pants were lifted from one of the tables of the Pierce Clothing Store the first of the week by some travelling tourists. Suspects were arrested at Osmond and everything in their possession taken from them. Miss Blanche Bell, of Wayne, is visiting this week with her aunt, Mrs. M. C. Cagle. Miss Bell was formerly a Pierce girl and a graduate of our schools. Messrs. Benj. Lindsey and L. A. Pohlman have made a thorough and exhaustive investigation of both gas and electric lighting for towns of the size of Pierce and from such examination they are firmly convinced that for all around purposes the gas plant would be the most satisfactory. It has no drawbacks the same as electricity, but is more brilliant for indoor or street lighting and has the advantage of use for cooking. Pierce needs a gas plant.—Pierce Call.

Mr. A. Sinclair, living one mile west of McLean, died a frightful death at his home Tuesday morning. During the morning hours he was about the barn doing the necessary and usual chores and his son and hired man were in the field husking corn. He had remarked to his son that he would turn out the cattle in a short time. Later as he did not make his appearance with the cattle the son went to the house to learn the cause, whereupon he found that the cattle were still in the yards and his father nowhere to be found. Suspecting that all was not right he made a search and while doing so he observed a hog in the yard with blood covering its snout. Going to the hog pen he was horrified to behold the lifeless form of his father lying on the ground and his face partly eaten away by the swine. It is supposed that he died of heart disease. The deceased was about 60 years of age and one of the most highly respected farmers in that locality. He had been a resident of Pierce county but a year having moved there from Bancroft. The remains were interred in the Randolph cemetery Thursday afternoon. Paul Bean had the misfortune to break his arm. This makes the third time the arm has been broken.—Ran-

Wednesday night was the first time that no one was supposed to be on duty. The unknown party provided himself with two pieces of iron or steel and at the time of the discovery which was about 10:30 p. m. had succeeded in breaking the lock on the outside door of the jail and was endeavoring to pry it open. Oscar McClanahan returning to his home, had occasion to pass through the court house square. He noticed the party but owing to the darkness failed to recognize him. The party refused to stop and two shots were fired at him by McClanahan, but it seems none took effect. Search was immediately instituted but no clues to the identity of the parties were discovered.—Winside Chronicle.

J. T. Lynch, a farmer living near the penitentiary at Lincoln, has in his employ a hand named Lutz, who is positive that he saw the ghost of Gottlieb Niegenfind in the dusk of a recent evening. Lutz went duck hunting Sunday afternoon and before he had returned home night had fallen. His path led him by the walls of the penitentiary and in the uncertain light of the early evening he alleges that he play at the undertakers and had brooded over the event until his mind was quite prepared to see the ghost of the murderer. He was able to resume his duties Monday morning, but insisted that his story was correct and that he had seen the ghost of no one but Niegenfind. It is thought that too frequent communication with the flesh may have something to do with the illusion.—Norfolk News.

SMILES.

General Manager House of the United Railways of Baltimore recently received the following letter, together with a 5-cent piece:

"Dear Sir—A few days ago I took one of your cars to my home on Gilmor street. The car was crowded and the conductor failed to reach me. I left at my corner, the conductor being too far in front to pay him, and I enclose the amount of my fare, which would have been sent you sooner but for the fact that I have been out of the city." Mr. House reported the occurrence to the directors of the road, and by their instruction sent the honest passenger impugned.

The German's courage was pretty severely attacked by an Englishman. Baron von Sternburg took revenge on him with this brief story: "An Englishman and a German were to fight a duel. They were locked in a pitch dark room together with cooked potatoes. All was still and neither could tell where the other was. Finally the German, not wishing to have murder on his soul, lit-toed to the chimney and fired up it. There was a shriek and the Englishman, badly wounded, came tumbling down."

Although Senator Elkins of West Virginia does not often attend the races nowadays, it was different during his early manhood. One day he and a chum slipped off together from school and on the way to the track came across their professor who said in surprise: "Young gentlemen, what does this mean? You should be at your lessons." Elkins said: "Sir, we wanted to go to our lessons and also to the races, so we tossed for it and it came down for the races." "What did you throw up?" "We threw a lump of coal up. If it stayed up we went to school; if it came down we went to the races; and here we are, sir."

Appropos of the recent adoption in Vermont of the high-license law, Representative Foster of that state tells an anecdote about an old farmer who never had an ache or a pain, but who, nevertheless, thought he ought to have a doctor because he had never had one. The interview was to the point, the farmer asserting that he could eat as far as he could see on both sides of the table, and that he slept so well he did not get up until it was time to do the milking.

"You are in perfect health," said the doctor to the old farmer after making a physical examination "but you are on the decline of life and perhaps you ought to take a tonic, something like a little rye whiskey."

"Oh," said the farmer, "I could never do that. I have a son and that would never do."

"Who is your barber?" queried the doctor.

"I shave myself," replied the farmer.

"Well," rejoined the doctor, "couldn't you have a bottle in your room and take the tonic whenever you shave?" This was agreed to, and it was some time before the doctor met the farmers son and inquired about the patient.

"He is getting along very nicely," said the young man. "He is more active than ever, but he is losing his mind."

Hoskins.

(Left over from last week.) Herman Deck bought one of the DeLaval cream separators last Saturday that are for sale by the local agent M. J. Dendinger.

The Herald's correspondent triumphantly announces in last week's items "the cat came back." Well, we are sure we congratulate the correspondent for he might not have come back, seal

The Herald's correspondent says: "By the looks of the nominations for town council we will soon have a marshal as well as a doctor." By the looks of all the men nominated with the exception of one they will know enough to know when they have one.

Did you know the Tribune's correspondent is worse since he took his medicine in last week's Tribune. Did you know Hoskins is organizing a band. Did you know the Hoskins marshal hasn't a stand in with the Herald's Hoskins news. Did you know it is spring. Did you hear the birds warble and the hens cackle. Did you know the Hoskins doctor is O. K. if his name isn't Scroggins. Did you know R. G. Roberky is going to enlarge his store building and will then have the finest store in town. Did you know Wetzlich & Ziemer and M. J. Dendinger have in a big stock of new machinery for the spring trade. Did you know that Hoskins has the best restaurant in the county. Did you know the postoffice cat came back.

We have been told since last week that Hoskins does not need a furniture store, flour mill, canning factory or bank. Now we know it does and will tell you why. It needs a furniture store, as people of Hoskins and vicinity buy furniture and at present have to go to other towns to get it. As for a bank, any town except Winside needs two banks—it has Gurney's. In other towns having only one banker his head is apt to swell till he thinks he not only does the banking business for the town but will often want to do the thinking and speaking. Then again, if there is only one bank when you get sore on one tell them to go where it don't cost so much to keep warm as it has in Hoskins this winter. About all the use we can think of for the canning factory would be to can new for the Herald's and Tribune's correspondents.

An Oklahoma editor has indicted the following touching appeal to delinquents: "There is a little matter that some of our subscribers have seemingly forgotten entirely—some of them make us promises, but have not kept them. With us it is an important matter—it's necessary to our business. We are very modest and don't like to speak about it."

About the one thing necessary next to the "know how" in making bread, and she will answer "kneading." Ransack the world and gather together the best flour, the best yeast, the best water and the best of every ingredient that goes to make up the best bread recipe known to woman kind, mix them together in a hap-hazard way and with only slight kneading and even a tramp will refuse it with scorn. On the other hand get the best ingredients, mix them in the proper proportions, knead them thoroughly and you are certain of having the kind of bread that mother used to make. The best ingredients and best recipe or formula are a necessity in making mixed paint as in making bread. Thorough mixing or grinding is as necessary to mix good paint as kneading to make good bread. In both cases there must be kneading or grinding and mixing until every article of the original ingredients has become part of the harmonious whole. It takes muscle and a good deal of it to thoroughly knead bread. In exactly the same way Heath & Milligan's best prepared paint is made; it is properly ground and mixed and it will spread evenly and smoothly and will not chalk or peel. Sample shades at

The Agricultural Department's monthly crop bulletin is as follows: March weather conditions were generally favorable for the growth of grains and grasses in all districts east of the Rocky Mountains, but outside of New England and portions of the middle Atlantic States and the lake region spring water has been retarded by excessive rains and the consequent wet soil condition. DEARTH IN FARM HELP.
Farmers Experiencing Difficulty in Securing Hands.
Farmers assert that there is a dearth of farm help that they have not experienced for some time. The "hired girl" has either gone away to school, have taken up various callings in the towns or have gone west to new fields.

During March of each year the agriculturists are accustomed to hire their help for the forthcoming season, but up to this time it has been well impossible to get any one to whom the higher wages are any kind of an inducement. In past years a farm hand has commanded from $15 to $18 a month, with board. This year they are commanding $25 a month, board, washing and certain privileges about the farm; but even these inducements do not bring the desired help.

There are various reasons given for this scarcity of farm help, but there is no doubt that the railroads are responsible in a measure. Some of the roads are employing a larger number of men on construction work and in their shops, but a much larger number have been taken to new farming countries.

Illinois Central alone has induced thousands of new hands to take up the work in the South, where millions of acres have been developed and are now developing, and a large number of the people who in past years have been working for wages are now down in Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee and Kentucky, working on land that will soon be their own, raising cotton, grain, truck, cotton, fine stock and grasses.

The Chicago corporation has established a school in this branch of industry and an army of young men and many whole families have gone to this new country. Some of them have not come out of Illinois. Not long ago the Chicago and Eastern Illinois people loaded up a loaded Chicago car with blankets, food, and baggage to southern Illinois. These people carried up a lot of land, set it out in fruit trees and plants.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul line has drawn largely upon Illinois for experienced farmers for the Northwest and this line has developed new mining country where many Illinois young men are trying their luck.

Still another feature of this change in farming conditions is that many Illinois farmers have disposed of their land at as high a price as $150 an acre and have gone to the newer countries, where the land is rich but much cheaper. It is claimed that in some localities the price of land has been so high that it does not pay to use it for farming purposes. Many of such farms have been sold and their owners have moved to the towns, retired or left.

When the Fifty-eighth Congress meets in regular session next December, the presidential election will be the overshadowing topic of conversation and discussion. Unavoidably it will check legislative activity. Everybody will realize that by the time the time ends the nominating conventions will be assembling. In each presidential year the country thinks of what it is proposing to do, rather than of the things that are actually taking place.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Although it was argued at the time the oleomargarine act was under consideration in Congress that the tax of 10 cents a pound imposed upon the producer colored in imitation of butter would not injuriously affect the industry, the claim of the opponents of the law that it would be legalized. The official statistics given out by the commissioner of internal revenue show that, although the tax on the uncolored product was reduced from 2 cents to one-fourth of a cent a pound, the revenue derived during the eight months ending Feb. 28 was only $124,800. The revenue collected during the corresponding period of the previous year under the old law. The total receipts from oleomargarine under the new law during the eight months was $288,538, compared with $1,408,443 during the corresponding period under the old law. The revenue collectors have found that the consumption of oleomargarine under the new law is less than one-twelfth what it was under the old law. In the eight months last mentioned only 6,000,000 pounds was taxed, while under the old law 74,000,000 pounds was taxed. Naturally the number of retailers has proportionately decreased.

Action by the President and the Secretary of War in two recent cases is an indication of a policy changed for the better in the matter of resignations and reinstatements in the army. Secretary War accepted the resignation of an artillery officer with the understanding, "for the good of the service." The officer had misbehaved repeatedly, until it was evident that he did not belong in the army. In other days it has been the custom simply to accept the resignation without written comment. The offending officer was thus placed on a par with faithful men who retired for honorable reasons.

Secretary Roosevelt vetoed a bill to place on the retired list an officer who had been cashiered some years ago. The record showed that the man was unworthy, and the President's reason for his act was that the placing of such a person on the retired list would be unjust to every honest officer who had reached that list by faithful service.

When the special session of the United States Senate was called to order there were thirteen new faces. Most interesting of these was the appearance of Reed Smoot, the Mormon member, against whose election to the Senate so much objection had been made. When his name was called some persons thought it would make a good deal of a record for him to be sworn in without opposition. There was some applause from the galleries when he took the oath.

Just before this Senator Hear stated that if any man having credentials could be sworn in, which was taken to be a reference to Mr. Smoot.

The reported decision of the Democratic leaders in the House to follow up in the next session any advantage they may have gained in the last through their persistent filibustering has aroused a great deal of feeling among the leaders of the majority side. A member of the Senate, who has been taken to be a reference to Mr. Smoot.

Robert H. Watkins has arranged some interesting data relative to the ages, the length of service and the public careers of the members of the United States Senate. He shows that Senator Pettis of Alabama, now just beginning his second term, is the oldest man in the body. Senator Bailey of Texas is the youngest.

The brilliant statesman from the Lone Star State is exactly one year younger than the junior Senator from Indiana—Senator Borah—whose birthday is occurring Oct. 6. The compiler calculates that the average age of members in the Senate is 56.7 years. The majority of the men who constitute that great legislative assemblage are therefore somewhat past middle life.

President Roosevelt will be in close touch with the White House all the hours of the day and night in his absence. Assistant Secretary Forester will be in charge at the executive mansion and a line of communication will be maintained at all times between him and Secretary Loeb, who accompanies the presidential party.

While the President is at Yellowstone Park the special train of the Yellowstone Railway will be in charge of the entrance of the park, and daily communication with the President will be had through telephonic or telegraph system or by courier. A direct wire between Cinnabar and the White House will constantly be maintained. In the event of untoward accident the White House will be notified instantly.

Before leaving Washington recently, Major McDowell, clerk of the House of Representatives, who has charge of the House wing of the capitol during the intervals between sessions of Congress, issued an order that the law forbidding the sale of liquor be rigidly enforced. All intoxicating liquors have been removed. It is highly probable that no effort will be made in the future to revive the sale of liquors in the capitol. Heretofore this was a matter within the control of the presiding officers and certain committees of the respective branches of Congress, but the sale is now for the first time forbidden by law.

When the Fifty-eighth Congress meets in regular session next December, the presidential election will be the overshadowing topic of conversation and discussion. Unavoidably it will check legislative activity. Everybody will realize that by the time the time ends the nominating conventions will be assembling. In each presidential year the country thinks of what it is proposing to do, rather than of the things that are actually taking place.

The fact that the Washington monument at the capitol is wholly without inscription is a unique tribute to our first President. Yet the best lapidary inscriptions to our beloved dead leave the tenderest word unscathed.

MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Miss Helen Whitman, 308 1/2 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it."

How to Get Strong Nerves. First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary of Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass. She said in a recent letter: "I suffered for over a year with general weakness and debility manifested in severe headache and backache. The hospitals and insane asylums are filling up. The quiet, pastoral scenes of yore are becoming rare. It's time that we quit this sort of business, from these invalids."

Smoke Most in Summer. "It may appear strange, but it is not the less true, non-smokers, less during the winter months than they do in the 'good old summer time,'" remarked a local cigar dealer to a star man the other night. "Did you ever stop to consider why this should be?" asked the cigar man. "Take tonight, for instance, there are plenty of people on the street, yet business has been very dull with us. But the wind is blowing and it is disagreeably cold. Men do not like to smoke while it is windy and cold. When the spring opens out sales will jump and by May they will be at high-water mark. They are much bigger all summer than they are at this season, but May appears to be the ideal smoking month. Your true smoker likes the aroma of his Havana with the fragrance of the May flowers. All the outdoor season our Saturday afternoon sales are the largest of the week."

How about the home trade—don't men smoke enough indoors at the fireside to balance the outdoor smoking of summer? "I don't think so. Just before Christmas we did a large box trade, but for the remainder of the year our box trade runs rather even. I should say men smoke more when they can be comfortable out of doors than they do indoors.—Washington Star.

Breaking It Gently. "My boy," said the managing editor to the space writer, "I don't want to say anything unkind, but you certainly make me think of a baroque actress!" "How so?" inquired the young man, realizing that he was expected to ask the question. "You have the art of padding down very fine."—Chicago Post.

An African Diplomat. "And the trader wanted you to give up your war club for a string of beads?" "Yes; but I didn't. I gave him a strip of territory for the beads; but I held on to the war club to get the territory back."—Puck.

Nervous Prostration.
Thousands of cases might be quoted in which Peruna has been used to rescue people from the perdition of deranged nerves, and put them on the good, solid foundation of health. The County Auditor of Erie County, New York, Hon. John W. Neff, in a recent letter written at Buffalo, New York, stated: "I was persuaded by a friend to try a bottle of your great nerve tonic, Peruna, and the results were so gratifying that I am more than pleased to recommend it."

A Spring Tonic.
Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain and cleanse the blood. The Peruna will do this for you beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Catarrh in Spring.
The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by the warm weather. This renews the system, and a short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says: "For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorder, and was certainly unable to take care of a household. I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and to-day my condition is perfect. I am now able to do my usual work. My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health."—Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

Happy Homes
One of the essentials of the happy homes of to-day is a fund of information as to right living and the best methods of promoting health and happiness. With proper knowledge, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment and of effort may be used to contribute to that end and are of not less value than the using of the most wholesome foods and the selecting of the best medicinal agents when needed. With the well-informed, medicinal agents are used only when nature needs assistance and while the importance of cleansing the system effectually, when bilious or constipated, has long been known, yet until within recent years it was necessary to resort to oils, salts, extracts of roots, bark and other cathartics which were found to be objectionable and to call for constantly increased quantities.
Then physicians having learned that the most excellent laxative and carminative principles were to be found in certain plants, principally in the leaves, the California Fig Syrup Co. discovered a method of obtaining such principles in their purest condition and of presenting them with pleasant and refreshing liquids in the form most acceptable to the system and the remedy became known as—Syrup of Figs—as figs were used, with the plants, in making it, because of their agreeable taste.
This excellent remedy is now rapidly coming into universal use as the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually without disturbing the natural functions and without unpleasant after effects and its use may be discontinued when it is no longer required.
All who would enjoy good health and its blessings should remember that it is the one remedy which physicians and parents well-informed approve and recommend and use and which they and their little ones alike enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects.
Syrup of Figs is for sale by all reliable druggists, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, in original packages only, having the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs—and the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

TO WORKING GIRLS

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE Every working girl who is not well is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice; it is freely given, and has restored thousands to health.

Miss Paine's Experience. I want to thank you for what you have done for me, and recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all girls whose work keeps them standing on their feet in the store. The doctor said I must stop work; he did not seem to realize that a girl cannot afford to stop working. My back ached, my appetite was poor, I could not sleep, and menstruation was scanty and very painful. One day when suffering I commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I found it helped me. I continued its use, and soon found that my menstrual periods were free from pain and natural; everyone is surprised at the change in me, and I am well, and cannot be too grateful for what you have done for me. -Miss JANE PAINE, 530 West 125th St., New York City. -$5000 worth of original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Take no substitute, for it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that cures. Not Boston. Some years ago a Boston woman died, and her husband, who was a strong Spiritualist, desired to hold communication with her. He asked "if she was happy." "Oh, yes," was the response. "I'm happy here. Yet, after all, it isn't Boston."

She Knew. "Do you know anything about hypnotism?" asked the girl in the pink waist. "Well," replied the hair-dresser, as she held up her left hand to display a sparkling solitaire to better advantage, "you can judge for yourself." -Chicago Daily News.

THE IMPRESSIONS OF A WOMAN. What a Woman Says About Western Canada. Although many men have written to this paper regarding the prospects of Western Canada, and its great possibilities, it may not be uninteresting to give the experience of a woman settler, written to Mr. M. V. McInnes, the agent of the Government at Detroit, Mich. If the reader wishes to get further information regarding Western Canada it may be obtained by writing any of the agents of the Government whose name is attached to the advertisement appearing elsewhere in this paper.

The following is the letter referred to: Hilltown, Alberta, Feb. 5, 1903. Dear Sir—I have been here now nearly five years, and I thought I would write you a woman's impression of Western Canada—in Alberta. There are several ranches in this district who, in addition to taking care of their cattle, carry on farming as well. Their herds of cattle number from 100 to 200 or 300 head, and live out all winter without any shelter, but the popular bluffs, and they come in in the spring in good order. Most of the ranchers feed their cattle part of the time, about this time of the year, but I have seen the finest fat cattle I ever saw that never got a peck of grain—only fattened on the grass. You see I have learned to talk farm since I came here—farming is the greatest business here. I now several in this district who never worked a day on the farm till they came here, and have done well and are getting well off.

I think this will be the garden of the Northwest some day, and that day not very far distant. There has been a great change since we came here, and there will be a greater change in the next five years. The winters are all anyone could wish for. We have very little snow, and the climate is fine and healthy. Last summer was wet, but not to an extent to damage crops, which were a large average yield, and the hay was immense and farmers were a broad smile accordingly.

We have good schools; the Government pays 70 per cent of the expense of education, which is a great boon in a new country. Of course, churches of different denominations follow the settlements. Summer picnics and winter concerts are all well attended, and much, or more, enjoyed as in the East. Who would not prefer the pure air of this climate with its broad acres of fine farms, its rippling streams, its beautiful lakes, its millions of wild flowers, its groves of wild fruit of exquisite flavor, its streams and lakes teeming and bubbling with trout and bluffs with game, to the crowded and stiff state of society in the East? I would like to go home for a visit some time, but not to go there to live, even if presented with the best farm in Michigan. Beautiful Alberta, I will never leave it. And my verdict is only a repetition of what I have written in this country. This year, I believe, will add many thousands to our population. And if the young men, and old men also, knew how easy they could make a home free of all incumbrance in this country, thousands more would have settled here than I would sooner have 100 acres here than any farm where I came from in Michigan; but the people in the East are coming to a knowledge of this country, and as they do, they will come West in thousands. All winter people have been arriving in Alberta, and I suppose other parts as well, which is unusual, so we expect a great rush when the weather gets warmer.

We have no coal famine here; coal can be bought in the towns for $2 to $3 according to distance from the mines, and many had their own coal from the mines, getting it there for 50 cents to a dollar a ton.

Very truly yours, (Signed) MRS. JOHN M'LACHLAN. Annapolis, Md., was so called in honor of Queen Anne. The Catholics, who settled it, called it St. Mary's; it was renamed Arundelton, in honor of the Earl of Arundel, still later was christened Anne Arundel, and finally the present name was given.

Second Cousin Sarah

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ANNE JUDGE, SPINSTER," "LITTLE KATE KIRBY," ETC., ETC.

CHAPTER XXII. It is time that we follow the fortunes of Second-cousin Sarah, whom we left with her shabby sister-in-law in the grounds of Sedge Hill. Taken off her guard by Mrs. Thomas Eastbell's sudden appearance, disturbed by the events of the night, and ever conscious of the danger which the presence of the two intruders in her aunt's house foreshadowed, she followed the woman in good faith some distance along the garden paths and into the high road.

"We will go no farther," she said, "tell me what I have to fear from your husband and Peterson, and I will reward you handsomely." "Listen then as well as you can," said Sarah, "I ain't a-going to speak loud for anybody."

Sarah Eastbell inclined her head very close to the woman, who began whispering about her husband in a rambling fashion that was difficult to follow, until she went suddenly back three steps, to Sarah's surprise, and stood gazing at her, or at something near her.

"What is it?" exclaimed Sarah, "what is there no opportunity to say more, to scream, or to struggle. Two strong arms closed round her, and a cloth, wet and sickly with drugs, was pressed to her mouth and nostrils by a merciless hand, that seemed to snatch her at once from active life to oblivion."

When she came back to consciousness it was to a life apart from Sedge Hill, and those who loved her there. She was lying on a bed, with a scantly furnished side of the room, with some boards nailed across it to keep the light of one spirit-candle from betraying itself to the night.

Suddenly Sophy woke up, and gave a nervous jump in her chair at finding her sister-in-law crouched upon the bed, with her great dark eyes glaring at her.

"Where have you brought me? Why am I in this dreadful place?" Sarah asked in an eager voice. "You've come round, have you?" said Sophy. "Well, I am glad of that. Bless if I didn't think they'd overdone it with their klory-whats-it's-name, and sent you bang off afore they meant it."

Sarah Eastbell was sitting at the edge of the bed now, regarding her jailer with eager attention. She was scarcely back from dreamland yet.

"You'll know in good time, gal. There's no 'casion for a hurry, or a flurry. Take it cool. You're safe enuf." Sarah Eastbell was standing at the door of the room when she had recovered herself. It was locked, as she had suspected.

"It's no use your thinking of getting out, Sally," said Tom's wife; "don't build on that, or harm will happen to you. That's certain."

the great scheme of his life. The sky was overcast, and he looked up at it and prophesied to himself that it would rain before the morning. He walked round to the opposite side of the house and gazed moodily at the water in the pond and the long grass above the river bank. One glance at the darkened window in the top-most story where his fortune lay, he thought, and then he returned to the house meditating on the difficulties in his way, and of his genius to surmount them.

Edward Peterson went downstairs, followed by the little girl. At the front door he said: "You were wise to keep your room to-day, little woman, for they have been very cross, and Mrs. Eastbell has been worse than ever. You must find your way to Worcester tonight, all by yourself. Two miles from here is a railway station—you know it, where the red and green lights shine out like big eyes after dark. You have run about here a good deal, and know your way well, and you can find the station. Now, take care of this money."

He placed some money in her hands, and she wrapped it up in a corner of a dirty white handkerchief, and tucked it down the bosom of her dress, wrapping her cloak round her afterward with all the carefulness and confidence of a woman.

"At the railway station ask for a third-class ticket for Worcester. When that comes up to the platform, get in. When they call out 'Worcester,' get out. At Worcester a lady, very pretty, and with hands full of toys, will be waiting for you at the postoffice. Ask the way to the postoffice like a woman as you are, and when you see the lady under the clock, say, 'Pa keeps his word—I'm Bessie.'"

"All right," said the child again, with a rare amount of confidence in her own comprehension of the details, which, however, he asked her to repeat, listening attentively to the recital.

CROPS-LOOKING WELL

MARCH CONDITIONS GOOD, EXCEPT FOR PEACHES.

Winter Wheat Showing Fine Growth and Hardly Any Damage Done—Spring Plowing Backward in Many States Owing to Excessive Moisture.

The Agricultural Department's monthly crop bulletin is as follows: March weather conditions were generally favorable for the growth of grains and grasses in all districts east of New England and portions of the middle Atlantic States and the lake region spring work has been retarded by excessive rains and the consequent wet soil conditions. On the Pacific coast the weather conditions were generally favorable, although it was too cool, and the season is two or three weeks late in Washington.

Reports from all sections indicate that winter wheat is in promising condition generally. The crop has wintered well and is now making vigorous growth in all sections. The rank growth is reported from limited areas in Kentucky and some damage by water on lowlands in Maryland and the lower Ohio and central Mississippi valleys. In California winter wheat is in excellent condition, with heavy yields indicated from a large acreage.

Some spring wheat has been sown in Washington, but no seeding has been done in principal spring wheat States. Cotton planting is in progress in southern Georgia and eastern South Carolina. A Florida has been planted in Alabama and Florida.

Serious injury to the peach crop by frost is reported from nearly all sections west of the Mississippi and from Oklahoma and northern Texas. Other fruits are more promising.

Reports by States.

ILLINOIS—Wheat in promising condition, but some frost damage reported backward on account of wet soil; peach buds killed.

KENTUCKY—Wheat and rye wintered well, excepting a comparatively small acreage in bottom land inundated by recent flood. Clover damaged in places, but generally prospects are better than last year; peach crop badly damaged in many localities, buds all killed, and other fruit un-justured.

OHIO—Warm season unusually forward; fruit trees in bloom in the south; wheat continues in excellent condition, and little frost is reported from the north; peaches reported injured in east and south.

MICHIGAN—March was generally a good condition; fruit buds have been forward, and some peach damage reported; prospects are better than last year; peaches reported injured in east and south.

MINNESOTA—The season is well open in the north; wheat in good condition; there were some severe cold periods during the winter, but crops were generally well protected by snow.

IOWA—The month was warmer than usual; frost is rapidly leaving the ground, which is so far ahead of other sections; peach buds generally un-justured.

NEBRASKA—Wheat March as a whole was in good condition; fruit buds have been forward; winter wheat and rye is starting slowly.

KANSAS—Wheat passed through the winter in good condition; peach buds abundant in the south.

OKLAHOMA, INDIAN TERRITORY—Wheat in good condition; peach buds abundant in the south.

ARKANSAS—Farming operations delayed by cold weather; peach buds abundant in the south.

MISSOURI—Month unusually warm, but ground is wet and little progress made in spring work; wheat generally in excellent condition; peach buds abundant in the south; peaches reported injured in east and south.

DEATH IN FARM HELP.

Farmers Experiencing Difficulty in Securing Hands.

Farmers assert that there is a dearth of farm help that has not experienced for some time, says a Chicago paper. The trouble is that farmers' sons have either gone away to school, have taken up various callings in the towns or have gone west to new fields. During March of each year the agriculturists are accustomed to hire their help for the forthcoming season, but up to this time there has been well nigh impossible to find any one to whom the higher wages are any kind of an inducement. In past years a farm hand has commanded from $15 to $18 a month, with board. This year they are commanding $25 a month, board, washing and certain privileges about the farm; but even these inducements do not bring the desired help.

PRIZES TO BE DISTRIBUTED.

Between now and July 1st, family cooks, whether employees or the mistress of the household, will be following the plan laid down for improvement in books in a contest for 735 cash prizes ranging from $29.00 to $5.00 offered by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.

The winners must show improvement in general cookery as clearly stated in the rules for the test.

No one has to buy or pay anything whatever. It is simply an earnest effort on the part of Mr. Post to stimulate the household cook to more careful and skillful cookery.

To have light, sweet bread and cakes instead of heavy, sour and indigestible things. To have no more greasy, burned or dried-out meats. To have properly made Coffee, Postum and tea. To have delicate and digestible, toothsome desserts and a table, clean, tasty and a pleasure to look upon.

So $7,500.00 in actual money will be spent to encourage the cooks of the country to better effort. And you housekeepers, please forever abandon the term "hired girl." Teach your cook the dignity of her profession, call her the "cook."

If her duties include other service, well and good, but do not detract from her professional title by calling her the "hired girl." That term don't fit a good cook. A certificate bearing the large seal of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., will go to each of the 735 winners in this contest. These certificates or diplomas will be as valuable to the holders, as a doctor's sheepskin is to him.

A postal card to the Cookery Dept. No. 487, of the big pure food factories of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich., will bring a sheet of plainly printed rules for the contest.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Although it was argued at the time the oleomargarine act was under consideration in Congress that the tax of 10 cents a pound imposed upon the product colored in imitation of butter would not injuriously affect the industry, the claim of the opponents of the law that it would be being realized. The official statistics given out by the commissioner of internal revenue show that, although the tax on the uncolored product was reduced from 2 cents to one-fourth of a cent a pound, the revenue derived during the eight months ending Feb. 29 was only $124,800, compared with receipts of $1,483,052 during the corresponding period of the previous year under the old law. The total receipts from oleomargarine under the new law during the eight months was $288,538, compared with $1,908,461 during the corresponding period under the old law. The revenue collectors have found that the consumption of oleomargarine under the new law is less than one-twelfth what it was under the old law. In the eight months last mentioned only 6,000,000 pounds was taxed, while under the old law 74,000,000 pounds was taxed. Naturally the number of retailers has proportionately decreased.

Action by the President and the Secretary of War in two recent cases is an indication of a policy changed for the better in the matter of resignations and reinstatements in the army. Secretary Root accepted the resignation of an artillery officer with the indorsement "for the good of the service." The officer had misbehaved repeatedly, until it was evident that he did not belong in the army. In other days it has been the custom simply to accept the resignation without written comment. The offending officer was thus placed on a par with faithful ones who resigned for honorable reasons. Secretary Root's course is designed to make the papers conform to the facts. In the other case, President Roosevelt vetoed a bill to place on the retired list an officer who had been cashiered some years ago. The record showed that the man was unworthy, and the President's reason for his act was that the pension of such a person on the retired list would be unjust to every honest officer who had reached that list by faithful service.

When the special session of the United States Senate was called to order there were thirteen new faces. Most interesting of these new members was the Hon. Senator from the Morning After, the, against whose election to the Senate so much objection was made.

It was thought that when his name was called some persons would be sure to make a protest, but he was sworn in without opposition. There was some applause from the galleries when he took the oath.

Just before this Senator Hoar stated that any man having credentials could be sworn in, which was taken to be a reference to Mr. Sargent.

The reported decision of the Democratic leaders in the House to follow up in the next session any advantage they may have gained in the last through their persistent filibustering has aroused a great deal of anxiety among the leaders of the majority side. A member of the ways and means committee, who is the floor leader of his party, declares that further obstruction by repeated roll calls will lead to the adoption of some mechanical apparatus, probably an electric annunciator, for noting and recording each member's vote. It is claimed that one of the instruments which have been submitted to the Republicans would take a vote of the House in less than one-tenth of the time now spent in the useless reading and rereading of the long list of names.

Robert H. Watkins has arranged some interesting data relative to the ages, the length of service and the public careers of the members of the United States Senate. He shows that Senator Pettus of Alabama, now just beginning his second term, is the oldest man in the body. Senator Bailey of Texas is the youngest. The brilliant statesman from the Lone Star State is exactly one year younger than the Hon. Senator from Indiana, Senator Beveridge—their birthdays occurring Oct. 6. The compiler calculates that the average age of members in the Senate is 56.7 years. The majority of the men who constitute that great legislative assemblage are therefore somewhat past middle life.

President Roosevelt will be in close touch with the White House at all hours of the day and night in his absence. Assistant Secretary Forester will be in charge at the executive mansion and a line of communication will be maintained at all times between him and Secretary Loeb, who accompanies the presidential party.

While the President is at Yellowstone Park, the two of the party will be sidetracked at Cinnabar, near the entrance of the park, and daily communication with the President will be had through telephonic or telegraphic system or by courier. A direct wire between Cinnabar and the White House will constantly be maintained. In the event of untoward accident the White House will be notified instantly.

Before leaving Washington recently, Major McDowell, clerk of the House of Representatives, who has charge of the House wing of the capitol during the intervals between sessions of Congress, issued an order that the law forbidding the sale of liquor be rigidly enforced and intoxicating liquors have been removed. It is highly probable that no effort will be made in the future to revive the sale of liquors in the capitol. Heretofore this was a matter within the control of the presiding officers and certain committees of the respective branches of Congress, but the sale is now for the first time forbidden by law.

When the Fifty-eighth Congress meets in regular session next December, the presidential election will be the overshadowing topic of conversation and discussion. Unavoidably it will check legislative activity. Everybody will realize that by the time the time the nominating conventions will be assembling. In each presidential year the country thinks of what it is proposing to do, rather than of the things that are actually taking place.

The fact that the Washington monument at the capitol is really under inscription is a unique tribute to our first President. Yet the best lapidary inscriptions to our beloved dead leave the tenderest word unaided.

MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Miss Helen Whitman, 308 1/2 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it."

How to Get Strong Nerves. First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary of Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass. She said in a recent letter: "I suffered for over a year with general weakness and dizziness manifested in severe headache and backache. The hospitals and insane asylums are filling up. The quiet, pastoral scenes of yore are becoming rare. It's time that we quit this sort of business."

Smoke Most in Summer. "It may appear strange, but it is none the less true, more smoke less during the winter months than they do in the 'good old summer time,'" remarked a local cigar dealer to a star man the other night. "Did you ever stop to consider why this should be?" asked the cigar man. "Take to-night, for instance; there are plenty of people on the street, yet business has been very dull with it. But the wind is blowing and it is disagreeably cold. Men do not like to smoke while it is windy and cold. When the spring opens out sales will be paid by May they will be at high-water mark. They are much bigger all summer than they are at this season, but May appears to be the ideal smoking month. Your true smoker likes the aroma of his havanna with the fragrance of the May flowers. All the outdoor season our Saturday afternoon sales are the largest of the week."

Nervous Prostration.

Thousands of cases might be quoted in which Peruna has been used to rescue people from the perdition of deranged nerves, and put them on the good, solid foundation of health. The County Auditor of Erie County, New York, Hon. John W. Neff, in a recent letter written at Buffalo, New York, stated: "I was persuaded by a friend to try a bottle of your great nerve tonic, Peruna, and the results were so gratifying that I am more than pleased to recommend it."

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain and cleanse the system. That's what Peruna does for you. It's a great thing for the nervous system. It's a great thing for the nervous system. It's a great thing for the nervous system.

Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders the system more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says: "For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorders until it seemed that there was nothing to me but a bundle of nerves. I was certainly not irritable; could not sleep, rest or compose myself, and was certainly unfit to take care of a household. I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and today I consider myself in perfect health and strength. My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health. Mrs. Lulu Larmer. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O. vice gratis.

Election.

This year city election did not entuse the voters very much yet a good vote was polled, about 192 total votes were cast. Only one ticket was nominated, the citizen's ticket, the one and only issue in the election seemed to be to grant saloon license to whom and as many applicants as wish to apply and meet the requirements of the city council. For mayor, James Britton received 42 votes in the first ward, 60 in the second, and 74 in the third. Harvey S. Ringland for city treasurer and A. R. Davis for city clerk received about the same vote and J. P. Gaertner councilmen for the 1st ward, D. S. McVicar for the 2nd ward and Lambert Roe for the 3rd ward received about the same vote. A few scattering votes were cast for other candidates but not enough to hardly count against the good endorsement accorded the citizen's caucus nominees. Each of the gentlemen elected will be zealous in the city's best interest and we may expect a rigid enforcement of every law and ordinance. Mr. Britton was mayor at the time the city water works were put in and was so well liked then and his good sound business policy so well met the city's approval that we would have more of it. Wayne is a city of splendid prospects and possibilities if they are properly exploited.

A Story Worth Telling

We never tire of telling the story of Uneeda Biscuit. We do not believe that lovers of good, wholesome food ever tire reading it.

Uneeda Biscuit are the result of two ideas. That soda crackers could be made better than they had ever been made before. That it was possible to convey them to the home fresh, crisp and clean.

The importance of the soda cracker as an article of daily consumption, made this worthy of extraordinary effort. True, many people laughed at the idea of so much thought—time—labor—capital, being devoted to a soda cracker. But the greatest industries of the greatest country in the world have been developed from smaller things than a soda cracker, and so it seemed worth while to make the best soda cracker that could be made and to place it on the table as good as it had been made.

To do the first required the selection of the best materials, of the best equipment, the highest skill. To do the second upset all traditions. The oldest bakers said there was no way to keep a soda cracker good.

That no one expected it any way. That people were satisfied to eat them stale, as they had been in the habit of doing. And so it fell to the lot of younger minds to do this unheard of thing—to keep a soda cracker good until eaten.

The result was the creation of the In-cr-seal Package with red and white seal. An invention that kept out the air, moisture, dust germs, that first retained the natural flavor of the biscuit, keeping it crisp and fresh until it reached the table, and so Uneeda Biscuit became a reality. The little thing that seemed hardly worth while became a great thing that seemed hardly possible.

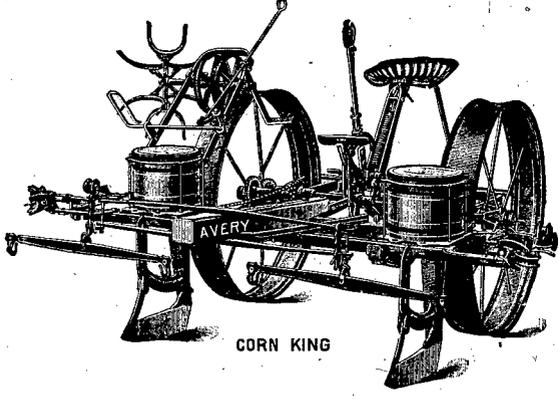

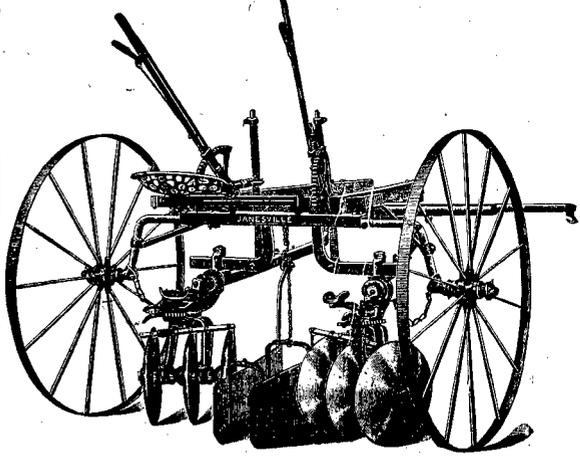

To-day over 300,000,000 packages have been consumed by the thoughtful people of this country and the demand is ever increasing.

That is the story of Uneeda Biscuit. Some day we will tell it over again for the benefit of those who are still "satisfied" with the stale and broken crackers that come in a paper bag, when they can get Uneeda Biscuit whole, fresh, and clean.

The death of Mrs. C. J. Lund Wednesday morning was a surprise to all her friends. She was in poor health and had been for some time but no one thought of it taking such a turn. During the night she aroused Mr. Lund on account of feeling badly, but he was not aware of the fact that she arose again evidently to take medicine and in the morning found her dead at her bedside, she having passed away so quietly and quickly, evidently of heart failure.

Tuesday Prof. J. M. Pile addressed the folks of Wayne at the Baptist church on the subject "Cranks, Fools and Dudes" as announced in this paper last week. It is not often Wayne folks have the pleasure to hear Prof. Pile and they made the most of this opportunity.

- Guaranteed to plow hard, dry ground where all others fail.
- Guaranteed to scour in any soil where any plow will scour.
- Inter changeable—can convert sulky into double, triple, quadruple, or larger by adding extra section or vice versa.
- 50 to 100 per cent less draft than any other plow made.
- No side draft—buy a double gang and you will wish it were tripple—its draft is so easy
- Dealers report, "Sold 21 in thirty days. Never saw plow equal to it." "Sold 28 this fall. Enclosed find order for two car loads for next season."

Pay when you Get Ready

Did you ever stop to think that when you bought clothing and told the merchant to charge it until you got some money, that you were paying from 10% to 25% more than you ought to? Now, you may be one that pays his store accounts in a short time, but if you buy clothing where there they sell it on the principle of pay when you get ready, you will be charged up for the fellow that only pays once a year and the fellow that never pays. If you stop to think you will realize that the merchant who will sell you a suit and let you pay when you get ready must charge more than we do. Why should you pay as much for a suit when you pay cash as another does who don't pay for a year? That is not all. Merchants that sell clothing on time sell a cheaper quality than we do. That is like burning a candle at both ends. It takes lots of money to buy your clothing if you do business where they let you pay when you get ready. Don't do it. See us before you buy your clothing and you will understand why it pays to trade here. Our stock is the largest in Wayne and equal to any stock in a much larger town. Our clothing is all guaranteed to give satisfaction and is in style. We buy direct from the factory in large quantities and for cash, saving you at least 25% on your purchase. We pay no rent and do business with less expense than any house selling clothing in Wayne. We have had longer experience in the clothing business and there is no reason why you can't save money by trading here. Try it and be convinced that you can save money on clothing by trading with us.

FIGHT TO THE LAST

DOMINICAN REBELS ARE DRIVEN OUT OF PAJARITO.

Engagement Was a Fierce One—Many Wounded Die for Want of Assistance—Must Observe Rules of War—The Atlanta Lands Marines.

Santo Domingo, At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning the government troops outside the city attacked the insurgents in the suburb of Pajarito. The most severe engagement since the rebellion broke out ensued, and the insurgents were driven back to this city. The artillery from the fort covered the insurgents' retreat.

The Atlanta has landed fifty marines to protect the American consulate. Santo Domingo: No engagement took place Thursday morning between the government troops and the rebels, but an attack was momentarily expected. The rebels are making great preparations for resistance.

The government gunboat Presidente bombarded the town Wednesday night, and one shell fell inside the yard of the German consulate, but did not explode. The surgeon of the Atlanta assisted in attending to the wounded in the Pajarito fight.

Many of the wounded died for want of timely assistance. The navy department received a report from Commander Turner of the Atlanta, Sunday, giving the most information contained in the above dispatch. He regards the situation as critical. The report is dated April 1, coming via Hayti.

New York: A 14-year-old girl was the heroine in a heroic bravery here Saturday at a tenement house fire in Henry Street, on the east side. The efforts of the plucky girl were unavailing, for after dragging Harris Rothstein, 84 years old, and an invalid, up three flights of stairs, she attempted to get him up a ladder leading to a trap door in the roof, but could not succeed, and she had to flee before the flames to save her own life. The aged man perished, but the three other tenants of the building, who passed the little girl and her charge as they mounted the stairs, but paid no heed to her appeals for help.

Arrest Clouds a Honeymoon.

Chicago: A honeymoon was interrupted by the arrest of B. F. Stall at Frankfort, Tenn., on the charge of fraud in a land deal. Deputy Sheriff Morrison, who made the arrest, gave Stall a few hours to part from his bride, brought him to Chicago, and put him in jail.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Belief that Home Rule for Ireland is Near.

London: Mr. Wyndham, the chief secretary for Ireland, speaking at Manchester Friday night, said he believed that when the bill for the next elections the Tory party would be found ready, and would again carry its flag to victory. Referring to the Irish land bill, Mr. Wyndham declared to believe that it would be repudiated. Ireland, he said, had not enjoyed the opportunities at the disposal of other parts of the empire, being because in 1881 parliament instead of giving her justice, gave her litigation. Furthermore, the last fifty or sixty years, the age of steam and coal, had not been happy or profitable for Ireland, a country lacking in mineral wealth. Apart from the justice of the cause, continued the speaker, it was to England's benefit because in 1881 parliament instead of giving her justice, gave her litigation. Furthermore, the last fifty or sixty years, the age of steam and coal, had not been happy or profitable for Ireland, a country lacking in mineral wealth. Apart from the justice of the cause, continued the speaker, it was to England's benefit because in 1881 parliament instead of giving her justice, gave her litigation.

ANOTHER LEVEE BREAKS.

Mauch Cotton Land Overflowed in East Carroll Parish, Ind. New Orleans: The most serious development of the flood situation Friday was the break in the levee at Hollybrook plantation, owned by James C. Pittman. The crevasse is about six miles below Lake Providence, in east Carroll parish. The levee probably was eighteen feet high, and an attempt will be made to mend it. Efforts, however, will be made to hold the ends.

Much valuable cotton land will be overflowed, but the damage will be principally in delay in getting seed into the ground. The crevasse is reported to be 500 feet wide. Parts of Tebas, Madison, Concordia, Catahoula and Richland parishes, in addition to east Carroll, will be submerged, and water ultimately turning to the Mississippi through the Red River.

A shell fired Wednesday night by the Dominican emperor Presidente, which fell on the side of President Vasquez, fell on the German consulate. A battle lasting three hours took place Wednesday morning between the government troops and the revolutionists on the banks of the River Ozama, which flows into the Caribbean Sea at Santo Domingo. THE ORIGIN OF EASTER.

OSPERA, THE PAGAN GODDESS OF EASTER.

EASTER, the oldest church festival, comes down to us from the ancient Hebrews.

It is from this that the Easter egg custom springs, and centuries ago, even before the birth of Christ, colored eggs were given and received by celebrants of the feast.

The fact that the Anglo-Saxon name of April was Esternonath induces some to believe that Easter is of pure Saxon origin, but Germany, where the month is called Ostermonath, seems to have a prior claim upon the word.

With the Hebrews the festival was called Pasch, and the name still lives, with slight alterations, among many nations. The French call the festival Pâques; the Dutch term it Paschen, the Danes Paaske, and the Swedes Pask.

Accordingly, councils met in all the countries, as well as at Rome, but, alas, for visions of harmony, they could not agree.

Many warm and even bitter discussions still continued on the subject of Easter celebrations, and it finally led to the great Emperor, Constantine, in 325, issuing an order for the dispute to be settled by the Council of Nice.

The first sessions met in the church, and as the council continued its work the place of meeting was transferred to the imperial palace, where special apartments were reserved for this august body.

On the fourth day of the first lunar month the Jews observed with all the solemnity and regard for the Mosaic law the Feast of the Passover; thus they celebrated the death of Christ as represented by the Paschal Lamb.

After continuing their debates, prayer and, for several months, the ecclesiastical dignitaries unimpaired that the bitterly waged war of dispute was settled.

The word Pasch is derived from a Pagan goddess of the early Teutons called Ostera. The German word for Easter is Ostern, and some philologists maintain that both the German and English words come from the ancient Saxon word Oster, or Ostren, meaning "rising."

Ostern was worshipped very generally in Northern Germany, and it is believed that the fame of the goddess spread to England, where the Saxons joined in worshipping her.

and the pint due last week, and me wid-out a dollar in me pocket, and the landlord thritenin' to turn us out this blisid day if it's not paid.

"Who is your landlord, Bridget?" "Deacon Green, miss."

"And what is the rent?" "Tin dollars, miss," wailed Bridget.

"Oh, the blisid Vargin, and how am I to git tin dollars betwixt now and to-morrow night? And the childer wid no breakfast!"

It was only a moment that Nellie hesitated. Straight to her room she went, and taking from the drawer the precious pink parcel she walked swiftly to her cousin Angela's home.

"I've concluded to accept your offer, Angie," she said, as she threw it into her lap.

"I might you'd come to your senses," said Angela. "Say, if you want a hat go down to Stewart's and get that gray chiffon with the violets. It's a perfect dream!"

Nellie almost sobbed as she hurried back toward home, her purse enriched by $25. She made straight for Deacon Green's.

"I've come to pay Mrs. O'Leary's rent, Deacon," said she. "Will you please give me receipt?"

The deacon looked somewhat abashed, and muttering something apologetic about "heavy expenses and hard times," made out the receipt which Nellie accepted, and thanking him hurried on to the nearest grocery, where she ordered a bill of groceries to be delivered at Tim O'Leary's that cause the clerk to open his eyes in mild astonishment.

She reserved $5 of the money for a final call, which she paid to their own family physician, who, after listening to Nellie's story, promised to look after Tim until he was able to go to work again.

Eight people were happy that night, and as Nellie stopped at the O'Leary's next morning on her way to church and saw the children's happy faces and heard the heartfelt thanks of the honest woman and her helpful husband already bent for from the little encouragement that had brightened their apparently hopeless prospects, she was more than repaid for her sacrifice.

Her cousin Angela's look of astonishment and disgust as she entered the church—posing airily in her new arrayed in an imported gown and artistic hat, and no terrors for her, and as the beautiful notes of the Easter anthem rose and swelled around her and she inhaled the perfume of the lilies which drifted to her from the altar, she bowed her head upon her hands in silent prayer at peace with all the world.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

When the nations of the west, or Europe, were converted to Christianity, the sentiment of the egg was universally accepted as a suggestive symbol of their faith in the risen Savior, and it has ever since remained the most favored figure of the Easter festivities all over the continent.

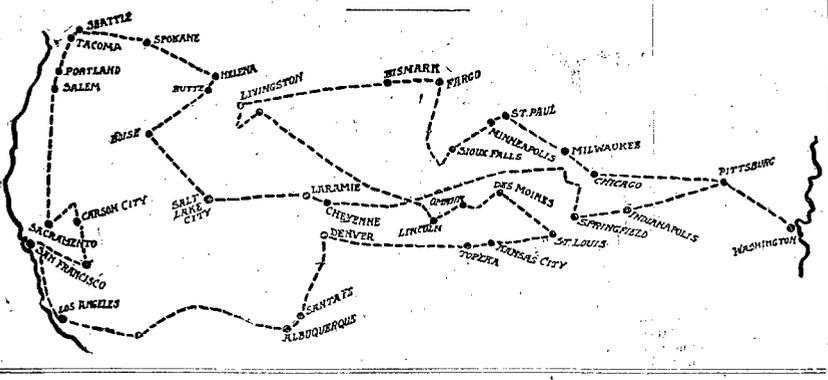

The children, who rule the heart and home of mankind, are doubtless responsible for the keeping alive of this old custom, and they demand the gift of the rabbit, with his nest of beautiful eggs, on the glad Easter morn, just as they love and long for the coming of dear Santa on Christmas eve.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S ITINERARY.

FEATURES OF THE JOURNEY WHICH HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALED BY A CHIEF EXECUTIVE

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, on his present extraordinary tour, will travel two months, cover almost 14,000 miles, stop at 231 places, and make something like 250 speeches.

The train in which President Roosevelt travels is the most handsomely equipped of any in which the nation's head has ever traveled.

In Yellowstone Park, where he will spend two weeks, the President will give himself up to rest and recreation.

In Colorado President Roosevelt will view the majesty of Pike's Peak. In Arizona the presidential train is to make a short halt while the party, driven along precipitous roadways, will gaze on the thin stream of the Colorado River a mile below them.

MACEDONIAN DISTURBANCES. Which Do Not Fall Far Short of the Dignity of War. While the world at large does not dignify in the name of war the present disturbances in Macedonia, the thinking mind will find it difficult to discern any practical difference.

PRISON STATISTICS

Table with columns for 'Total', 'Discharged by expiration of time', 'Committed by the governor', etc. Includes data for 1902 and 1901.

Extracts from President Roosevelt's Speech in Chicago. We hold that our interests in this hemisphere are greater than those of any European power possibly can be, and that our duty to ourselves and to the weaker republics who are our neighbors requires us to see that none of the great military powers from across the seas shall encroach upon the territory of the American republics or acquire control thereover.

On hand Nov. 30, 1902... 35. On parole Dec. 1, 1900... 73. Paroled during the biennium... 28.

On hand Nov. 30, 1902... 8. There are eight females—two white and six negro—and 278 males in prison. The total negro population is 34.

There is a homely old adage which runs: "Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far." If the American nation will speak softly, and yet build, and keep a big stick of the highest quality, a thorough efficient navy, the Monroe doctrine will go far.

Not only is the legislation recently enacted effective, but in my judgment it is an unpracticable to attempt more. Nothing of value is to be expected from ceaseless agitation for radical and extreme legislation.

There are no more against organizations of capital than against organizations of labor. We welcome both, demanding only that each shall do right and shall remember its duty to the republic.

Nelson and Linkhart, acting for the bondsmen, offered to pay $8,000 at once and the balance September 1, 1903. The latter proposition was considered for some time by the commissioners but not deeming the parties present able to bind the bondsmen to the pledge; and they not being willing to assume the entire responsibility on Sept. 1, 1903, if the amount was not forthcoming; and as the $8,000 would merely lay idle in the banks until the full amount was paid;

Osmond, Nebr., April 7.—Robbers, supposed to be four in number, dynamited the safe of the Security State Bank this morning shortly after midnight, but were driven away by citizens before they could make connection with the booty. The report of the explosion awakened a number of citizens, the first one to arrive at the bank being J. C. Saunders. He was seen and ordered to throw up his hands by the men on the inside. The robbers then opened fire on him, and Saunders ran escaping unhurt. Saunders made a run to the fire house, arousing the firemen and rang the bell, bringing out the whole town. While this was going on the men were preparing to put another charge in the safe, but they saw trouble coming and made a hurried escape. It is believed that they took a team out of town, and probably are in hiding somewhere near. Searching parties are looking for them, but at noon nothing had been heard from them. There was $4,500 in the bank, but the robbers got nothing.

Miss May Claybaugh came up from Wayne Saturday and opened her spring term of school at Maze Center on Monday.... County Supt. This will give new buildings to both the newly formed districts.... J. L. Mr. Heeren has pinned his faith to the future of Wayne county and intends to enjoy all the comforts and conveniences in the home he is building at present. The work is being pushed as rapidly as possible.... Miss Jennie Vennerberg of Wayne, spent several days the first of the week on a visit with her sister Mrs. Nels Johnson one mile south west of Carroll.... Miss Adist, the teacher of the Isaacs' school west of Carroll, visited her parents at Wayne Saturday. The Misses Margaret and Roseana Isaacs accompanied her to Wayne returning the same day.—Carroll Index.

As will be seen by the commissioners proceedings in this issue, the county commissioners have brought suit against the Bond Company and Mr. Ziegler to collect the amount of his shortage. At the meeting held last week two propositions were submitted to the board which were rejected and suit brought. Mr. Ziegler made the following propositions: On April 1, to the commissioners, after consulting the attorneys for the county, rejected all the propositions and brought suit. This suit will establish the respective liability of the bond company and the bondsmen and we believe the action of the commissioners will receive the indorsement of the tax-payers in general as considerable time had already been granted without satisfactory results. We hope that the amount can be raised to September, as the bondsmen seemed to think it could, and that the expense of a lawsuit will be saved the county, the bond company, the bondsmen and Mr. Ziegler.—Cedar County News.

LOCAL NEWS.

John E. Hanson, of Concord, was in Wayne Wednesday.

Notice the advertisement of the Hereford Sale in this issue.

The weather the past week has been unusually cold and windy, in fact it is a backward spring and the acreage of spring wheat is small accordingly many fields intended for wheat were sown to oats or will be planted to corn. Grass is starting nicely and the soil is in good condition to bring good crops this year.

Rev. C. J. Ringer, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran church of this city has been here three years and in that time his work has been most beneficial to that church. At his beginning the membership was forty-five and now it is one hundred and is steadily increasing, a number joining that church Easter Sunday and thirty since January 1st.

The Bayer Sisters Millinery opening last week was a grand success in every way. Their models were the finest ever seen in Wayne, and the most stylish ladies of the city and county selected their Easter hats there. They are showing a large and beautiful line of spring and summer millinery as prices not one half usually charged by city milliners for the same.

Mrs. E. J. Raymond went down to Dakota City Thursday morning for a couple of days visit with friends in that town.

E. Cunningham came home from South Dakota Saturday and says the trade that the newspapers reported for him was a fake sprung by some correspondent of the Sioux City papers from which source the Wayne papers were informed.

St. Mary's Catholic church is being improved by the addition of fourteen feet to the main structure and back of this a commodious altar room and sacristy. Contractor Weber has the work well under way and will soon complete it with the good force of men at work. This is a much needed addition to St. Mary's church as the congregation is much too large for the old building.

Saturday night about the first doze after retiring a strenuous rap rap on the front door of the writer's domicile acquainted him with our city marshal who begged to inquire "If John Hufford lived there?" "He did, but had moved," and Mr. Miner explained he had found the 2 Johns' store door unlocked and wished to inform them of it. Whereby hangs a story of interest to us who enoaze serenely throughout the night safe in the security of our city's night watchman City Marshal Miner says it is no unusual thing to find a door unlocked. The thing is easy to do and the most careful ones sometimes make mistakes. Mr. Miner has been city marshal for fourteen years and just to know what people thought of him circulated a petition among the business men of the city, and the seventy-five or more who signed it gave a testimonial most complimentary to Mr. Miner. The duties of a city marshal are not the most pleasant. Enforcing the dog tax ordinance is one of these bug-a-boos to life's eyes, honor even in a plous town like Wayne where the dogs are a bit shy and of the brass color breed. And low plain jags are not in evidence to the extent some towns afford. When the would be law breaker starts that usually lands the owner in the cooler our municipal trustee is of to his home and Wayne maintains a reputation for civility that is the envy of real "civilization" towns in any millinery for the same.

Second Cousin Sarah

It was dark when he returned to the house, and he closed the shutters and barred the door very carefully before he sat down by the fire to reflect upon his next step. He had been reflecting on that all day, without seeing his way too clearly to the results on which he had set his heart—a large sum of money, and a new life abroad to enjoy it in.

He would not go upstairs yet awhile—another hour would be of advantage to him, and he must wait. The bank at Worcester was shut, and there would be no getting money till tomorrow morning—before that time came she would sign the check, and remain a prisoner in Jackson's button factory until time had been allowed for him to cash it. That was the end of the brilliant scheme which he had planned out like an artist.

Suddenly there was a loud knocking at the door, and Peterson sprang up, with his hand shaking on the back of the chair. He reached his hand toward the candle and extinguished the flame, as his first resource against an unseen enemy. Then he crept on tiptoe toward the door.

"Let me in," said a voice from the hall. "Tom Eastbell!" ejaculated Peterson. He opened the door, and dragged the applicant for admittance into the house by the collar of his coat—a man dressed in the skin by heavy rain.

"You mustn't shout," said Peterson; "why couldn't you stop at Sedge Hill? How dare you come intermeddling? Didn't you leave it all to me?"

"Here—let go my throat—let a fellow speak. What are you doing in the dark? Where are they all? Is Sarah here? Has she signed the check?"

Peterson released his hold and looked into the room, and sat down shivering by the fire. His companion and adviser relighted the candle, and held it to his face.

"Why did you come?" "For safety. Oh, Ned, I shall be hanged. I am ever so glad that I have done dead, and everybody thinks I have done it. Here's a blessed go for an inventor's man! I never touched her, upon my soul; she died right off, bang, in the picture gallery, and it was nothing to do with me. I wouldn't have thought of such a thing."

"Dead? The old woman dead?" said Peterson, surprised again at this avowal. "Oh!—yes," he said, shuddering more strongly. "Her eyes opened suddenly; Ned, and she was off. I shall never forget it. And then the beast of a woman, Hartley, came in when I screamed, and said that I had murdered her. I was talking her out of making a will, when she died—that's all. Oh! let's go to London."

"Tom," said Peterson with excitement, "you must go back. You must not leave everything to that Culwick. The old woman has died naturally—the doctor will prove that—and you have nothing to fear."

"Oh! haven't I? That's all you know about it?" "You accused idiot! don't you see that you are rich? That Sarah Eastbell was only between you and a colossal fortune?"

"—and Sarah Eastbell is dead, too?" "Sarah dead, too?" screamed Tom Eastbell in his new excitement; "oh, don't say that! It can't be."

"Hush! Keep it quiet; it is an eternal secret between you and me; but she sprang out of the boat suddenly last night, they tell me, and was drowned. In a day or two they will find her in the Sea, and you will be heir-at-law."

"They'll say I killed the couple of them." "Sarah ran away from home—everybody knows that—and came to harm by accident. There is nothing more natural."

"Poor Sally! She was a good sort," said Tom; "and she—she's dead then. That's good news; it was quite an accident for nobody meant to kill her."

"Get back in haste—at any cost. Say you were distracted, and did not know what you were doing—that you have been in search of Culwick—or a doctor. Get back."

"Suppose they take me up for killing my grandmother; that's what I'm afraid of."

"Get back; you are safe. Get back, fool, to all that wealth."

Edward Peterson's excitement was greater than Thomas Eastbell's now. He thrust him from the house; he locked the door after him; he tottered back to the room.

Tom Eastbell would be rich—immensely rich—if his sister Sarah were removed from all the troubles of this world; Tom Eastbell in his power—at his mercy for many past offenses—a weak fool who could rule implicitly, and get money quickly by.

With the light in his hand, he proceeded with a wonderful steadiness to step up the stairs. A strange specimen of a villain this—for he went into his daughter's room first, and said, "Poor Bess—you have gone for good then, and walked out again, and up the remaining flight, with a very sorrowful countenance."

He drew the key from his pocket, unlocked the door, strode in, and stopped suddenly—a man struck, as it were, into stone by his amazement.

The room was empty!

CHAPTER XXIV.

Reuben Culwick did not reach Sedge Hill till a late hour, when the blinds were down before the window of the great house. He did not dream of death at home while he had been abroad in pursuit of the living, and in the deep thought born of his baffled search, he strode up the broad garden path without being struck by the blank aspect of the main.

"How did it occur? Tell me everything!" he asked, as he went into the picture gallery, and Hartley followed him. The story was related, and he listened patiently. He heard of his aunt's death, and of Thomas Eastbell's flight—the suspicion which attached to Thomas Eastbell until the doctor's arrival, and the gentlemen's belief in the natural termination to the life and cares of the old lady—of the inquest which must follow her decease.

He walked up and down the great picture gallery in his old restless fashion, planning for the morrow. Suddenly he quitted the gallery, and went upstairs to Aunt Eastbell's room, at the door of which Hartley sat, as if the poor old woman needed protection still.

"Why are you waiting here now?" he asked the servant. "If you please, Mr. Thomas Eastbell has come back again. He has been looking for you, and for the doctor, he says—and I thought that I would sit here as usual."

he remembers well. It was his last duty to the dead woman, and to the wishes of yesterday, before the tragedy of life fell on them like a pall.

He opened the iron box in which the will had been deposited, and where a glance assured him that it lay undisturbed, and then he closed and locked the box again, while the thought came to him that it might never be of use to Second-cousin Sarah.

"Has that man come back because he thinks so, too?" he muttered; "is it possible that this should be the end of my father's money—at your, your worst heart, that never was made happy by its acquisition? If I have done you wrong, old soul, I pray forgiveness now," he murmured.

"Amn," said a deep voice at his side, and he turned at the solemn response, for a shadow was unperceived. A thin woman, clad in shabby black, stood in the doorway looking at him.

"Lucy Jennings!" he exclaimed. "You telegraphed to me this morning," she said, advancing; "you asked me many questions, and I have come to answer them in person."

"You, you, Lucy," he said, holding out his hand to her, "for I am in great trouble."

"They went out of the room together. Reuben Culwick looked the door, and gave the key to Hartley, after which Lucy and he descended to the hall, Lucy calling and grave."

"What do you know of the Petersons? What became of them after leaving London?" asked Reuben eagerly; "have you a clue to their address?"

"I think I have." "How did you find it?" "Among my circle of penitents and of poor mortals struggling out of crime there are many links of life to the dark world. I can't promise to help me at once. Patience. If Sarah Eastbell had been lured away by these Petersons, the clue to their haunt has been already pointed out."

"Heaven bless you, Lucy!" "Probably I bring a blessing to you—it is in there."

She pointed to the door of the drawing room, and he said eagerly as he strode toward it: "Sarah?"

"Not she. It is something you lost before your second-cousin, and it is something much to heart in losing. It is something that changed you—and from which dated your habits and your suspicions of my family—all, may be your own flesh and blood, for what I know."

He left Lucy Jennings, and went with quick steps into the drawing room, where on the sofa lay a child asleep, a poorly clad little girl of five years old, with her hair lying by her side, and a tangled mass of fair, wavy curls thrust back from her face.

"Tots!" he cried in his astonishment. "I met her in the streets of Worcester, near the postoffice," said Lucy. "It was raining hard, and she was crying because a lady had not come to fetch her. Her father had sent her to Worcester, she said."

"Will she remember me?" "It is rather unlikely—it is impossible." "She was very young, but she went away, poor Tots," said Reuben, sadly regarding her. "Yes, I suppose it is impossible."

"She came with me in all confidence. I told her that I would take her to my friends, and she believed me."

"You are very kind, Lucy," said Reuben. "How is it that you do me these good services, and yet dislike me so much?"

"I dislike the pride and anger in you," answered Lucy, "and they have turned me against you. I have had my great work to think of lately—not of the petty differences of eighteen months ago. See, the child is waking."

Reuben turned to the little girl, who had struggled into a sitting posture on the sofa, and was looking at them, all eyes—all blue eyes, too—as Tots had looked at him in Hope street, years ago.

"Tots," he said, advancing to her, "Tots, old lady—don't you know me?"

His manner was too impetuous, and his quick strides toward her were so symbolic of punishment for some offense which she in her ignorance had committed, that the child sprang up and ran to Lucy Jennings, burying her face in the skirts of her protector.

"The child is frightened of you," said Lucy calmly; "let her be a while."

"Why, Tots, it's Uncle Roo," he cried, "old Uncle Roo—you know?"

The child still clung to Lucy's skirts, and would have none of his affection. He gave up, and walked away to the window.

"You see how this kind of love lasts," said Lucy bitterly, "and yet you value it so highly."

"Because it set a high value upon me," he answered quickly.

"It is dead."

"It will live again—it will come back."

"And if not," Lucy answered, "there is your second-cousin to console you."

shirt collar; his throat had begun to swell suddenly, and he felt uncomfortable.

"Oh," he said, "if that's it you're on a wrong."

Tots had looked round at the sound of his voice some moments since, but he had not noticed her till then, and then his voice uttered her name, and his eyes protruded in amazement. He did not ask any further questions of Miss Jennings. The child belonged to Edward Peterson. He and his wife had the charge of her once, and grown tired of her, and lost her in a Cambridge street, where Reuben had found her, and Edward Peterson had discovered her a year or so afterward, and taken her from the Jennings; but he could not stop to explain that now. A few days ago that child was at Jackson's button factory, and she must have come to Sedge Hill with the news. He was caught in a trap again. He knew it had not been safe to return, but that fool Peterson had persuaded him. They knew all, and were getting him into a line by degrees; everything might have been discovered, for what he knew to the contrary. He must "cut it," at any risk.

He went into the passage and closed the door behind him. He took down a hat from the tree in the hall and put it on. It was Reuben's hat, and went over his eyes, and was altogether a bad fit; but the sooner he was off the better, and where he had put his own hat he could not recollect in the present confusion of his mind.

He went on tiptoe to the front door, and drew back the heavy bolts and the big lock. He opened the door and let in the wind and rain—and Sarah Eastbell!

Yes, it was his sister, with a shawl on her hair, and her face, which was wild with weeping, from it. She had come back—she knew all—she was done for!

"Tom, you villain!" she shrieked forth, at first sight of him.

Thomas Eastbell went down on his knees at the same moment as Reuben came from the drawing room.

"Oh, Reuben, take care of me," Sarah murmured, as she went fearlessly to the friendly shelter of his arms; "I have no one else."

"She could never take care of herself," muttered the inflexible Lucy, as she followed Reuben Culwick into the hall.

It was as Mary Holland had said, and Sarah Eastbell was back in her own house.

COLONEL TOLD THE TRUTH.

Got Half a Hog and Won Case for the Negro Who Stole It.

"The West has some great lawyers," said the Missouri colonel to the crowd that had been discussing rapid-fire cases in court.

"Oh, I don't know," said the young lawyer from Hackensack; "suppose you name a few of them?"

"Well," replied the colonel, "there's old Jeff Thomson and Zeb Blackburn and Col. Ike Hilton, all of Christian County, Missouri, and any one of them can give you Easterners every spade in the deck, except one and then you."

"Take Col. Ike Hilton, for instance. Why, once when he was both lawyer and witness. It was the full term of court at the county seat of Christian County. The first case on the docket was that of a negro charged with stealing a fattening hog."

"There were not many negroes in Christian County, for the simple reason that they had to stand for about everything that happened in the criminal line, and consequently got considerably thinned out. The one in this case was the only negro in the township where the man lived who lost the hog, and when it disappeared he had him arrested on general principles. That time it happened that the negro was guilty."

"As soon as Link—his name was Lincoln Washington, but they called him Link—for short—as soon as Link was arrested he sent for Col. Ike, and as Link owned a little farm and had some live stock, Col. Ike responded readily."

"Link," said Col. Ike, "I guess you got that hog."

"Link was silent, for he did not know whether it would be safe to confess."

"Come, now," said Col. Ike, slapping him on the back, "you got that hog, and if you don't own up I can't take your case."

"Link squirmed uneasily."

"Yaas, sah," he said, "Ah guess Ah has, Col. Ike."

"That's the stuff!" replied Col. Ike, reassuringly. "Where is the hog now?"

"It is in a little 'ard' 'n' er hangin' in mah smokehouse," answered Link.

"All right, Link; now let me tell you what to do. I'm going to get you loose, and as soon as you go home I want you to cut that hog exactly in two and bring me half. Do you hear? Then you have me summoned for a witness."

"Link heard and agreed, and the next day there was fresh meat at Col. Ike's house."

"When the case was called Link appeared, wearing a serene smile. The court was both surprised and impressed to find that he had such an influential witness. Two other witnesses were called first, for a bluff, and then Col. Ike took the stand."

"In response to the customary question, 'What do you know about this case?' Col. Ike swore pointblank to Link's innocence."

"I know," he said, "that Link Washington here has no more of that hog than I have!"

"Of course, such testimony was invaluable, and Link was not only acquitted, but exonerated."

"Now," continued the traveling man, according to the New York Times, "we'll hear from the East."

His Explanation.

Why are people who buy gold bricks invariably farmers?" asked the man who assumes superiority.

"I dunno," answered Mr. Cornstossel, "unless it's because farmers are the only folks nowadays who have money enough to make it worth while for sharpers to bother with 'em."—Washington Star.

Almost Right.

"What do you know about this case?" asked the lawyer.

"Nothing," replied the witness. "I'm the expert."

Subsequently his testimony proved conclusively that he knew less than nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

LONG AGO.

I once knew all the birds that came And nested in our orchard trees; For every flower I had a name— My friends were woodchucks, toads and bees.

I knew where thrived in yonder glen What plants would soothe a stone-bruised toe— Oh, I was very learned then— But that was very long ago.

I knew the spot upon the hill Where the checkerberries could be found; I knew the rushes near the mill, Where pickerel lay that weighed a pound!

I knew the wood—the very tree— Where lived the poaching, snarling crew, And all the woods and crows knew me— But that was very long ago.

And, pining for the joys of youth, I tread the old familiar spot, Only to learn the solemn truth— I have forgotten, am forgot, Yet here's this youngster at my knee

Knows all the things I used to know; To think I once was wise as he— But that was very long ago.

I know it's folly to complain Of whatso'er the Fates decree; Yet, were not wishes all in vain, I tell you what my wish should be: I'd wish to be a boy again.

Back with the friends I used to know; For I was, oh! so happy then— But that was very long ago.

AT THE OLD FARM

A PRETTY rosy-cheeked girl, with round bare arms, was seated on a rump step of the farmhouse piazza, busily shelling beans, exchanging sentences occasionally with a stalwart young fellow who was ostensibly shingling the barn near by.

The air was heavy with perfume of wistaria and cinnamon roses, while from the hedge came the soft notes of a wood thrush. A pair of tiny humming birds shimmering in the sunlight darted to and fro, plunging their long bills into the blossoms of the vine that covered the porch, while over all hovered the sweet silence of a summer afternoon.

The young man had given up all pretense of work and lay stretched out in the sun on the sloping roof with hands closed behind his head, at peace with the world and himself.

"I say, Nan, I wish I owned this farm; it's a jolly old place."

"Well, it will all be yours some day, Tom, and then I suppose you will send your poor 'cousin by marriage' flyin'."

"Take Col. Ike Hilton, for instance. Why, once when he was both lawyer and witness. It was the full term of court at the county seat of Christian County. The first case on the docket was that of a negro charged with stealing a fattening hog."

"There were not many negroes in Christian County, for the simple reason that they had to stand for about everything that happened in the criminal line, and consequently got considerably thinned out. "Link was silent, for he did not know whether it would be safe to confess."

"Link squirmed uneasily."

"Yaas, sah," he said, "Ah guess Ah has, Col. Ike."

"That's the stuff!" replied Col. Ike, reassuringly. "Where is the hog now?"

"It is in a little 'ard' 'n' er hangin' in mah smokehouse," answered Link.

"All right, Link; now let me tell you what to do. I'm going to get you loose, and as soon as you go home I want you to cut that hog exactly in two and bring me half. Do you hear? Then you have me summoned for a witness."

"Link heard and agreed, and the next day there was fresh meat at Col. Ike's house."

"When the case was called Link appeared, wearing a serene smile. The court was both surprised and impressed to find that he had such an influential witness. Two other witnesses were called first, for a bluff, and then Col. Ike took the stand."

"In response to the customary question, 'What do you know about this case?' Col. Ike swore pointblank to Link's innocence."

"I know," he said, "that Link Washington here has no more of that hog than I have!"

"Of course, such testimony was invaluable, and Link was not only acquitted, but exonerated."

"Now," continued the traveling man, according to the New York Times, "we'll hear from the East."

REAL DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution.

DAUGHTERS of the Revolution who are such in fact as well as name are dwindling in numbers as the years increase, but Wisconsin contains two, both retaining excellent memories of the continental soldiers who were their fathers. One is Mrs. Betsy Robinson Meade, of Waldo, Sheboygan County, and the other Mrs. Jane Powers Walker, of Waupun.

Mrs. Meade's father was Peter Robinson, a soldier under Benedict Arnold. She was born in 1811 and is now an enthusiastic "daughter" in the society registers as well as in fact. Her recollections of her father are interesting side lights on a great struggle. They are not parts of history. They belong to the story of the life of the private soldier in the long struggle.

Her father was with Arnold when the treachery which was to have delivered West Point to the English was discovered. He was with that American general during the period of starvation which his soldiers underwent.

"I have often heard my father tell," said Mrs. Meade, "of how Arnold's soldiers were nearly starved to death. He himself became so weak that he could hardly stand, and he saw hardly men lie prone on the ground only to be aroused when hunger drove them frantic."

Of this period Mrs. Meade's son, C. R. Meade, of Plymouth, Wis., said: "I was with my grandfather a great deal during the last two years of his life and he told me of an incident during the time he and the other soldiers so nearly died of starvation. One day matters came to such a pass that the men could hardly stand for lack of food. About half a mile from the camp was a farmhouse, where he knew that the housewife kept a cow. He determined to reach that farmhouse at about the time the woman would be through milking and beg for a drink of milk. With great difficulty he reached it. He was so weak that he could not walk. He had to crawl. The woman had just finished and had the milk in a bucket. He asked her for a drink and she said she had nothing for Tories."

"At this added insult he fairly broke down and cried. It was the reflection of the suspicions that people round about were already casting on Arnold, and, by indirection, on his troops. The woman remained firm in her refusal and he dragged himself back to camp, weaker than he was when he started the trip."

At the close of the war Peter Robinson applied for and secured his pension. One of the signatures on the pension papers is an interesting one. It is the name of Enoch Crosby, the original of "Harvey Birch" in Cooper's novel "The Spy," who was a personal friend of Mrs. Meade's father. She is the sole survivor of a family of ten.

Mrs. Walker was born in Ferrisburg, Vt., in 1810. She is the daughter of John Powers, one of the minute men who fought the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill. He was 27 years old when he enlisted in the Continental army with six brothers, one of whom was killed during the war. Mrs. Walker's grandfather also was with the American troops in the war. She is the only survivor of a family of sixteen children. Both Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Meade are members of the Fort Atkinson chapter, D. A. R.

Among the hills of Clark county and another one near Ferdinand, Dubois county, are the only ones remaining, and the latter has been weatherboarded and plastered until it no longer resembles the old-time temple of learning.

The day of the master, of switches, and strenuous instruction in the three R's is no more. Now our progeny is ruled by petticoats, persuasion and instructed in the mysteries of so-called "fads." The log schoolhouse, at its start, was but a primitive apology, and he sold for twenty-five cents each. At Yonkers his purse was light, and his bills were heavy.

I resolved to rise at dawn and sell enough pictures to pay my bills, if I had to sell them at cost, I set to work. By one o'clock I had visited every shop, store and Chinese laundry, and was talking hoarsely to a corner grocer, who sat on a keg of mackerel sampling Limburger cheese. I offered a picture for fifteen cents, but the reduction in price did not interest him.

"I want not a picture at any price!" he declared.

"I lack fifteen cents of the amount of my hotel bill," I urged. "I am in dire straits."

His reply was weak, but the cheese was strong enough to help him out. My mental magazine had but a single chance left, and I fired that.

"Isn't it worth fifteen cents to know a fool when you see one?"

"Ye-es, I think it is," answered the man, "and if you will write it on the picture, I buy him."

Anyone who sees any of these disparaging letters should remember that it is railway and real estate interests who have from purely selfish reasons organized a campaign to stem the flow to Canada. If Canada were half as bad as represented there would be no need of such an organization. The fact that such exists is of itself a magnification of the evils of Canada. Finally, it should not be forgotten that the letters published are brimful of falsehoods and that 87,000 satisfied Americans in the Canadian West constitute a living proof that such is the case.

Doing Better. A very plain man in Glasgow has a very pretty daughter. One day she was sitting on his knee right before a looking glass, and he contemplated the reflection of her two faces and asked: "Papa, did God make me?" "Yes, dear," he replied. "And did he make you?" "Yes."

Looking again in the mirror she drew a long breath. "Oh, is this young Astoria that is so intrusive?" "It is not," Miss Knadrillion—Oh, he comes from poor, but fairly honest people. Miss Despillion—Why, I never heard of him or his family? Miss Quadrillion—No, they never amount to much. I heard his grand father was only a simple billionaire!—Detroit: To-Day.

DESIGN FOR MOVING SIDEWALKS TO RELIEVE CONGESTION IN CHICAGO STREETS.

Moving sidewalks are the latest proposal to relieve the congestion in the "down-town" part of Chicago. The Multiple Speed and Traction Company, of Chicago, which owns the patents and which proposes to solve the problem, suggests the building in a subway of three parallel moving platforms, one going at the rate of three miles, another at the rate of six miles, and the third at the rate of nine miles an hour. The fast moving platform is furnished with seats and the passengers can step from one to the other without being jolted. It is calculated that a triplex sidewalk of this kind will be capable of transporting 68,000 persons an hour.

New Tailor Shop For Wayne

Believing that the people of Wayne county will patronize a new enterprise that is strictly up to date, we have made arrangements with ED. V. PRICE, of Chicago, to do our cutting and designing. It is now generally conceded that Ed. V. Price is the most successful tailor in Chicago, making clothing to measure. For more than twenty years we had a tailor shop in connection with our store, but we had to give way to the improved and up-to-date way of making men's clothing. The old way of making suits to order is too slow and expensive for the present generation. Styles change too quickly and it makes it too expensive to dress in style and have your suits made by a tailor the old way. Ed. V. Price has a system that never fails to fit a customer if the measure is taken by an experienced tailor. We have had the experience in taking measures and you take no chances in leaving your measure with us. If you are not pleased with any suit we make for you, you will please us by saying so and the suit will be returned. Now don't get this mixed up with the book business that so many have, but try the new way of conducting an up-to-date tailor shop. Our samples are large enough so you can see the goods plainly. Our prices are reasonable, from $15 to $25. If we fail to please you, don't take the suit. Give this new enterprise a trial if you want a suit made to order.

The new revenue law provides for a county assessor in each county with salary from $200 to $1200 according to population. In Wayne county the salary will be $600 and the office will be a good one for a man of the right ability who can devote a few months each year to the work of assessing the real estate and looking after the deputies who will list the personal property. Wm. Wittler of Wayne is aspiring for the office and is so for the only one we know of.

Omaha is in the throes of a political warfare between the Rosewater-Moore republicans and the anti-Rosewater or anti-machine faction who bolted the city convention and nominated a bolter's ticket Monday, headed by Benson for mayor. The probabilities are the democrats will elect the mayor the same as they did the congressman last fall when Rosewater went after Dave Mercer's scalp and Hitchcock carried off the honors. And probably the Mercer faction are identified with the Anti-Moore faction at work at present.

It is to the everlasting credit of President Roosevelt that the affairs of today are adjusting themselves satisfactorily to all concerned. The attitude of the coal barons and the Morgan-Rockefeller-Hill class was inconsistent and the courage of Roosevelt as a leader in the solution of the differences between capital and labor and between corporations and the people has put many of these matters in a clearer light and nearer solution than a few months ago. Idle money earns no dividends and idle hands earn no bread—they must work together and in harmony. Corporations have no rights not delegated them by the people from whom they derive their patronage—they must stand in respectful and respect commanding relations. President Roosevelt brought suit against the Northern Securities Co. and defeated the merging of trans continental railway lines and now the Morgan interests say they will abide by the decision of the court and respect the first and only interpretation of the Sherman anti-trust law of 1890, for the enforcement of which all parties have prayed for and demanded of both democratic and republican administrations for thirteen years. It is not the lack of laws so much as it is the lack of enforcement. We find a Roosevelt only once in a generation.

Admiral Dewey has done some talking lately that aroused a feeling of resentment in the German empire, some little reflections upon the German navy that may be a little prompted by the incident at Manila bay. We have headed off German ambition in the western hemisphere in several instances under the Monroe doctrine and we have encouaged heavily upon the world's trade in many instances formerly largely given to Germany. Not only these, but we have sold to the German nation our breadstuffs, meats and machinery in excess of our imports from that country owing to our high tariff. Our policy has made us prosper immensely and Germany has in the last few years placed certain embargoes upon our pork and beef and made certain tariff laws purely retaliatory and in a degree of self protection. It has been evident for some time a little feeling is aroused against us in Germany and in this country a like feeling towards Germany. It is time it stopped. The Germanic blood that is so large a part of our national life and regards patriotically the land of its adoption can not but regret this idle talk of a test of gun metal with Emperor William's navy. There will be no war with Germany now nor at any future time. It is an economic question solely. Germany is over populated, seeks lands and resources under control of the German flag, seeks profitable markets and industrial expansion as well as territorial expansion and is no doubt jealous of us. But we have a right to frame our tariff policy, we see that German immigrants to our shores appreciate it and profit by it and ours is a country of development reserved for those who adopt our national life. But our national difference remains—the Monroe Doctrine, but it is likely Germany will defer to the United States in this as in the past.

Mrs. C. J. Lund.
Died April 8, 1903, at her home in this city, May Louisa, wife of Charles J. Lund, aged 48 years, 11 months and 14 days, of heart failure resulting from continued delicate health for several years. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, April 12, from the First Presbyterian church, conducted by her pastor Rev. C. J. Ringer of the Evangelical Lutheran church, assisted by Rev. Peter Birrell, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Interment in Greenwood cemetery.

Mary Louisa Peterson was born April 25, 1859 in Orion, Henry county, Ill., and was confirmed in the Swedish Lutheran church at the age of fifteen. In 1879, March 27, she was united in marriage to Chas. J. Lund and six years later, March 14 1885 they moved to Wayne county and have since then been residents here, first on their farm north of this city, and for several years in this city, where recently Mr. Lund had erected a commodious and modern home. Mrs. Lund's health was very poor for several years but at the time of her death no one apprehended it was so frail a thread that held her to her mortal body, and her sudden death was a shock to all who knew her. That she was highly regarded in the community and had hosts of friends was evident by the large number who packed to the doors the spacious auditorium of the church, who gathered to pay their tribute of respect to the departed sister. In speaking of her her neighbors would say, "nothing too good can be spoken of this woman," she was beloved by all and most sincere are the regrets expressed at her death while yet young and the center of an attractive home.

Besides her husband and daughter Anna, who is nearly grown to womanhood, three sisters, residents of Illinois, survive the deceased. Mrs. Johnson of Orion, Mrs. Ed Johnson of Cambridge, and Mrs. Ed Peterson of Orion. The last two and Mrs. Peterson's husband were here to attend the funeral.

The house Monday morning after an extended debate killed all the bills providing for constitutional Amendments and in the afternoon passed a joint resolution providing for the holding of a constitutional convention.

The joint conference committee's report on the general appropriation bill was adopted. The bill had been cut $107,000 by the senate and the committee restored a large portion of this amount.

These bills passed Tuesday: By O'Neill of Lancaster, providing for the appointment of a state surgeon and draughtsman; by Way of Platt, providing for the appointment of a state auditor; the qualifications of attorneys; by Howell, compelling insurance companies to file semi-annual statements with the state auditor; by O'Neill, to regulate the organization and operation of life insurance companies on the mutual life premium, mutual reserve fund; by Saunders, to enable domestic and foreign associations and life insurance companies to reimburse their risks in other mutual or joint stock legal reserves life companies; by Harrison, providing for registration of voters in the office of the city clerk; by Harrison, fixing maximum compensation of county commissioners and supervisors.

At 1:50 p. m. the governor's message asking the house to reconsider the bill on S. P. 114, the constitutional convention bill, was read.

The session of felicitations having been reached, Burgess of Lancaster offered a motion, which was unanimously adopted, extending to Speaker Mockett the thanks and commendations of the house and presenting to him the speaker's chair and the keys of the city.

The speaker's reply in cordial terms referring to the occasion as one of the "proudest of his life."

PRICES SHOW A GAIN.

COMMISSIONER OF LABOR ISSUES INTERESTING BULLETIN.

Covers 250 Commodities and Shows Variations in Cost of Necessaries for Period of Twelve Years—The Relative Prices for 1890 and 1902 the Same.

Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, has issued a bulletin which will be of great interest to economists and others who are studying the cost of living and kindred questions. He gives a comparison of the variations in the prices of the necessities of life during the period from 1890 to 1902, inclusive, showing a total of 250 to 260 commodities; sixteen farm products, 54 articles of food, 70 articles of clothing, 13 articles of fuel and lighting, 30 of metals, 26 articles of lumber and building materials, 20 articles of drugs and chemicals, 14 of house-furnishing goods and the remainder miscellaneous.

The lowest average in prices reached by farm products was in 1896, and the highest in 1902; food was lowest in 1897 and highest in 1890; fuel and lighting were lowest in 1894 and highest in 1902; metals and implements were lowest in 1898 and highest in 1900; lumber and building materials were lowest in 1897 and highest in 1902; drugs and chemicals were lowest in 1895 and highest in 1900; house-furnishing goods were lowest in 1897 and highest in 1902; while among the miscellaneous articles the lowest average was reached in 1896 and the highest in 1902. Of the nine groups comprising all the commodities in 1902, the average was lowest in 1897, and the highest in 1890 and 1902, the relative price for these two years being exactly the same.

In the comparison of the prices of 1902 with the average of 1890 to 1899 of the sixteen articles in the farm products group 15 show an increase and one a decrease; of the 23 in the food, etc., group, 35 show an increase and 18 a decrease; of the 70 in the clothes and clothing group, 42 show an increase, one shows the same price as the average for the base period and 27 show a decrease; of the 13 in the fuel and lighting group, 12 show an increase and one a decrease; of the 30 in the metals and implements group, 28 show an increase, 2 show the same price as the average for the base period and 6 show a decrease; of the 26 in the lumber and building materials group, 10 show an increase and 1 a decrease; of the 9 in the drugs and chemicals group, 8 show an increase and one a decrease; of the 14 in the house-furnishing goods, group, 13 show an increase and one a decrease; of the 13 in the miscellaneous group, 10 show an increase and 3 a decrease. Of the 250 commodities for which prices were secured for the whole period from 1890 to 1902, 182 show an increase, 3 show the same price as the average for the base period and 65 show a decrease.

Of the 182 commodities that showed an increase in 1902 over the average for 1890 to 1899, 109 show an increase of 10 per cent. or more, 63 advanced from 25 to 25 per cent, 39 advanced from 25 to 50 per cent, 10 advanced from 50 to 100 per cent and one advanced 100 per cent or more.

Of the 65 commodities which showed a decrease, 46 decreased less than 10 per cent, 13 decreased from 25 to 50 per cent and 2 decreased 50 per cent or more.

Of the 250 articles for which prices were secured for the whole period from 1890 to 1902, it is seen that 182, or 72.8 per cent, show an increase in prices; 65 articles, or 26 per cent, show the same price as the average for the base period, and 65 articles, or 26 per cent, show a decrease in price in 1902 as compared with the average price for the base period.

Of the 200 commodities considered in this compilation of prices, the average price of 149 commodities was higher in 1902 than in 1901, the average price of 45 was the same in 1902 as in 1901, and the average price of 65 was lower in 1902 than in 1901.

NATURE STUDY FOR SCHOOLS.

Secretary Wilson Anxious to Make Farmers of All Children.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is planning to make farmers of all public school children in the United States, or at least to instruct them in the elements of plant life. There is a scarcity of scientific farmers in the country, and it requires years to train them thoroughly, the Secretary of Agriculture has adopted a practical plan of interesting the public school children of both sexes in the science of agriculture.

"The science of agriculture is so broad," enthusiastically exclaimed the Secretary, "that it is impossible to teach practical and scientific farming in the four years' training we are giving many of our bright young men."

"Therefore, the element of plant life should be taught to children along with the other lessons. They should be instructed how to graft, advised as to the properties of the soil, taught the elements of germination and the importance of moisture in the soil, the reasons why the soil should contain moisture, and be told why the soil should be worked when crops are growing.

These are simple and interesting matters and can be comprehended by children. Teachers in normal schools and pupils in these schools should be given instructions and practical experience on these points so as to enable them to impart this knowledge when they take charge of classes in our public educational institutions.

The public school teachers should, where possible according to the Secretary, instruct their pupils when the teachers are correctly informed. They should encourage children to take plants, roots, flowers, and bugs to school for the purpose of studying them.

MERGER IS DEFEATED.

United States Wins Case Against the Northern Securities Company.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Paul handed down a decision in the suit of the United States against the Northern Securities Company, enjoining the company from voting the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies, but allowing the return of such stock as had been delivered to that holding company. The opinion was unanimous, the four judges concurring, but the opinion was written by Judge Thayer.

The substance of the order is in the decree, which follows: "A decree in favor of the United States will accordingly be entered to the following effect: Adjudging that the stock of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railway companies, now held by the Securities Company, was acquired in violation of a combination among the defendants in restraint of trade and commerce among the several States, such as the anti-trust act denounces as illegal.

"Enjoining the Securities Company from acquiring or attempting to acquire further stock of either of said companies; also enjoining it from voting such stock at any meeting of the stockholders of either of said railroad companies or exercising or attempting to exercise any control, direction or supervision over the acts of said companies or either of them by virtue of its holding such stock.

"Enjoining the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies, respectively, their officers, directors and agents, from permitting such stock to be voted by the Northern Securities Company or any of its agents or attorneys on its behalf at any corporate election for directors or officers of either of said companies and likewise enjoining them from paying any dividends to the Securities Company on any of the stock of those companies which it may have received for its own stock, or to make such transfer and assignment to such person or persons as are now the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange for the stock of said companies.

"Finally, permitting the Securities Company to return and transfer to the stockholders of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern companies, respectively, an amount of stock of those companies which it may have received for its own stock, or to make such transfer and assignment to such person or persons as are now the holders and owners of its own stock originally issued in exchange for the stock of said companies.

MANY DIE IN CYCLONES.

Southern Hamlets Devastated and a Score of People Perish.

In a tornado that swept across White and Cherokee counties, Arkansas, it is known that nine persons were killed and great damage was done. A large number of men, women and children were injured. The scenes of the worst damage are remote from railway and telegraph lines and when the extent of the storm's work is known the death list may be much larger. In the track of the storm trees were twisted from their trunks and houses demolished. The storm raged in two counties and the list of casualties is large. A. C. Williams, who lived ten miles south of Heber, was killed. He was 70 years old and lived with his wife on top of one of the mountains south of town. His house was caught up by the wind and thrown down the mountain side. His wife was badly injured and is not expected to live. Houses were picked up and carried several hundred feet.

At Pangburn six residences were blown down and a flock of sheep and a number of cattle, hogs and horses were killed. Buck Neely, of Searcy, was in the storm and was caught under a small tree which was blown down. He is not seriously hurt. A large church near Pangburn was blown half a mile. A little Red postoffice Albert Kiler, Elbert Derle, Walker Pollard, Mrs. Pollard and Tom King lost all their houses, barns and other buildings. Forty-three residences and sixteen barns destroyed and other wreckage is the record of the damage reported. The tornado swept everything in a path a mile wide.

Twelve persons were killed by a tornado that passed over Hopewell settlement, one and one-half miles north of Hancockville, Ala. Four persons were fatally injured and a score of others were severely hurt. The destruction of property was enormous. The storm came from the southwest and its roar was so terrific that it awoke many people, some of whom fled from their homes in time to escape death when the houses were blown down. Buildings were tossed about like paper boxes and several structures were blown 100 yards or more.

Attorney General Knox decided that Naval Captain Bowman H. McCalla of the navy is not entitled to be advanced six months, making him a rear admiral, for his services in the Spanish-American war.

"RUBBERNECKING" ACCIDENTS.

Five Women Hurt Daily in Chicago Because They Will Wait.

Five women a day, according to the police reports, are hurt in the shopping districts by street cars or other vehicles running into them. Some of the cases are serious and demand the removal of the injured persons to the hospital or their homes. The great majority of these accidents, crossing policemen declare, are due to what is vulgarly called "rubbernecking."

"Nine women out of ten who are hurt by street cars or vehicles drawn by horses have only themselves to blame," said an officer, who for several years had guarded a State street crossing. "I have seen dozens of women injured down here in the retail district, and I never saw one who met with an accident who was not 'rubbernecking.' For instance, a woman will start to cross the street with an armful of bundles. Half way over, in the middle of the car tracks, she turns around to look at a woman who has passed her from the opposite direction. Perhaps it was the woman's hat, or the hang of her skirt that caused the other woman to stop and 'take her in.' At any rate she stands there like a block of stone, deaf to the clanging of the car bell, and the shouts of the people who see her danger. Finally, after she has feasted her eyes on the hat or skirt, or whatever it was that caught her fancy, she wakes up and finds a street car or vehicle of some kind bearing down on her. She is confused, and doesn't know which way to turn. The chances are 100 to 1 that she will stop in front of the car or carriage, if she has to run five feet to do it, and then the ambulance is called. She tells her husband and everybody else that the motorman or gripman, as the case might be, tried to deliberately run her down."

"The same is true of a great many men who are injured down town. Two men out of five (that's the conservative estimate) will turn around ten times in walking one block to look at women who attract their notice. And, do you know, it's a habit with a whole lot of men. I know some of the most respectable men in Chicago, who in every other way are model husbands, who are victims of this habit of 'rubbernecking.' If a woman attempted to flirt with them they would take to the woods, but they will turn around and secretly admire some women they never saw before and never expect to see again."—Chicago Tribune.

When a widower has been three years wifeless, he must remarry or pay the tax. If he can prove that he has been three years refused as a husband within one year, he is not taxable.

The best sailing vessel flying the American flag is the steel-four-master Atlas, which arrived at Baltimore a few days ago after a run of 15,800 miles from Hong Kong in ninety-two days. The Atlas averaged 17 1/2 miles a day, and 7 1/2 knots an hour. Her best day's run was 312 miles, at the rate of 12 1/2 knots an hour. This breaks all authentic records, except that of the bark Amy Turner, which made the run from Hong Kong to the Virginia coast in eighty-seven days. The Atlas beat out of sight the British bark Kelat, which cleared for New York eleven days ahead of the Atlas. The English captain boasted the sailing qualities of his vessel, but at the time the Atlas reached Baltimore had not arrived in New York.

Not Attending to Business.

The shrewdness of one of the founders of a famous estate in Maine gave rise to many amusing stories, one of which has recently been retold.

One day the man, who was a large lumber operator, was superintending a crew which was breaking up a log jam in the river. Suddenly the spruce on which he was standing slipped. The lumberman dropped out of sight in the water, and the logs closed over him.

The nearest Frenchman saw the accident. Hopping briskly over the slippery logs, he helped the "boss" to land. Nothing was said about the accident. After an hour or so the Frenchman began to get anxious, because the reward which he considered due him was not forthcoming. "He approached the lumberman, and pulling clumsily at his cap, stammered:

"I see you fall in, mister, and I run quick to pull you out 'fore you drown."

"Pro'ly," snapped the lumberman, "pro'ly, if you'd been tending to business as you'd oughter, you wouldn't have seen me fall in!"—Youth's Companion.

A Valuable Medicine For Coughs and Colds in Children.
"I have not the slightest hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to all who are suffering from coughs or colds," says Chas. M. Cramer, Esq., a well known watch maker of Colombo, Ceylon. "It has been some two years since the City Dispensary first called my attention to this valuable medicine and I have repeatedly used it and it has always been beneficial. It has cured me quickly of all chest colds. It is especially effective for children and seldom takes more than one bottle to cure them of hoarseness. I have persuaded many to this valuable medicine, and they are all as well pleased as myself over the results. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

Yellow Van Philosophy.
(From the May "Century.")
If you want sport, as a fine art, you must seek it in a country which is too small or too thickly peopled to let anything happen by accident, even a hen's egg.

She was, of course, not wholly ignorant of the peculiarity which make our older societies, seen from above, but a descending scale in parasitism, and from below, a Jacob's ladder leaning on the stars.

Hers was that high-bred assurance of self of those who have never known the shock of a cross word, and who are as free with a sense of bonds as any creature of philosophic anarchy.

With a higher claim, luckily, it is the greater the sacrifice the greater the joy. The smug, religious parish; the faiths that are to supplant them wisely begin by calling for volunteers for martyrdom.

He was one of those rare creatures the gentlemen of nature, which is as much as to say one who has the Christian, or, for that matter the pagan, virtues in a social meeting, and especially the unwillingness to give or take of false.

The M. S. Davies home is undergoing a tearing up and a rearranging. The arrangements contemplate an addition on the south, the whole is raised about ten inches, the stairway will be rebuilt and relocated, furnace heat will be installed, electric lights added, large porches, bath rooms, etc., the lot graded, and altogether the best part of a thousand dollars will find its way towards modernizing the residence. S. D. Relyea has the contract and will push it along as rapidly as possible.

They have therefore planned a course of five entertainments for one dollar the first, April 23, a lecture by Prof. Gregg, subject "Legislative Scenes and Methods;" Apr. 30 a lecture by Rev. the prisoners were left in charge of a deputy who was supposed to be on duty during the night. Lowrey evidently worked with great energy during the early part of the night to complete the tunnel, and made his successful getaway sometime after midnight. When the jailer opened the doors in the morning the prisoner was gone. The officers of surrounding towns were notified and they will keep a close lookout for the jail breaker. This is the second attempt of Lowrey to break jail since his capture, but on the previous attempt his plans were disclosed and the officers prevented him from carryover and behind the doctor and came in contact with the doctor casing crashing the chair into splinters. The other three laid hold of him immediately and he was borne backwards and into the bed but he fought with the rage and fury of a demon. Two fingers on the doctor's left hand were badly bitten and he received a blow on the mouth by the potato smasher the maniac still held in one hand. Besides these injuries the doctor had one shin badly lacerated by a kick. He was finally overpowered and placed in a rig heavily handcuffed and tied and brought to the city and placed in safe quarters.

To a man up a tree it looks like a premium on large stealing.—Laurel Advocate.

At this writing Mr. Haskell is much improved.—Wakefield Republican.

Lyons gives the saloon a triple jolt this month. First was the court decision on the anti-saloon clause in Lyons deeds, next was the village election which gave twenty votes against them and lastly the citizens' league has posted $100 reward for evidence that will convict anyone of boot-legging, with an additional $100 by the Lyons heirs if such evidence is sufficient to enable them to secure possession of lots on Nels D. Pearson writes us from Wakefield as follows: "I wish you would stop this Allen News newspaper so once." Now, Mr. Pearson, we would really like to accommodate you but we've got to make a living and if we should "stop this Allen News newspaper at once" we'd hardly know how to go about it. And so we hope you will be kind enough to let us keep it going for a while longer, at least until we can locate another job. If it will be any accommodation to you we will quit sending it to your address. But we dislike to do that even for we know you are in need of some good reading matter such as the News furnishes its subscribers every week.—Allen News.

Mrs. Mary D. Lydick, who conducts a harness shop here has finished and has on exhibition a riding bridle which she has made for a present to President Roosevelt. Mrs. Lydick has worked at this bridle at odd times during the winter. It is made of russet leather and is complete with martingale, silver port bit, United States rosettes and spots, nickel buckles and stitched with silk and linen. The bit was a present from the Des Moines Saddlery Co., and the spots and buckles from Collins & Morrison of Omaha. Mrs. Lydick enjoys the distinction of being the only woman harness maker in the world and is enthusiastic over her work.—Hartington Dispatch to Sioux City Tribune.

Stanton, Nebr., April 17.—Welch Lowrey, who has been held a prisoner since December 28 in the county jail at this place for burglary and criminal assault on Anna Bilawa, broke jail last night. He sawed his way out of the cell in which he was confined, dug a hole in the floor and tunneled under the north wall. He undoubtedly had assistance from the outside. His escape seems to have been thoroughly planned and well carried out, as there is no clew to his whereabouts. As will be seen by the above Welch Lowrey, the Stanton abductor is again at liberty, having made his escape from the Stanton county jail sometime during last night by tunnelling through the floor. Sheriff King was not at home but the jail and

Sheriff Robinson who happened to be in the city on other business was summoned and with Dr. T. Coe Little repaired to the scene as quickly as possible. A few others had arrived there by the time the Sheriff got there. The front door was at once broken down by one of the posse who by the force of his concussion with the door fell partly across the threshold, but suddenly retreated when Klagge made for him with a chair in one hand and a potato masher in the other. The Sheriff with three others then pushed their way suddenly into the room and the crazy man made for them with the chair. Dr. Little who was immediately in front closed with the mad man, grappling him about the body. The force of the blow of the chair passed ering lawn, and he raked and swept all day, and he gathered the trash in little piles and carried it all away, O galley he swore as he wrought and toiled, he swore till the air was blue, and so would I at a similar job, and so, my dear, would you. When the evening came the lawn was clean, and he sat by the well and cried; for his whisks were full of old dead leaves and thorns were in his hide; and he swore by the roof of the St. Elgin brood, whatever that roof may be, that he would never clean up a lawn again while he was an agent free. His joints were sore and his back did ache, and he went to his downy bed; and "his lawn is as smooth as a lawn can be, dad bless him," the neighbors said. While the poor man slept a tempest arose, and the winds did their dirty best; they blew from the north, they blew from the south, they blew from the sinful west, and they dumped old papers and rags and things on the lawn where he'd toiled that day, and they covered the trees with potato stalks, and the grass with mouldy hay; and they strowed dead hens and departed cats and tinware and things like those; and who can describe the wrath and grief of the victim when he arose? He looked out doors at the old dead hens and his glance was stern and high; he looked a-scant at the mouldy hay, and a tear stood in his eye.—Walt Mason in Lincoln Journal.

"Wonder what varmint a woman will wear next as she is now arrayed in silk-worm dress, seal-skin saque, ostrich feather, beaver hat, goatskin shoes, whalebone stays, kidskin gloves, tortoise shell buttons, spitz dog muffs, mink tall collarette and alligator hide purse. Solomon in all his glory had not such a menagerie as these, and yet men love them no matter what they wear," says Elmer Lundburg in his Carroll Index.

WAYNE HEREFORD SALE

Some Royally Bred Herefords to Be Sold in Northeast Nebraska.

Among the cattle to go into the pure bred Hereford sale at Wayne, Neb., on May 5 is a royal string from the herd of Wm. Ernst & Son of Graft, Neb. Mr. Ernst will undoubtedly be well known to readers in the vicinity of Wayne, as he made addresses on cattle breeding, feeding and kindred topics at nearly all the farmers' institutes in that locality last winter. Mr. Ernst puts a string of sixteen cows and heifers into sale, and all old enough will have calves at foot, or be well along in calf to his herd bull Royalty Tom 94211 by the noted Wild Tom of Sunny Slope fame. Some of the heifers are bred to Columbus 25th 100912, a half brother to the noted $10,000 bull, Dale.

L. L. Young of Oakland will put in ten head of heifers and young cows. These are mostly sired by Dean Archibald 00947, he by Archibald 1st 82258, by Archibald 11120, and by Nansen 04490, he by Christopher 69172. Many of them are well along in calf to Dean Archibald or to Young's Improver 106973.

Holt Bros. of Laurel, contribute two head of breeding similar to Mr. Young's. There is one cow and one bull bred by W. N. Rogers of McCook, Neb. They are very good. The bull bred by the late Charles H. Rogers of Monarch, Rogers' famous 2800 pound prize winner at the Nebraska state fair for several years. The cow has a calf at foot by Geo. T. Smith's famous bull, Mercur 58818.

A grand cow from the herd of Wm. Ernest is Twilight 80601. He sire was a good son of Earl of Shadeland 12th by Garwood 7015. She is a broad-backed beefy cow, built low, and showing a good thickness and depth of body throughout. She will sell with a fine January bull calf at foot by Royaltys Tom.

Last but by no means least comes the contribution of eighteen head by Scott & Marsh of Belton, Mo. Their herd header is the splendid show bull Heelod 29th. Many of their cows have calves at foot and all old enough are in calf. They will show two grand young show bulls by Heelod 29th and Expansion. The breeding throughout is as good as the best, and as for quality, none better have been offered this year at the large sale centers, for the contributors realize that they are going right among Hereford breeders and cattle-men who are the most discriminating buyers. There is no more prosperous county in the whole state of Nebraska than the territory served by the C. St. P. M. & O. branch of the Northwestern line, and the Herefords are most rapidly coming into favor among them. The breeders contributing to this sale have therefore been impelled to put in their best cattle. One contributor expressed it thus: "Nebraska has the two largest herds of pure bred Hereford cattle in the world, namely, the Riverside Hereford ranch at Ashland with $1,200 head, and the Stanton Breeding Farm company at Madison, with 450 head, and we cannot therefore afford to put in any poor ones, particularly in this prosperous northeast section."

Catalogues can be had by writing W. N. Rogers, McCook, Neb.

Bryan democrats elected their friends in the city elections this spring in several prominent campaigns. Carter Harrison, as mayor of Chicago, Tom Johnson and "Golden Rule" Jones as mayor of Toledo and Cleveland, Ohio, all have a tendency to mistrust that the Cleveland-Gorman-Hill end of the democratic part of democracy, east or west. But that the Kansas City platform, silver and all, are more thought of than this ultra eastern "honest" money faction of the democracy, is quite evident. Harmony is not yet in that party, but it is no question who will control the next democratic national convention. Bryan's friends will run it from first to last, and will write "16 to 1" in the platform—if they wish to.

A Strong Candidate.

As a candidate for the county treasurership subject to the republican county convention, Burlington Cunningham has developed a strength since his candidacy became known that is most gratifying to his friends who prevailed upon him to stand for the nomination. Among the many opinions the writer has heard expressed relative thereto, the following strong points have been advanced:

That in over twenty years residence in Wayne county Mr. Cunningham has never been a candidate for office of any kind, and although a worker in political affairs always in the interests of his friends and towards the best interests of his party and good government.

That in common with those who by "the sweat of their brows" conquered the virgin soil of Wayne county, built their homes here, and "for better or for worse" stayed by their enterprises, there is a bond of fellowship stronger than political party lines, and old settlers are quite unanimous in their endorsement of Mr. Cunningham.

as was Burlington Cunningham's on the fields of carnage in which the "Iron Brigade" participated, they accord that comrade their heartfelt good wishes, and justly so.

Like Governor Mickey Mr. Cunningham is a good Methodist, but while this of no political significance it calls to mind a considerable similarity in the makeup of the two men—the sterling qualities of citizenship out of which we wish to carve our public officials.

It is not fair to expect for Mr. Cunningham any claims upon the various fraternal societies to which he may belong, for these are not political auxiliaries by any means, but a fellowship with these is a further evidence of a genial social nature and among these are the best of those who choose as well as those who are chosen.

M. Lea y, Winside's liveryman was in town Monday.

Artie Weatherholt was over from Norfolk Monday.

Wednesday was Arbor Day. Did you plant a tree?

D. Leary of Winside, was in town on Thursday of this week.

Rev. Kassler will preach at the M. E. church Sunday evening.

Louis Haag went to Foster as second man in the E. & B office.

H. S. Strickland made a business trip to Sioux City Thursday.

The Templin boys are painting Ernest Behmer's new house this week.

Mrs. Eph Beckenhauer of Wayne, visited the last of this week at the Candor home.

Miss Elliott went to her home at Winside Saturday as usual to visit over Sunday.

There was a party out at Gen. Colberts' Wednesday evening. The Strickland family attended.

Lou Williams and Fred Ziemer were at the party at Bell's north of town last Friday evening.

The town is building a dam and fixing things in shape to defy the fire fiend if it makes its appearance.

Mr. Ryan, general agent for the DeLaval Cream Separator was in town on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

R. G. Roberke's new house is coming along fine, and is going to be a residence that Hoskins people may take a pride in.

There must have been a cat convention at Norfolk last Friday as the Hoskins delegate went up that that evening.

Dr. Scruggs was called to Hoskins to consult with Dr. Greenwald Tuesday over Mell Case who is much worse this week.

The Herald's correspondent says they have been praying for the last four or five years. That is surprising indeed.

C. J. Roberke, an uncle of R. G., was in town Tuesday. He is working in the interest of the McCormick Machine Co.

Mr and Mrs. R. G. Roberke went out to the Kubn home near Hader on Thursday to attend the wedding of their daughter.

This week ends our roasts on the Tribune and Herald correspondents unless they look for more, when they will be quite likely to get it.

The Tribune's correspondent was at Winside Sunday. Maybe to chew up the Tribune editor for printing the letter signed "One Who Was There."

Messrs and Mesdames Dendinger and Kubl, Dr. Grunwald, Frank Phillips and R. Burbank were at Winside last Friday night to attend the dance and report a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Weatherholt, Geo. Weatherholt and family, and Jno. and Mrs. Ziemer were out near Melvin Saturday night attending at party at the home of Mr. Miesky.

If we can not come out ahead in a newspaper scrap with another paper's correspondent without raking in all their relatives we won't scrap. We leave that for the Tribune's correspondent to do.

We defy the Tribune's or Herald's correspondent to prove one item ever printed in my correspondence to be untrue. The trouble is there is a little too much truth to make certain parties feel just comfortable.

There was a little crank with a twp by four bank, in as lively a vilinge as ever was known. You would know him by his head, noted for nothing but red, and he thought he turned the crank that run the town.—But he don't.

We believe Phillips is getting sick of that old rot about the Travelling Assistant Auditor. Frank Phillips is a young man that has gained every man, woman and child in town for a friend simply by minding his own business and if, instead of being second man with the E. & B. Co, he was auditor, no one in town would be quicker to give him the title than I. But as it is, those items in the Tribune are simply ridiculous, and no one knows it better than Frank.

College Notes.

Four new students enrolled Monday. Rev. Dawson of the M. E. church spent one morning with us. His chapel talk was much appreciated.

Mr. Salyards is one of the recent additions to the ball team: This team is a husky looking lot of fellows.

Sunday visitor. Henry has made a decided success as a school teacher.

Mr. Littell was a College visitor Saturday. He expects to be a student here during the summer.

Mr. Jud Cronk closed a successful term of school near Meadow Grove. He called here Saturday on his way home.

Over fifty season tickets to the M. E. lectures were bought by students. A number of single tickets were sold for Prof. Gregg's lecture.

A number have already written to secure rooms for the summer term. Present indications point to a larger attendance this summer.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Lulu Mears Clubb was born in Grinnell, Iowa, August 21, 1878. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Mears moved to Wayne, Nebraska, when Lulu was but six years of age. Here she grew up to young womanhood. She attended the Wayne High School, took special instruction in music at the Nebraska Normal college and was a graduate in Elocution at that institution. Five years ago she entered the nurses training school of the Samaritan hospital, Sioux City. At the end of two years she completed her course and entered upon the practice of her profession. This she followed with enthusiasm and success until her marriage to Mr. Harry H. Clubb of Sioux City. This happy event was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents in this city on Christmas Day last. Last Sunday morning at two o'clock after weeks suffering, the patient's spirit left the tired body. Accompanied by the heart broken husband, the remains were brought from Sioux City to Wayne, last Sunday evening. The funeral occurred from the home of Mrs. Clubb's parents Tuesday morning at 10:00 o'clock. The services were in charge of Rev. Birrell, assisted by Rev. Welton and an excellent choir. Following this service the body was committed to the grave. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. One piece was sent by the nurses of the Samaritan hospital another by the nurses of St Joseph hospital; another by the Musical Society of Sioux City, of which Mr. Clubb is an active member; and many others still from friends and former patients of Mrs. Clubb. This testifies most emphatically to the affection and esteem in which she was held by those among whom she spent the last years of her life. The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereft husband, parents and other relatives.

The large brick chimney at the Sherburne Brick Works was finished last Saturday night. It is eighty feet in height and cost $1500. The time actually employed in its construction was less than four weeks. The first estimate was six weeks, but everything worked so smoothly that it was done much more quickly. Alex Holtz and Chas. Warner did the mason work. This chimney gives the town a very fine appearance to the observer of these evidences of enterprise.

Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Ross south of Wayne, their daughter Miss Mary was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Persinger of Whiting, Iowa. Rev. C. E. Byron Holle writes from Seattle, Washington to the Harrington store saying that he notices that all the large up-to-date clothing stores out there handle the famous "H. S. & M." make of clothing. He also says you will find in all the finest show windows the "Monarch" shirts, the "Florsheim" shoes and the "Longley" hats. Mr. Harrington has been selling clothing in Wayne for nearly seventeen years and during that time has made it his special business every year to add only the best lines to be found. He has built up an immense clothing business by handling these makes, the best that money can buy.

The Central Christian Advocate (M. E. church organ) gives a nice mention of Mrs. J. H. Pingrey's magnificent gift a few weeks ago to the Wayne M. E. church. Among other things it says: "She is not a member of the M. E. church, but this beautiful gift, in common with other valuable contributions, proves her love for our church. Her daughter, the late Mrs. Rennieck, was a Methodist, and was buried from our church. The late Mr. Pingrey's funeral sermon was also preached from our pulpit by a minister of another denomination. Mrs. Pingrey is now 82 years old, but loves music and song as when she was a member of a church choir in her earlier years."

A law partnership has been formed between A. A. Welch and A. R. Davis that promises a great deal to those gentlemen, both are hard workers and will have plenty of hard work to do. Mr. Welch is one of the oldest and ablest attorneys of the Nebraska bar and has been in Wayne county for many years, has been a prominent figure in the politics of the county and occupied many positions of public trust and confidence and the county attorney ship was held by Mr. Welch two years prior to Jan. 1, 1903. Mr. Davis is a young attorney who has been in Wayne but a couple years and yet long enough to win his way into the highest esteem of his fellow men and into the very auspicious partnership referred to above. Mr. Davis was urged to accept the nomination for county attorney last year, also to accept the nomination on behalf of the executive committee to fill the vacancy caused by the representative candidate resigning. His prudence forbade him entering politics and but for this he would be politically prominent, but Mr. Davis is a good man to keep in mind. Altogether this is one of the strongest partnerships we could wish to see our attorneys form and promises much to each party concerned.

A little girl six years old, daughter of Fritz Boyer, who lives near the German Lutheran church east of Altona, was badly burned last Tuesday while playing in the yard, her clothing catching fire from burning rubbish. She died at four o'clock Wednesday morning after terrible suffering. Dr. Neiman was called but nothing could be done to aid the little one as she was so badly burned.

It might have been an attempted burglary, but as he was pretty drunk their complaint was not pressed.

Good For Rheumatism.
Last fall I was taken with a very severe attack of muscular rheumatism which caused me great pain and annoyance. After trying several prescriptions and rheumatic cures, I decided to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I had seen advertised in the South Jerseyman. A Valuable Medicine For Coughs and Colds in Children.
"I have not the slightest hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to all who are suffering from coughs or colds," says Chas. M. Cramer, Esq., a well known watch maker of Colombo, Ceylon. "It has been some two years since the City Dispensary first called my attention to this valuable medicine and I have repeatedly used it and it has always been beneficial. It has cured me quickly of all chest colds. It is especially effective for children and seldom takes more than one bottle to cure them of hoarseness. I have persuaded many to this valuable medicine, and they are all as well pleased as myself over the results. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy."

Hereford sale at Wayne.
Among the good Hereford bulls to be sold at the Wayne, Neb., sale on May 5 is Jury of Shadland 4th, an excellent bull bred by W. N. Rogers, of McCook, Neb. Jury of Shadland 4th is 18 months old. He is a bull of splendid character all through. He is sired by Jury 68788, a sire whose three daughters won a good bunch of the prize money at the Nebraska State Fair last fall. Jury was sired by Kojak of Rockland, a noted eastern prize winner. Jury's dam was Lady Wilton 332 by Sir Bartle Frere by Lord Wilton. The latter bull was once sold for $20,000. The dam of Jury of Shadland 4th, the bull to be sold at Wayne, was sired by W. N. Rogers' famous bull Anxlety Monarch, the $2,000-pound prize winner at the Nebraska State Fair in 1900, and his maternal grand dam was a cow by the noted World's Fair prize winner Vincent 2nd. He is right in breeding and his individual merit is all that could be desired. Write W. N. Rogers of McCook, Neb., and see breeding of other good ones; of cows, heifers and bulls.

One of the 2 Johns is crazy!

The above remark was made last week by a merchant in Wayne. It always seems to anyone, when they see a person that makes anything a special study that they are crazy on that question. When a farmer devotes most of his time to fine cattle his neighbors will say he is a fool, but if he afterwards makes the business a success they will say he is smart. Every business at present is overdone and only the specialists, who devote their entire time to one line, succeed. When we came to Wayne and introduced the Staley underwear the people thought we would never succeed in getting them to wear it. It is now known that the majority of men in Wayne county wear Staley. We have a line of summer underwear that is not so well known as the Staley, but we will keep at it until every person knows our summer underwear is much better than any other sold in Wayne county.

Don't Get Side-tracked!

If you step into any store where they sell underwear they will show you an undershirt for fifty cents, but if you will compare it with our fifty-cent undershirt, you will see that it is not as good, and in some cases not any better than our twenty-five-cent undershirt. You may ask, "Why is that?" We buy underwear from a New York factory in case lots for cash and pay more for a fifty-cent shirt than anyone else. That is why you get more for your money if you buy here. Look into this matter and you will be convinced that it pays to trade here, even though some merchant did say we were crazy. See our summer underwear before you buy and you will save money and be better satisfied.

IS TO STOP AT KIEL

UNITED STATES FLEET WILL VISIT GERMAN PORT.

Has Been a Misunderstanding—German Newspapers Have Been Misinformed as to the Intentions of the United States Navy.

Washington: From the highest official quarters it is learned that criticisms in a few German newspapers directed against a supposed desecration of the navy department here in the summer of 1901, are a complete misunderstanding of the situation. The facts are explained as follows:

Not a set and formal invitation from the German government to send an American squadron was ever received, but through semi-official channels intimations did reach Washington that the German emperor would be pleased to have the North Atlantic squadron stop at Kiel during the naval demonstration.

Secretary Moody is extremely desirous of doing anything within reason to show the warmth of the friendship which he cherishes toward Germany, and the president and Secretary Hay have the same disposition.

But circumstances conspired to make it impossible to meet either of the hints thrown out from Germany.

But the United States navy is not to be misrepresented at Kiel. Following the usual custom, when the warm weather begins in the Mediterranean, the European squadron will begin slowly to work its way northward, and it is calculated that it will arrive at Kiel in time to take its proper place in the celebration.

Three Persons Are Legally Hanged in Missouri.

Kansas City, Mo.: John "Bud" Taylor, a former baseball player, was hanged here Friday morning for the murder, in March, 1901, of Ruth Nollard, his former sweetheart.

Taylor expressed sorrow for his crime, but added: "I loved her, and was not willing to live without her." Taylor's crime was prompted by jealousy because the girl jilted him.

Shortly before the march to the scaffold Taylor hanged his brother a small package of strychnine. The murderer said he had the powder for several months and intended to commit suicide Thursday night. After being convicted Thursday, however, he decided to meet his fate.

Taylor was probably the coolest man ever hanged in Jackson County. Thursday morning Taylor abandoned hope of a reprieve or a commutation of his death sentence. He declared in the morning that he was ready to die and that he would die a brave, godless and prayerless. He changed his mind in the afternoon and asked to be hanged. He said in the morning:

"If the bible is true, the girl I killed is in hell, and I love her enough to want to go to her even if she is in hell. I would like to see her, especially to try and speak to her heaven after I left her the woman I loved to hell. Where she is I want to be."

In the afternoon he sent for the Rev. Father Lillis, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, and was baptized in his cell. His decision was reached after his attorney, L. C. Boyle, told him there was no hope for him.

Dr. Gartrell was the oldest man ever sentenced to death in Missouri. He was six feet tall, very erect, and had a long, flowing white beard.

STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Omaha Has Strange Murder Mystery—Beloved Frank Knight Killed His Wife and Secretly Buried Her—Has Since Disappeared.

An Omaha dispatch says: The mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Frank E. Knight from her home at 2023 North Twenty-second Street and the capture of her husband remains the sole field of endeavor of the police department. Nerves are being strained to effect the capture of Knight, whose every day of absence only serves to strengthen the theory that he had committed a terrible crime. Mrs. Lacey Stiles and Malvern Dunsberger, the two prisoners now confined in the city jail, maintain a stubborn silence regarding what they may know of the affair.

Late Sunday night the police claimed to have strong evidence that Knight poisoned his wife and that young Dunsberger, brother of Knight, is said to have been in love with, took the body in a wagon to a place north of the city and buried it there. The body has not yet been located.

Every effort is being made to determine whether Mrs. Knight could have been taken away from her home before she had time to suspect the death of her husband. It is not known that she left the house alive.

A fact just brought to light by a casual witness is that Sunday morning, the day after his wife was last sighted, Knight was seen to come cautiously out of his house and gather up some dirt, which he carried to a place near some tracks, apparently those of a wagon, which led to the roadway. This tends to confirm the theory of the police that the body, if Mrs. Knight is really dead, was taken from the house Saturday or early Sunday morning and buried in some out of the way place.

Some property which he owned in connection with a brother in Marshall County, Iowa. Mrs. Knight had carried a bank account of her own. But at Knight's solicitation she transferred the account to his and carried it under his name.

Some other men had arrived, and the door was once broken into by one of the posse. The sheriff with three men pushed his way suddenly into the room, when the crazy man rushed at them with an unpaired chair. Doctor Little dived under the chair and grappled with him, the force of the chair striking his door casing behind the door. ANOTHER GLORIOUS SUNRISE.

REPORTS CROPS DOING WELL.

Weather Bureau Says Winter Wheat May Break All Records. The crop report issued by the Weather Bureau says in the districts east of the Rocky Mountains during the week the temperature was highly favorable for growth of vegetation, but farm work was very generally retarded by rains in the lake region, central valleys and Atlantic coast districts, while complaints of lack of moisture were received from portions of the central and western Gulf States.

In the central and northern Rocky Mountain districts and on the West Pacific coast the season is very backward, and Washington and Oregon have suffered from cold, wet weather. In California the conditions have been generally favorable, with the exception of some damage by frost. Corn planting is in progress as far north as Kansas, southern Missouri, Texas and North Carolina. Further south planting is well advanced and completed in some sections.

The condition of winter wheat is generally excellent, and it has made splendid progress since the first of the month. In the upper Ohio Valley, however, the wheat of the 4th and 5th classes has suffered from cold, wet weather, but is progressing well in South Dakota. Oats continue promising in the Southern States, and seeding is nearly completed, or well advanced, in the central valleys, where the early sown is coming up well.

The early close of March, which was a very mild season, has been unusually far advanced. From the 4th to 6th of April the whole country east of the Mississippi River, including Tennessee and the northern portion of the South Atlantic States, experienced temperatures below freezing, stations in the more northern districts reporting temperatures from 6 to 10 degrees below freezing. The reports now indicate that many portions of fruit have suffered severely, more particularly peaches.

State Reports. Illinois—Temperature above seasonal average; vegetation and fruits greatly stimulated; crops in excellent condition; active progress, but retarded by heavy rain on 10th; winter wheat in excellent condition; spring wheat in excellent condition; fruit prospects good except in the northwestern section. Indiana—Frequent rains kept ground too wet for rapid progress of farm work, but generally plowing for oats and corn, planting begun in southern counties; in advance of season. Wheat, winter and spring, and garden crops in excellent condition; fruit prospects good except in the northwestern section.

Iowa—Season warmer and growth of vegetation earlier than usual; seeding of wheat, oats and barley about completed in southern and central counties; in northern districts reports indicate decreased acreage of wheat and increased acreage of oats and barley; plowing in northern counties, but large areas still too wet for farm operations. North Dakota—Heavy snow over eastern portion of the state, and the central counties are fighting an attempt to run them on the seventh.

John Blue, of Indianapolis, is organizing an international union of book agents. Several cities have local unions of the workmen in that line. Of the 35,280 white children in the cotton mill districts of South Carolina, two-fifths never enter school, and only one-fourth are in daily attendance. Union carpenters at Kansas City, Kan., will ask for 40 cents an hour after May 1. At present the average daily pay of a carpenter is 35 cents an hour.

One of the greatest victories for the boot and shoe workers' union is the recent application for the union label of some of the big Chicago manufacturers. The convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers in Columbus, commencing Tuesday, April 14, will be a gathering of importance to working men. For amalgamation with the iron molders was the result of the referendum vote of the Corder's International Union. In conformity a committee has been appointed to arrange the merger.

GOOD TIMES IN THE WEST.

George Gould Says Present Era of Prosperity Will Continue. After a careful survey of conditions in the West, George J. Gould, who has returned to Lakewood, N. J., from a trip over the Missouri Pacific and Wabash lines, is convinced that the present era of prosperity which the West is enjoying will continue for at least another year.

"In all my experience in the West," Mr. Gould said, "I have never seen wheat look as well as it does to-day. It is too early to speak of corn or cotton, but as the soil is thoroughly water-soaked these crops ought to thrive amazingly. The railroads won't have any trouble in moving the great wheat crop, but I think we will all be short of cars in the fall if there is a big corn crop. The physical condition of the Western roads was never better than it is now."

"I heard no talk of money shortage while I was in the West. The banks are holding their own balances in their vaults and they won't have to draw on New York for money to move crops. From what I saw I believe that this practice of drawing on New York, as it is called, will be an uncommon occurrence in the future. The Western bankers have their own money to lend to their own people, unless money should get so tight that Wall Street as to make it profitable to send it East. From all indications I can see a full year of prosperity ahead for the West."

Pittsburg has a servant girl's union. The Detroit United Railway firemen want an eight-hour day. There are 7,130 members of organized labor in New Haven, Conn. Efforts are being made to organize the patternmakers of Columbus, Ohio. Iowa records show 720 local unions in the State, with a membership of 45,000. City carters at Toronto, Canada, will demand a substantial advance in wages. Brockton, Mass., electrical workers have procured a 20 per cent increase in wages.

Shortsville, N. Y., drill makers have received voluntary increases from 10 to 20 per cent. Efforts are being made, at Toledo, Ohio, to form a union of the trunk and traveling bag makers. Eight hundred shipbuilders in the Hamber, England, district submitted to a reduction in wages. Fourteen hundred bankers will quit work May 1 unless their demands for some agreement with them are met.

The National Railway Clerks' Association, which was formed recently, has already a membership of 2,000. Efforts are being made to settle by arbitration the strike of the journeyman horsehoes in New York City. The girl ticket agents of the Brooklyn L road have been ordered to work twelve hours a day instead of ten and they have organized to resist. The Pittsburg policemen threaten to go on strike if the City Council refuses to grant their demand for an increase of 20 per cent in wages.

In Winnipeg the street cars run only six days of the week, and the local unions are fighting an attempt to run them on the seventh. WHAT PEOPLE EAT.

SUPPLY FOR EVERY HUMAN BEING IS ESTIMATED.

United States the Granary and Packing House for the World—Texas Leads in Cattle-Raising, Illinois in Corn, and Iowa in Hogs and Eggs.

According to a Washington correspondent, every man, woman and child in the United States is entitled, through the bounty of Providence and the energy of the American farmer, to the following food supply during a year: Thirty-five bushels of corn, 12 1/2 bushels of oats, 9 1/2 bushels of wheat, 1 1/2 bushels of barley, one-fifth bushel of buckwheat, 3 1/2 bushels of rice, 3,600 bushels of potatoes, 65 1/2 pounds sugar, half a gallon of syrup, one-fifth of a bushel of beans, half a bushel of sweet potatoes, three-fourths of a cow, four-fifths of a fat hog, half a sheep, 2 1/2 bushels of orchard fruits, a fifth of a bushel of onions, $130 worth of garden truck, 3 bushels of fruit, one-half bushel of semi-tropical fruit, a bushel of nuts, one-third of a spring lamb, seventeen dozen eggs, three and one-third fowls, four-fifths of a pound of honey, 16 3/4 pounds of fish, 2 1/2 pounds of oysters, half a pound of shellfish, 90 gallons of milk, 18 1/2 pounds of butter, 3 1/2 pounds of cheese, 2 1/2 pounds of condensed milk and one-half bushel of peanuts.

Years ago nearly every American family was a food producer as well as a consumer. The conditions are changing constantly, the number of food consumers becoming relatively greater than that of producers. In the fifty years between 1850-1900 the ratio of growth of population was a bushel of peanuts, the ratio of increased production of corn, barley, wheat, oats, potatoes and molasses has been greater. The production of sugar, sweet potatoes, rice, beans, cattle, milk cows, sheep and swine has increased in a smaller ratio than the population. For example, the sugar, coffee, tea, chocolate, rice, fruit, fish, oil, spices, farinaceous products and liquor the United States has had to go abroad, though most of these things are produced within the borders of the country and the entire supply of certain items could be produced at home.

Depends on Last Harvest. For the solid stuff that keeps the world alive the United States is the granary and packing-house of the world. But, as pointed out by Professor Blodgett of the Agricultural Department, who compiled the figures showing the relations of population and food products in the United States, the world is not far removed at any time from dependence upon the last harvest. A lean year is sorely felt, no matter how many fat ones have preceded it. Illinois leads all other States in the production of corn, with nearly 400,000,000 bushels in 1900. She also leads in oats. Minnesota raises the most wheat, California the most barley, Louisiana the most sugar, Texas the most cotton, New York the most peaches and Virginia the most peanuts.

New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio are leaders in apple production, each producing more than 20,000,000 bushels in 1890. Pennsylvania raised more cherries than any other State, California produced more peaches than any other State combined. California also leads in pears, and as for prunes, she turns out more than all the rest of the United States. California produces practically all the apricots. Maryland leads with strawberries, New York with raspberries, New York with blueberries, New York with currants, Massachusetts with cranberries and Indiana proudly takes the pie for gooseberries. California is at the head of the grape-producing States and also furnishes most of the oranges, limes, grape fruit, guavas, lemons, olives, figs, citrons, almonds and English walnuts. Florida produces most pineapples and coconuts. Texas yields more than half the peach crop. As for market gardening, density of population and transportation facilities make New York and New Jersey the leaders.

Texas Leads in Cattle. Texas has more cattle than any other State, her figures in 1900 reaching nearly 10,000,000. But she has fewer per square mile than a dozen other States. The old States, indeed, hold their own in the number of cattle per square mile. Nevada has more cattle per capita than any other State, and half a dozen Western States are able to give away great numbers. New York has been in the lead for years in the number of milch cows, with Iowa and Illinois next. The old States have also the largest number of swine, Iowa, being first, Illinois next and Missouri, Nebraska, Indiana and Kansas following. In the older States and also in the States south of the Ohio River there has been a decline in the number of hogs. All the States along the west bank of the Mississippi and the Red show enormous gains.

Montana is the greatest sheep-raising State, and New York is next. Twelve States raise more than 1,000,000 sheep each—Montana, New Mexico, Wyoming, Ohio, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, California, Michigan, Texas, Colorado and Indiana. Iowa, besides furnishing two Cabinet ministers, narrowly escaped the further honor of furnishing 100,000,000 dozen eggs to the world in the last year they were counted. The exact number was 99,621,920 dozens. As Professor Blodgett observes in his interesting report, "the eggs in common use are mostly those of the common hen." He speaks of quince, hazel, speckled turkey, blue, bluish, duck eggs, but comes back to white with strong reliance on the productive capacity of the "common hen." The State next to Iowa in egg production is Ohio, which also rivals the Prairie States in political fruitfulness. For two decades, indeed, when Ohio was the "whole thing" politically, she led all other States in egg production, but with the waning of her political prestige came a decrease in the capacity of her hens, so that in 1900 Iowa sprang to the front in statesmanship and eggs.

General Winfield Scott and General Benjamin Harrison were announced as candidates for the vacant office of major general of the United States army. President John Quincy Adams' private secretary was assaulted in the rotunda of the capitol while carrying a message to the Senate and an investigation was demanded by the chief executive.

FIFTY YEARS AGO. A duel was fought between Colonel O'Hara, of Cuban fame, and Colonel O'Hara, of Cuban fame, and Jonathan Phillips, aid de camp to General Twiggs. The Washington monument had reached a height of only 120 feet, the building fund was exhausted, and the commissioners advertised that they would carve on one of its blocks the names of all persons donating $1,000. James Buchanan celebrated his sixty-second birthday, and the United States Senate confirmed his nomination as minister to England. A "prize fight" was held opposite New Orleans between a ferocious jack and three bulldogs, in which the heels of the former defeated the teeth of the latter. Edward Everett, William H. Seward, Charles Wood, and Jonathan Phillips subscribed the remaining $500 needed to purchase the freedom of "Daphne," a former slave of Daniel Webster, whose release the latter had asked as a final favor from his friends. Shelled corn sold in the Sandwich Islands for 6 1/2 cents per pound.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. The Russian government was said to be shipping seamen to the United States for the purpose of equipping privateers in the threatened war with England. The Maryland resolution for an inquiry into President Hayes' right to office was introduced in the United States Senate and opposed by General Garfield, who declared no rules existed requiring the receipt of a bill to subvert the government. Professors W. D. Marks and G. F. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania reported that they had examined the Keely motor on request of Charles E. Collier, of the company promoting it, and that, in their view, it was a fraud, operated by an exhausted receiver concealed somewhere in the machine or in the building. Fifty-seven buildings were burned at Clarksville, Tenn., with $500,000 loss. William M. Tweed died in Ludlow, New York, New York, following his conviction for ballot frauds and the theft of about $6,000,000 on municipal contracts. General U. S. Grant was died by the King and Queen of Italy. A rehearing of the General Fitz Hugh Porter-Pope controversy was ordered by President Hayes. The Cuban rebellion ended and all chiefs surrendered except Maceo and Vincenti Gracia, who were said to be hiding out for commissions in the Spanish army. Five thousand dollars was appropriated by Congress for a monument over the grave of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, which was said to be neglected and overgrown with weeds.

The Secretary of the Treasury purchased 236,500 ounces of fine silver for account of Philippine coinage at an average of 49.80 cents an ounce. The amount of 3 and 4 per cent bonds actually exchanged to date for the 2 per cent consols under the Secretary's recent refunding offer is $14,120,000. A motorman named Zoras tried to run his car through an Italian parade at Chicago, and one of the marchers shot and seriously wounded him. Two of his paraders were killed with the wounding of the other.

THE WEEKLY HISTORIAN

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO. Several ships reached Norfolk, Va., with American seamen who had been seized on board American ships and impressed into the British navy during the European war which had just ended. Spanish rigged ships that had been built at Marietta, Ohio, were navigated successfully over the falls of the Ohio River at Louisville. The successful establishment of co-operative vineyards was celebrated in Kentucky. A general European war was said to be threatened because of the arbitrary bill which also contained a provision for the seizure of the Ohio River at Louisville. An announcement was made in the newspapers that, owing to the French Revolution, "the virtuous duchess of Orleans is nearly in the unenviable predicament of discharging some of her most valuable servants."
