- 1—Any lady, married or single, may enter the contest.
- 2—Any and every lady receiving one or more votes will be accredited with them at once and the result announced in these columns.
- 3—In every paper printed from June 15, to December 24, 1903, will appear two coupons; one is a FREE VOTE and may be voted by any one, the other is a SUBSCRIBER'S BALLOT and is to be voted by subscribers for whom they choose. For each cent paid by the subscriber, new or renewal, or arrearages on account of subscription, one vote may be cast.
- 4—Free votes must be cast within the time limit printed on each else they become void. Subscriber's ballots may be cast at any time before the contest closes, which will be at six o'clock p. m. December 24, 1903.
- 5—A ballot box will be placed in the REPUBLICAN office in which the ballots may be placed by the person voting or by some one for him, ballots may also be sent by mail. As votes are received they will be deposited in the ballot box, which will be kept under lock, and once each week in the presence of some disinterested person the same will be opened and the votes counted for the purpose of ascertaining the standing of the candidates.
- 6—The piano may be seen (or its counterpart) on exhibition at the M. S. Davies Book Store in Wayne at any time, and all interested may thus know it is no cheap affair, but that is a splendid instrument, beautiful in tone as well as in finish, and for reason of its high grade was selected especially for this contest to lead character and interest to it, for too often a cheap piano is selected to give away in a piano contest and the winner is wasting time in competing for it. But we are going to do this right—we are going to give the winner a piano equal to the best one in any home in the county, and to gain us the acquaintance we wish, to add to our subscription list as many new readers as possible, and to clean up the last dollar of a large amount of back subscription, we desire the interest to be genuine and make those who participate in the contest feel that they are doing something worth while and that their efforts are appreciated by this paper.

Any lady contesting, or any one else, may act as agent to receive subscriptions for us, and a liberal commission will be paid them to do so. Blanks will be furnished them on application, also, they may extend to subscribers any and all clubbing combinations offered at any time.

The MILLER MANURE SPREADER

Doubles the Value of Manure by Covering Two Acres Where You Could Only Cover One By Hand

Note the following POINTS OF SUPERIORITY OVER OTHER MAKES: It is just the right width to straddle corn rows and leave all the land evenly covered with manure. Other machines CAN NOT DO GOOD WORK without driving team and spreader wheels on out corn stubble, a thing any farmer knows is impossible. THE MILLER IS THE ONLY SPREADER that will do good work in winter. Why? Because it has a solid bottom that is scraped clean every load. It is LOW DOWN, making it easy to load. Is lighter draft than any other machine. We can stop or start cylinder independent of feed, either is operated at will of driver. We can put on 6, 10 or 15 loads per acre and unload in six minutes. Is simple, strong and durable, having been on the market 14 years. Try one.

Terwilliger Bros, Hardware and Implements

Am too busy to write an "ad." but will take time to give you figures on your work if you will call and see me. Will DISCOUNT ANY PRICE on Wall Paper July and August.

"KEMP"

20th CENTURY MANURE SPREADER

SUMMING UP POINTS OF MERIT

It is the only "Tight-Box" Spreader. It makes the fertilizing material doubly valuable to the soil. It cannot clog and break the beater driving gear. Nothing complicated to learn. A light team can draw it. No stops are necessary to diminish or to increase quantity of material spread. The operator can accurately regulate the number of loads spread per acre. No risk or delay for required parts.

It saves labor and increases crops. It spreads evenly and from starting point. It is operated entirely from driver's seat. There is no hand work to be done. A boy can operate it easily. Change of feed is instantaneous. It is the strongest of all spreaders. The simplest and most reliable. It is the latest machine of the original inventor of manure spreaders.

This office has just finished 3,000 small catalogues of the Nebraska Normal College, which that institution will send out to prospective students prior to the opening of the new school year. Prof. Pile has used about this amount of these catalogues two to three times a year and they proven to be a powerful agency in getting students. It is a "multum in parvo" of the volumes of good things that might be said of the College.

My boy when four years old was taken with colic and cramps in his stomach. I sent for the doctor and he injected morphine, but the child kept getting worse. I then gave him half a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and in a half an hour he was sleeping and soon recovered.—F. L. Wilkins, Shell Lake, Wisconsin. The college boys play their last games of ball next Thursday and Friday. Their record is splendid, they have won 70 per cent of games played. The team disbanded at the close of Friday's game. Mr. Barta and Mr. Beauheim have played in the team three years and Mr. Marshall two years. These three and Mr. Ramsey are members of the graduating classes. These young men are not only good ball players but are leaders in school work who have the confidence of all who know them. The team is made up of a fine lot of young men who will highly appreciate your patronage at these last two games. Let us show our appreciation by attending Thursday and Friday. The citizens owe at least this much to the team as well as the college.

Plans have been accepted for the new buildings of Wm. Piepenstock 25x110 feet and Mrs. E. Boyd 25x80 feet both one story and basement, iron and plate glass fronts with pressed brick facing and a party wall of Wayne brick, patent steel ceiling of latest design. Mr. J. S. Burkhead of Sioux City, 714 Nebraska street, is the architect and also has bid on the construction. He is a hustling contractor and does a heavy business in Sioux City, but is not well known yet in Wayne. The designs show pretty buildings and Wayne may well appreciate the substantial character of the new improvements going on. Mr. Piepenstock will occupy every bit of his large floor space with his harness business, the other building will be for rent.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly trading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, and neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is every where recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

Next week the college closes a successful year's work and after a two week's vacation will open a new year which has the brightest prospects. Next year, the graduates from the prescribed courses will receive State certificates from the state superintendent, who on July 15 issued an official notice to that effect. Profs. Gregg, Wolfe, Dilworth, Vaught and Mrs. Bright continue in their respective departments. Miss Kingsbury becomes an instructor in our State University. Her department will be in charge of Miss Polk, who has been an instructor in like branches in Iowa State University the past two years, from which institution she graduated a few years ago.

Many of the present students will return for another year's work and many new ones will enter at the opening of the new year. The courses of study have been strengthened some and with all arrangements so perfected that we may expect a more successful year than the past. Fred Pile who has completed the scientific course will go east to attend college a year, when he will begin regular teaching in the normal. Miss Edna Relyon who has been office stenographer several months will have charge of the shorthand and typewriting.

BATTLE OF SHERIFF'S POSSE WITH ESCAPING CONVICTS.

Bodies of Two Soldiers Found—A Third, Who Was Shot Through One Lung, May Recover—Placer-ville District Man Fatally Shot.

Placerville, Cal. The convicts who escaped from Folsom prison are still at large. The five who engaged in a fatal fight with their pursuers at the Grand Victory mines Saturday night, apparently have made a successful retreat. In their haste to get away from the militia and sheriff's posse they left a water can, several hats and some firearms on the hillsides where the conflict occurred.

The dead bodies of Fectus Rutherford and W. C. Jones, the two militiamen who were shot by the outlaws, were found where they had fallen. Jones had served in the Philippines and the Thirty-seventh volunteer infantry regiments. Al Gill, the national guardsman who was shot through one lung, is expected to recover.

Another victim of the chase was Philip Springer, a resident of this district. He is hard of hearing, and failing to respond to an order to halt was fatally shot by a picket.

A report received here states that four convicts were discovered near Lotus, in the Webber Creek district. A number of shots were exchanged, but so far as known without effect.

Dutch Flat, Cal.: Two of the Folsom convicts were surrounded here Sunday evening and a fight ensued.

It was supposed that one of the convicts was shot by Glen Wedgewood. Wedgewood was shot in the hand by the convicts.

SWORE AT THE PRESIDENT.

Man at Oyster Bay Uses Profane Language.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.: Profane and abusive language was directed toward President Roosevelt and his family Sunday as they were driving to church here to attend the morning service. The offender was a resident of Oyster Bay named McCann. He was hustled away from the church unceremoniously by the secret service operatives.

McCann was walking along the roadside pushing a bicycle. As the president's carriage was about to turn into the driveway leading to the church grounds it passed McCann. Without provocation the man, with an offensive oath, demanded to know whether they wanted the whole road. This was followed by abusive and profane language.

While the incident was annoying to the president and his family, it is his desire that no action be taken against the man.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Ohio Farmer Shoots His Wife and Kills Himself.

Lima, O.: At Cridersville, near here, George Stein, a well to do middle aged farmer, shot his wife, inflicting injuries from which she afterwards died, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

Jealousy on the part of the husband caused a separation some time since, but a partial reconciliation had been effected and Stein asked his wife to accompany him on a buggy ride. Shortly after leaving the village on a country road farmers heard shots and following the sound found Mrs. Stein lying in the bottom of the buggy in a dying condition. "My husband shot me" was all she could say.

Search was immediately begun for the husband, but it was some hours later before his dead body was found in a field.

TROOPS FIRE ON RIOTERS.

Twenty-One Workmen Killed Near Tiffin—Fatal Train Wreck.

St. Petersburg, via Frontier: There are reports that there were fresh collisions between the troops and strikers on the Trans-Caucasian railway near Tiffin last Thursday. The troops were ordered to fire upon the rioters, who were using revolvers, with the result that twenty-one workmen were killed.

The removal of a rail by strikers wrecked a Trans-Caucasian train. Twelve carriages were derailed and two persons killed. It is asserted here that the Armenians are inciting the strikers.

THEIR CLAIMS ARE BIG.

Cuban Revolutionists Demand Large Sums of Money.

Havana: The total of the claims of the persons listed as revolutionary soldiers and civilians entitled to pay for services rendered during the recent revolution in Cuba is $51,580,000.

The claims will be considerably reduced by the auditing commission, and some, doubtless, will be disallowed.

RIOTING IS SERIOUS.

One Man Fatally Shot and Another Crippled.

McKeesport, Pa.: The most serious disturbance of the many that occurred since the inauguration of the strike at the Port Vue tin mill took place Friday evening. During the progress of the riot one man was fatally injured and another was shot so that he will be crippled for life. The former is John Mount, and the other John Cameron, both of McKeesport.

Both victims were non-participants in the riot, and were on their way home from one of the other mills.

When the turns changed at the Port Vue tin mill two of the non-union men, H. D. King and Elmer Dollif, started for home. In front of the strikers' headquarters a large crowd closed in on the two men, and the four or five policemen present were unable to cope with the mob. King and Dollif then drew their revolvers, which they leveled at their assailants. The crowd then increased, their shouting and the two men were struck in the face. At this they fired into the crowd, which broke and ran. Mount and Cameron were struck while endeavoring to get out of danger.

Another mob quickly gathered intent on killing King and Dollif, but the police succeeded in getting them into jail.

LITTLE BOY POISONED.

Believed that an Illinois Woman Administered It in Candy.

Springfield, Ill.: Joe Crockfield, aged 6, of Bunker Hills, Macoupin County, died after eating candy which he said had been given him in a store by a woman.

The boy's father was to have succeeded Joseph Guller as manager of a local dairy plant.

Witnesses before the coroner's jury testified to Mrs. Guller's having expressed a dislike for children, and Druggist Budd testified that Mrs. Guller purchased strychnine at the drug store July 14 for the purpose, she said, of killing rats.

Still others testified that she was very fond of candy and always had it around the house.

The boy's stomach has been sent to the University of Illinois for analysis.

DESPERATE TRAIN HOLDUP.

Attempt to Remove Two Negro Prisoners Near Clifton Forge, Va.

Huntington, W. Va.: A Chesapeake and Ohio express train was held up at an early hour Friday morning near Clifton Forge by a mob of two men, who made a desperate attempt to take from the train two negro prisoners from Lynchburg, wanted for murder. The train was stopped by waving lamps, and when it came to a stop Engineer Peck and Conductor Hall started on their way.

When the members of the mob found they could not force in the door of the smoker they soon jumped from the train. The smoker was riddled with bullets, but fortunately no one was hurt.

THREE TRAMPS KILLED.

Collision on the Santa Fe Road Near Needles, Cal.

Los Angeles, Cal.: Westbound Santa Fe limited No. 1 and eastbound No. 4 collided head-on at Mellon, a station on the Colorado River, near Needles, Cal. Three tramps were killed and several of the trainmen injured.

According to reports filed with General Manager Wells the accident was caused by No. 3 running by Mellon contrary to orders.

Engineer Ireland and Fireman Meacham of No. 3 are reported injured, but how seriously is not known.

While several of the passengers on both trains were shaken up, all are said to have escaped serious injury.

ATTEMPTED LYCHING.

Posses of Farmers Capture Peddlers Accused of Assault.

St. Louis: A special from Greenville, Ill., says three itinerant peddlers charged with assaulting Mrs. Frank Nance near Old Ripley were captured two miles from St. Louis by a posse of farmers, who prepared to lynch them. The timely arrival of officers prevented the lynching.

Three prisoners were taken to Sorento, where they were released, but the third was held to the grand jury.

Urges Farmers to Hold Wheat.

Hutchinson, Kan.: The Farmers' Co-operative Union of America, having $1 million in Chicago on its deposit, has just been organized. The entire wheat belt of the west is being covered with circulars urging the farmers to hold their grain for that price. The farmers are in better shape than ever before to carry out this plan, it is said.

Negro is Reprieved.

Birmingham, Ala.: Felix Hall, sentenced to be hanged on the charge of murdering Norwood Clark, was identified by T. M. Morrissey of Vicksburg as Henry Jackson. An hour was spent by the coroner and his uncle in consultation with their lawyers before reaching this decision.

Two Hanged at Prescott, Ariz.

Prescott, Ariz.: Jolano Hidalgo and Francesco Alariza, murderers of C. A. Goddard and Frank Cox at Goddard station in February of this year, were hanged in the jail yard Friday.

NINETEEN NOW DEAD.

Result of the Terrible Explosion at Lowell, Mass.

Lowell, Mass.: A long line of houses moving slowly through the street Thursday was a pathetic reminder of the terrible catastrophe at Waverlyville, where an explosion of ton of nitroglycerin, dynamite and gunpowder snuffed out nearly a score of lives, painfully injured more than double that number of persons and scattered half a hundred buildings over a space of several acres. The number of dead now stands at nineteen, but it may be increased to twenty-one at any moment by the death of the ten victims now at St. John's hospital.

All day the searchers probed through the debris for any traces of possible unknown victims of the tragedy, but nothing was brought to light which would indicate that the number would be greater than reported. A small bit of cloth, later identified as the lapel of a coat worn by one of the victims already known, and a human eye were the only gruesome remains brought to light.

Judge Hadley, of the municipal court, has decided that a searching into the cause and responsibility must be begun at the earliest possible moment.

FUGITIVES STILL AT LARGE.

California Escaping Convicts Terrorize the Country.

Placerville, Cal.: Although hundreds of heavily armed men are now engaged in a search for the twelve prisoners who escaped from the Folsom penitentiary on Monday morning, the outlaws remain masters of the situation. They have succeeded in eluding their pursuers, and the ultimate capture of each individual member of the gang seems highly probable.

The people throughout this section of the state are greatly alarmed, notwithstanding the presence of the many peace officers and a company of militia. Those residing in isolated localities are in daily dread of attack by the fugitives, who are believed to be short of food and ammunition.

BIG FIRE AT HOBART, OKLA.

At Last Accounts Damage Amounted to $200,000.

A special from Fort Cobb, Okla., says fire started in Hobart, Okla., in the Phoenix theater, on the south side of the square. Four blocks were destroyed, including the Wells Fargo express office, the National Bank and several large stores.

As soon as Thomas found out that he was wanted he skipped the country, and thus far has not been found.

Carpenter was arraigned before County Judge Williams, but was given a continuance on the application of the attorneys.

HANGS HIMSELF IN A BARN.

Financial Troubles Caused O. P. Barnwell to Commit Suicide.

O. P. Barnwell, a prominent man of St. Edward, was found in his barn hanging by a chain from a rafter.

He had got up at 4 o'clock to do the chores and when his wife called him for breakfast at 6 she found him dead.

He was carrying a company for the Stange Sewing Machine Company. The deal man carried $4,000 life insurance, and paid all the assessments in advance.

Boy is Accidentally Shot.

A gang of boys from 15 to 20 years of age were gathered in the court yard at Tecumseh, amusing themselves in different ways when Harrison Hubelman and a companion happened along. They were passing by the crowd when William Smith ordered them to halt. They refused to do it, when Smith produced a 22-caliber revolver and though not aiming at them, began firing. One of the bullets struck the cement walk and glancing up lodged in young Hubelman's shoulder, making a painful though not serious wound.

Fined for Illegal Fishing.

It cost D. Gardner, who hails from Wichita, Kan., just a $10 bill to cast a fish line with an innocent little hook up the end into the Northfork River at Norfolk. "I'm fishing for trout," he explained when a bystander insisted that he was violating the state law in fishing without a license. And Deputy Game Warden J. A. Rainey "showed" him all about it with an immediate arrest.

Hold for Horse Stealing.

John Oleschak, a farm hand living near West Point, was arrested by Sheriff Kloke on a charge of horse stealing. The complaint was sworn to by Fritz Eslinger of Ponder, who claims that by sharp practice on the part of Oleschak in making a pretended trade he was defrauded out of a valuable mare. The prisoner was bound over to the district court under $400 bonds.

Plans for Postoffice About Ready.

Word has been received from James Knox Taylor, supervising architect of the United States treasury department, that the drawings for the new postoffice to be erected in Hastings are about completed. It is expected that all specifications will be finished so that the work will be placed on the market during the present summer.

Threshing Returns Satisfactory.

Considerable threshing has been done in this county, and the result is generally very satisfactory, some fields yielding 30 bushels per acre and a majority going over 20 bushels. It is estimated the average yield in the county will be 20 bushels. Corn is in poor condition, needing rain badly.

Found Dead in Bed.

S. S. Bancroft, 85 years old, was found dead in his bed at the home of his son Charles, 900 North Twenty-seventh Street, Lincoln. The old man had been in fairly good health, but the coroner decided to hold no inquest, as the circumstances indicated death from old age.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Attempts to Kill Himself—Harry Frame Gashes His Neck with a Razor and Then Jumps in River—Doctors Think He Will Recover.

Harry Frame, a bachelor of 50, living at Gibbon, attempted suicide at that place. He lived with his brother, Louis Frame, and early in the morning when called he failed to respond and was found to have left the house in his night clothes. The neighbors were called in and a search was made. A bloody trail was struck at Wood River, north of the Union Pacific section house. Here, on the bank of the stream, a razor, stained with blood of the would-be suicide, was found.

From this point the indications showed that he had gone into the stream with the evident intention of finishing the work started with the razor by drowning. Work was found some little distance from where the razor was flung out upon the bank of the stream in a dazed and semi-conscious condition. He had succeeded in making a large gash in the back of his neck and inflicting jagged wounds in both wrists. He was taken to the home of his brother.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Frame had recovered consciousness and the physicians think there is little doubt but he will recover.

SHE SPURNED HIS LOVE.

So Otto Ulhiek Took Rat Poison and Died.

Saturday afternoon he returned to Plattsmouth, and while somewhat under the influence of liquor purchased a 15-cent box of rough on rats at a drug store.

Shortly after reaching home he went to the well and placed the poison in a Gipper of water and drank the contents. He then entered the house and told his mother what he had done, at the same time showing her the empty box. The only known motive which could have prompted him to commit the deed was an unfortunate love affair.

The other prong struck the right leg, but did no damage.

The fork was buried in the muscles so deeply that Marshall required assistance to pull it out. He was at once brought to the city, where a physician pronounced the wound not of a dangerous character if blood poisoning can be averted.

Four inches of rain fell at Loup City between 11:20 and 12 o'clock. The rain was accompanied by a heavy wind, which did a great deal of damage.

Republican Convention.

Saturday, August 1, the republicans of Wayne county met in delegate convention at the court house in Wayne and nominated a full ticket. The convention was called to order by Chairman Dr. J. J. Williams of the county central committee at 2:30 p. m. J. D. King was chosen temporary chairman and F. G. Philles temporary secretary and W. M. Kreidler assistant secretary. This organization was on motion made permanent. F. M. Gregg, D. Cunningham and J. H. Porter were appointed by the chairman a committee on resolutions and E. A. Lundberg, John Goss, Frank Hooper, E. W. Closson and J. J. Williams a committee on the selection of the state and judicial delegations. The Norfolk train being much behind it was deemed a courtesy to the Winside and Hoskins delegates to wait as long as possible for them and on motion adjourned until 4:45 p. m. The delegates re-assembled at 4:45 but deferred commencing work until 5:20 when it was evident the delayed delegates could not be present. They did arrive at 6:15 just prior to the close of the convention as the work had to be done to allow some of the delegates to go on the 6:50 train. All precincts were represented but Leslie, Logan and Hoskins.

On resuming its work the convention listened to a clear and forceful set of resolutions endorsing the state and national administration, the official record of Judge Boyd and asking his re-nomination, the candidacy of Judge Barnes for the supreme court bench. To which were added on motion of A. E. Gildersleeve resolutions endorsing the official record of Hon. F. M. Gregg in the last Legislature. The committee on delegations recommended that E. R. Gurney, chairman, John T. Bressler, F. M. Northrop, Thomas Brockmeier, E. H. Wright, J. Honey, W. Kreidler, Jas. Shaanon, A. R. Davis and C. A. Chace be the delegates to the state convention, August 10, and that E. A. Lundberg, chairman, Evan Jenkins, H. E. Siman, Gene Gildersleeve, A. A. Welch, Louis Ziemer, Sam Davies, Adam Grier, E. C. Brooks and I. W. Alter be the delegates to the judicial convention at Norfolk August 17, and on motion these were chosen by the convention. The convention then proceeded to nominations by calling the roll of presents, naming in the order of the call the different nominees of the ticket. There being only one name presented for the county clerkship, Chas. Boeba, of Wayne, he was on motion of E. R. Gurney named by acclamation under the suspension of the rules. The first ballot for county treasurer was made informal and resulted in 39 for J. A. Jones, of Carroll, and 13 for Burlington Cunningham, of Sherman present. On motion of Cunningham the nomination of his rival was made unanimous. Mr. Jones addressed the convention briefly but in a way that caught the delegates they gave him a hearty applause.

F. M. Northrop moved the suspension of the rules and the nomination of Grant Mears by acclamation, which was done, so was the nomination of C. E. Bright to be County Superintendent, F. Hunter to be county judge, R. H. Jones to be county surveyor and Dr. Williams to be coroner. For Clerk of the District Court B. F. Feather, of Wayne, was presented by E. A. Lundberg and Otto H. Kuhl, of Hoskins was named by E. R. Gurney. The ballot showed 32 for Kuhl and 20 for Feather. Mr. Kuhl was not present being delayed by the train not arriving but loyal friends worked for him and secured his nomination. For county assessor Brenna precinct presented Perry Benschhof, Strahan precinct presented August Witsler and Wayne presented A. T. Witter, on the first ballot these gentlemen received respectively 18, 23 and 12 votes. On the second ballot 19, 25 and 9 votes. On the third ballot 26, 23 and 4 votes, and on the fourth ballot the choice was made Mr. Benschhof receiving 22 and Mr. Witter 31. This was a very close contest indeed, as had Mr. Benschhof received one more vote on the third ballot he would have had a majority.

Mr. Kuhl now addressed the convention briefly, having come in while the balloting for assessor was going on, and seemed pleased to think his friends had served him so well in his absence, he had a friend present who tapped a box of Bill Dugan's just for luck and the convention felt they had named a man for the place indeed.

Bert Brown took occasion to say that he had reason to thank every delegate present and every citizen of Wayne county for many favors while he had been an official in the county nearly eight years and that he would January 1 retire to private life as a citizen and would feed hogs and cattle or some other pleasant occupation but would not be in anyway be an attendee of official life to which rumor attached him.

The central committee were authorized to fill vacancies and Bert Brown was named to be clerk of the central committee until such time as the committee named its chairman.

The following in the county central committee:

Perry Benschhof
Breuna C. E. Jones
Chapin R. D. Merrill
Deer Creek F. E. Francis Garfield Otto Miller
Hancock G. Templin
Hoskins E. Miller
Hunter Emil Hansen
Plum Creek E. A. Gildersleeve
Strahan E. A. Wright
Sherman Geo. Neiland
Wilbur H. E. Hansen
Winside F. S. Tracy
Wayne, 1st ward J. D. King
2nd ward A. T. Witter
3rd ward F. M. Northrop
Secretary Bert Brown

The following were resolutions adopted:

We the Republicans of Wayne county, Nebraska, in convention assembled, subscribe the following resolutions:

First--That we heartily endorse the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, and we specially commend his efforts in dealing with trusts, which we believe to be a menace to the continued prosperity of our country.

Second--That we recognize that we as a nation have enjoyed material prosperity since the inauguration of Wm. McKinley in March, 1897, and we believe that the most certain way to secure a continuance of this prosperity is to nominate and elect to the presidency again in 1904 the lamented McKinley's successor and in policy, Hon. Theodore Roosevelt.

Third--That we believe the administration of Gov. J. H. Mickey to be honest, economical and businesslike, and we therefore endorse the same, and repose confidence in the character of the present head of the state government.

Fourth--That we recommend to the state delegates to the state convention that they support the candidacy of J. B. Barnes, of Norfolk, for the Supreme Judgeship.

Be it further resolved by this convention that we endorse the record of our Representative, F. M. Gregg, in the recent session of the Nebraska Legislature.

F. M. Gregg, David Cunningham, Com. on Res.
J. H. Porter.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine, for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For Sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

Winside Plonic.

Wayne people will be especially interested in both base ball and basket ball games at Winside next Tuesday. The base ball game will be another match between the Wayne College and the Piger teams. Our girls will line up in a basket ball contest against the Winside team, and are expecting to bring victory home with them.

Arrangements were made for a special train returning at about 10 o'clock p. m., but the railroad company wanted too much and it had to be abandoned. However we hope to see a large delegation of Wayne folks present at this festival of our neighborhood city.

Mrs. C. E. Edgerton made a trip a short time ago to visit her mother at Woodhull, Illinois, whom she had not seen for ten years. Last Saturday morning the old lady was taken suddenly ill and died in the evening. W. O. Gamble is a brother-in-law of the deceased.

Miss H. Wilkinson is packing up her millinery stock and will go to Seattle about the 17 or 18 taking the goods with her. Miss Wilkinson says she will open up her stock there if she cannot sell otherwise.

Chas. S. Lewis, of Sioux City, now a travelling representative of the Chicago Newspaper Union, visited Monday evening with W. H. Gibson. He was buried at Wayne Friday where his mother resides. He leaves a wife and two children who reside at Pilger and a brother James at Randolph.

Match it if you can anywhere in the state of Nebraska. Mr. Geo. Baskirk has this week purchased another $350 piano from Herr, the piano man, making the third piano which Mr. Herr has sold him. The instrument purchased this week is a present to his daughter, Mrs. Lida Hartshorn, of Clinton, Wisconsin, who is here for a few weeks' visit with her parents and friends. Mr. Herr says that in fifteen years experience in the piano business he has never known a parallel case, where one man has purchased three of the best pianos that money could buy, one for his own use and two as present for his married daughters all within two years. There is one thing certain if we could have more men like Mr. Baskirk there would be fewer boys and girls leaving home and going to the cities in search for pleasure.

Wilbur.

Saturday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Goss was the scene of a splendid reception in honor of their silver wedding anniversary. As usual among Wilburites the intended surprise leaked out a day or so before the event, nevertheless the nicety with which every detail worked out is very gratifying to those who did the planning. The rooms were tastefully decorated with fern leaves and sweet peas, and the lawn, where the repast were served, was appropriately lighted by the silver moon. The happiness of the whole party was in keeping with the occasion, the gentlemen chatting and smoking upon the porch, the ladies in the parlors and the young folks reveling in games upon the lawn. We feel that exceptionally good taste was used in choosing presents. A pretty hosiery dish was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, silver salt and pepper by Mr. and Mrs. White and Mrs. Watson, solid olive fork Miss Simpson, and aluminum mirror, Mr. and Mrs. Watson, also an oak rocker that would grace the parlor of Herbert Spencer was brought in with the compliments of Messrs Carpenter, Alex Williams, Earl Gibson, and Messrs and Mesdames Chas. Schultheis, Henry Bush, Jas. McIntosh, Adam Grier, Geo. Porter, Hans Hanson, Emil Weber and Homer Wilson. Engraved silver bread tray Blanche Goss. They Come for Hundreds of Miles to See Her.
Nothing So Wonderful in the Days of Specialism.
Dr. Caldwell
 The success of Dr. Caldwell is attributed to her special study of specialism. Dr. Caldwell, student, pathologist, and physician of wide reputation, having given her entire time and practice to a line of specialism, which enables her from long experience in handling these troubles to come forward as a master specialist. Her faculty for mastering disease, her ability to diagnose, and her plan of treatment is excelled by few physicians. Dr. Caldwell although a young woman in life, a plain woman, and one who is used to the ups and downs of life, puts herself on a level with her patients, and does not pretend to practice the old plan or fashion, which is to look wise and say nothing. She knows disease, she knows how to explain the symptoms of disease, and she knows from experience, and what she has done in the past, she can do for you. Her specialty comprises that class of diseases which the ordinary home doctor fails to cure, such as female diseases, heart diseases, diseases of children and the many special diseases of hidden nature. Her practice is mostly among the plain, hard-working people, who are unable to come to her in the city office for treatment; she is responsible in her charges, and very lenient with those who are not able to pay. She is charitable, and it is said has never been known to refuse a patient treatment who is worthy and in need. A number of important cases we herewith take the liberty to publish, which might be of interest to some who wish to know more of Dr. Caldwell's great work:
 Sophia Kran, Albion, Nebraska, cured of a bad skin disease.
 Mrs. Lulu Towles, David City, Nebraska, cured of female trouble and female weakness.
 Mrs. E. A. Studer, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of female and nervous troubles.
 Mr. C. T. Muffy, Meadow Grove, Nebraska, cured of heart trouble and bronchial and nervous troubles.
 Mrs. C. Linn, Hoskins, Nebraska, cured of ovarian and bladder troubles.
 F. J. Roh, Abia, Nebraska, cured of bronchial trouble, enlarged liver and dropsy.
 Mrs. Minnie Rudat, Columbus, Nebraska, cured of skin disease and bladder trouble.
 Mrs. D. W. Burr, David City, Nebraska, cured of skin disease, nervousness and loss of appetite.
 Mrs. Chas. Miller, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of dropsy, kidney and liver troubles and nervousness. She had been troubled for years.
 Mrs. C. W. Anderson, Norfolk, Nebraska, cured of general debility, enlarged liver and pain in chest.
 Mrs. John Hauman, Benton, Nebraska, cured of bladder trouble and constipation.
 Mrs. S. P. Amick, Tekamah, Nebraska, cured of tumor, womb trouble, loss of appetite and constipation.

CHAPTER XVI.

"It has been almost a month since I saw you," Conway says, drawing the small hand of Lulu within his arm as they saunter down a shady path where the grape myrtle bushes moist over their heads, showing their blossoms in prodigal sweetness beneath their feet.

"You know where I lived," she answers, dryly.

An amused smile outlines itself around the corners of his handsome mouth.

"No, you think it is solely my own fault that I have missed you—have not seen you?—perhaps it is—yet—"

"Oh, nothing—it does not matter."

"No, I suppose not," she responds, a little scornfully. "Nothing seems to matter much to you, Mr. Conway. I believe you have found the fabled Lotus."

"When I saw you last, my little Lulu, you were learning to be sarcastic!" she says, in genuine astonishment, trying to look into her face, but it is turned away from him, and she is idly stripping the thorns from the stem of a rose she has just broken. All if she could only as easily eradicate the thorns that rankle in her gentle heart.

"Why don't you talk to me?" he says, gently. "Are you weary of me?"

She stops suddenly and looks at a half-dozen great purple velvet pansies from a bed on the side of the path, and puts them into his hands.

"There's pansies—that's for thoughts," she says, gayly. "Think what you will."

"May I think that you love me?" he queries, affectionately, as only Bruce Conway can do.

"I have said that what you will," she answers, growing suddenly crimson. "But why are you throwing my pansies away?"

A faint flush crimsons his fair forehead. Their eyes look at each other as he answers:

"I do not like pansies; they are too sad. Sometimes when I stroll down this path, I see them up at me bathed in glittering dew, and I am not romantic, child, but they always remind me of blue eyes swimming in tears."

"They always remind me of the velvet darkness of Grace Winans' eyes," she says, meditatively. "I wonder—stirring up a little drift of pink blossoms on the path with the tip of her small slippered foot—" "I wonder if all our life-paths is to be flower-strewn?"

A light flush crimsons his handsome dark eyes as he clasps in his small hand lying within his arm.

"Lulu, dearest," he murmurs, "if you will promise to walk hand in hand with me, I will give you a path shall be strewn with all the flowers love's sunshine can warm into life."

A shiver thrills her from head to foot; the blue heavens darken above her head; the warm and fragrant air that rushes down the myrtle avenue sickens her almost to fainting. "Passionate bliss is almost as closely leaning to passionate pain. She is there, leaning heavily on his arm, her face growing white and mournful.

"Dear, am I to take silence for consent?" he persists, as though talking to a pendant child who is going to yield, he knows. "You do love me—you will be my wife?"

"Yes," she says, still under a tall myrtle and puts his arm around her slim, girlish waist.

"Brownie, willful, teasing little fairy that you are—you cannot, you will not deny that you love me—can you, honestly, now?"

"I have not denied it—have I?" her gaze falling before him. "If I loved you I would still refuse to be your wife."

"Brownie, why?"

"Well, then, it is because you do not love me."

"Lulu, silly child, why should I ask you to be my wife, then? I do love you—my love goes nowadays—fondly and truly."

"Ah, that is it," she cries, bitterly. "As love goes nowadays, I do not want such love—my heart, where it has been, it will not take less in return."

"And I have offered you less?"—reproachfully this. "Lulu, dear, unreasonable child that you are—why do you think that I do not love you? Be candid, Lulu, and let us understand one another. I will not be offended at anything you say to me."

"I know you love me a little," she returns, trying hard to speak lightly and calmly. "But I also know, dear Bruce, that your heart, it may be unconsciously to yourself, still retains too much of its old feeling for me I need not name, for you to love me, as I should like to be loved. Understand that I am not blaming you for this, but you know in your heart, Bruce, that you are free, and would listen to your suit, you would not look twice at poor me."

"Nonsense!" he answers, brusquely. "Let all that pass—I do love you, Brownie, not as I loved her, I own it, but you are so sweet and lovable that it will be easy for you to fill up my heart, to the exclusion of all other love. Try it and see, dear. Promise me that you will give yourself to me."

"I cannot."

"Is that final?"

"Final?" she gasped, as white as her dress, and leaning unwillingly against his shoulder.

"Why, Brownie, child, dearest, look up—heavens! she is fainting," cried Bruce, and taking her in his arms, he ran into a little pavilion near by, and laying her down on the low, rustic bench within, opened the gold-stoppered bottle of salts that swung by a golden chain to her belt, and applied it to her nostrils.

She struggled up to a sitting posture and drew a long breath, while tears rolled over her cheeks. Both Lily white hands were uplifted to prevent another application of the pungent salts.

"I am going back, if you please," she says, stepping out of the pavilion while speaking, and he attends her, as they walk gently on he gathers a flower here and there, the rarest that blow in the garden, and putting them together they grow into a graceful bouquet before they reach the house. Then he presents it with the kind of smiles. She takes it, thanks him, and notes with quick eyes that no roses, no white ones at all, more precious are there—those flowers are sacred to memory, or, perchance, remorse.

CHAPTER XVII.

Mrs. Winans sat in her dressing room before the mirror in the softest of easy chairs, the faintest of dressing gowns, under the skillful hands of Nora, whom side and heard the low, musical voice as it uttered the prayerful responses to the Litany, thought her but little lower than the angels. She in her deep and newly roused humility felt herself scarcely worthy to take the name of a long misundestood Saviour on her lips. Few of the congregation who commented on discrepancies relative to the pearl-fair beauty and elegant apparel of the Senator's deserted wife, fathomed the feelings that throbbled tumultuously beneath that pale, calm bearing as they left the sacred edifice.

"Lulu," she said later, as up in the young lady's dressing room they had laid aside their warm wrappings and furs, "I want to help you, if you will let me—let me go with you on your errands of charity. I belong to the world no longer. Show me how to fill up the measure of my days with prayerful work for the Master."

One poorly drop from Lulu's eyes fell down on the golden head that had pillowed itself on her breast.

"That I thank thee," she murmured, "that thy joy in heaven to-day over the lamb that has come into the fold."

She whispered it to Brother Willie that day at a far corner of the parlor when they happened to be alone for a moment together. He glanced across at the slender, stately figure standing at the window between the falling lace curtains, looking wistfully out.

"It is natural," he said. "A nature so pure, so strong, so devoted as hers must needs have more than the world can give to satisfy its immortal cravings. Poor girl! she is passing through the fire of affliction. Let us thank God that she is coming out pure gold."

After awhile when Lulu had slipped from the room, leaving them alone together, he crossed over to her side and began telling her of his experiences and adventures abroad. She listened, pleased and interested, soothed by his kind, almost brotherly tone.

"You do not ask me after Winans," said he playfully, at last. "You did not know that through his reckless bravery, his goodness and humanity to his men, he has risen to the rank of general in the army of France?" A soldierly flash in the clear gray eyes.

"Yes," she answered in a low voice; "I have seen it in the newspapers."

"You have? Then you have seen also that he—"

He paused, looking down at her quiet face in some perplexity and doubt.

"That he—what?" she asked, looking up at him, and growing slightly pale.

"I do not know how to tell you, if you do not know," his eyes, full of grave compassion, fixed on hers.

One of her small hands groped blindly out, and clung firmly to his arm.

"Captain Clendon, I know that the Franco-Prussian war is ended. Is that what you mean? Is he—my husband—is he coming home—to America? Tell me," she said, desperately, "if he is not coming home, what is it? I am braver than you think. I can bear a great deal, is he—is he—dead?"

Arched Structure Over Rio Grande.

The construction of a system of railroads across the mountainous section of the South American and Central American countries a high order of engineering skill is called for. The difficulties encountered are prodigious, and were it not for the experience gained in overcoming the barriers encountered in building transcontinental lines in the United States some of these transportation enterprises in the far South would be long in their realization.

In constructing the Pacific Railroad of Costa Rica the attention of engineers centers up on the bridge that spans the Rio Grande, as in height it excels any similar structure in this country.

This railroad is projected to run from San Jose, the capital of that republic, to the Pacific coast, a distance of sixty miles, completing communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The location of the road is about sixty miles north of the proposed Nicaragua Canal route. The gauge of the road is three and a half feet, and the maximum grades in the mountain district are 2 1/2 per cent.

The road is now completed and in operation to a point about twenty miles beyond the crossing of the Rio Grande, or a total distance of forty-six miles, says the Engineering Review. The grading in the mountain district is heavy, but with one exception the bridges are comparatively small structures. This exceptional bridge is a structure which ten years ago would have been considered quite remarkable, and the one feature of height is quite unusual even at the present day.

The bridge is a two-hinged steel braced arch structure 675 feet long and 340 feet high, from the rails to the water in the stream. This is higher than any bridge in the United States. The structure is in three spans.

The material for the superstructure was shipped from New York to Port Ligon, and then reshipped by rail to the site and unloaded by steam derrick in a storage yard on the east side of the canyon. It being necessary to proceed with the erection from both sides, the material for the two halves of the bridge was painted different colors, red and white, to distinguish them, and that for the west half was transferred across the canyon by means of a cableway. This consisted of a main cable 2 1/2 inches in diameter and 900 feet long.

In order to make allowance for misplacement due to possible small errors in setting the pedestal shoes, the holes in one side of the center gussets and drilled plates were left blank, to be filled in the field after all parts had been brought to a full bearing. As a further precaution the center chord sections were held in the shop until the arms of the arch approached each other sufficiently close to allow of exact measurements direct. It was found, however, that no corrections of the original work were necessary, and these sections were shipped exactly as designed.

Wise Youth.

"What's the price of your best tea?" asked the woman with the market basket.

"Two dollars a pound," replied the clerk.

"Is that too steep?" asked the bargain chaser.

"Yes, ma'am," answered the youth. "That's what folks buy tea for."

"No Doubt or Denial."

"A married man, I'll be bound."

POLITICAL COMMENT.

Spread of Mob Law.

Is it the power of example, is it the summer madness, or is it merely the habit events have of coming in groups? The public is hardly done discussing the riotous outbreaks at Wilmington, Del., when a very similar state of affairs arises at Evansville, Ind., with the important difference that the Evansville mob did not find its victim.

It is high time the American people were thinking most seriously about the frequency of riotous assemblages throughout the length and breadth of the land. If they will read back something more than a century and go over the politico-philosophical discussions occasioned by the founding of the republic they will note that these outbreaks would almost seem to give the color of true prophecy to those defenders of monarchy that declared it would be impossible to govern a large extent of territory and preserve order "with the weak government of a democratic republic." The very general prediction of European writers and thinkers outside the more or less visionary French school was that an effort at purely popular government could never succeed, except in the case of a city or a very small territory inhabited by a very homogeneous population; that local officers would be too timid to successfully suppress local disorder; that anarchy would follow, to be followed in turn by despotism in its worst form—namely, an irresponsible dictatorship.

The Journal does not feel alarmed for the future of the republic. We are not going to the low-wows right away.

which she is a part. Because of her free trade policy England is not only unable to return the benefit; she is also unable to protect her benefactor. Nay, more; she is forced to submit to a threat of injury to herself if others of her dependencies offer her a benefit similar to that offered by Canada! In the humiliation of England's present position, and in the desire of her statesmen to escape from that humiliation, is a striking vindication of the American policy of protection. We are not exposed to such humiliating threats. We are able to protect those who confer benefits upon us and ourselves.

We have "the revolver."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Will Blunder Again.

The awkward predicament of Democrats located in regions of great industrial activity is pointed out by the Mail of Charleston, W. Va.:

"West Virginia Democrats are between his Satanic Majesty and the deep water on the tariff question. They know that free trade would be the most ruinous dose the business of the State ever swallowed, but it is the party's shibboleth, more sacred than the graves of the party's dead heroes. They can't talk about the tariff and they have nothing else to talk about, so what will poor Democracy do?"

Do? Why, do the wrong thing, of course; attack protection, demand the repeal of the Dingley tariff and in its place enact a tariff for revenue only. This at a time of unparalleled prosperity, when the country wants the privilege of growing rich and richer by a continuation of existing tariff laws. The Democratic party can always be depended upon to make a fatal blunder at precisely the right time.—American Economist.

All Records Beaten.

We never sold so many products of American manufacture to foreign nations in one month as in the last April—the months of March and April, 1900, alone excepted.

And yet the Democratic free traders again want to tinker with the tariff in order further to increase our export trade.

In 1893-7 the tariff reformers got in work in economic law which they thought would increase our foreign trade. The net result was they depleted our domestic trade, and at the same time home manufacturers failed to get a foreign market such as we now have under the Dingley tariff.

On the only occasion in two generations of American politics when the Democratic party had opportunity to show for what purpose it existed, a Democratic President and Congress not only failed to effect good results, but actually succeeded in bringing disaster on all American interests.

The less the Democratic tariff reformers now say about promoting our foreign trade by tariff tinkering the better, especially as under the present tariff all records are being beaten in the history of our exports, alike of manufactures and of the products of the farm.—Boston Journal.

Ready to Meet It.

"Can the tariff issue be suppressed?" asks the New York Journal of Commerce. Suppressed by whom? Republicans do not ask to have it suppressed. They have not raised the issue, and would be glad enough to have the tariff left alone and protection go on its prosperity-making way for an indefinite term of years. But, if the free traders and tariff reformers insist upon forcing the issue, Republicans are ready to meet it. It is an issue which they have no need to shirk or evade. All the strength of the situation is on the Republican side. Democrats will make the tariff an issue. They always have, and always will, we suppose. Very well, let them do it again in 1904. Republicans will welcome the tariff issue. They will not lift a finger to suppress it.—American Economist.

Corner in Soup Bones.

It is rather mean of the Democrats to blame Cleveland for the soup bones which were in fashion during his administration. Soup bones would be cornered, no matter what Democratic freetrader or visionary tariff revisionist was elected to the Presidency. Mr. Cleveland never meant to, he was only a sure enough Democrat—Donaldsonville (La.) Chief.

THE CHINAMAN IN THE UNITED STATES

From Frank Leslie's Magazine.

It is estimated that there are about 100,000 Chinamen in the United States, and that 20,000 of them are in San Francisco. There is a considerable Chinese colony in New York, and there are small colonies in Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. Though they do not belong to the educated classes, ninety-five per cent. of them can read and write. A daily paper in the Chinese language is published in San Francisco, and another in New York.

Nearly all the Chinamen in the United States come from the single province of Kwong Tung, the most populous of the eighteen provinces of the Chinese empire. Its capital is Canton. In 1859 an educated Chinaman from the province of Shan Tung said that beside himself there were only two Chinamen in the United States that came from any province in China other than Kwong Tung. The inhabitants of this province have for centuries been more adventurous and fond of traveling than the rest of dish placed in the center of the small table and using chopsticks.

It has been said, and with truth, that the Chinaman in the United States does not ever change his tailor or his barber. Through the windows of the barber's shops you may see Chinamen having their heads and foreheads shaved, their scanty hair trimmed, their queues combed and braided with silk to increase their length and other toilet operations performed, such as poulticing the back, cleaning the eyebrows and an scraping the ears. The queue is universally worn in China, having been introduced by the Tartars as a badge of subjection when they conquered China, and having since become merely a national custom. Some Chinamen in the United States dispense with the queue, but let it grow again when they are about to visit their native land. When at work the queue is often coiled on the top of the head.

When a Chinaman dies his body is dressed in his best clothes and laid on the coffin; pigs roasted whole and other viands are spread out to feed the spirits of the dead, and in many cases mourners are hired to chant the praises of the deceased. When the ceremony is over the body is placed in the coffin, and the procession moves out to the cemetery. Children dressed in white often walk barefooted behind the coffin of their father or mother. Strips of brown paper pierced with holes are scattered along the road to keep off any bad spirits that may be hovering near.

The Chinaman, though hardworking and frugal in the highest degree, is rarely free from the vices of gambling and opium-smoking. In a city there is an exodus of Chinese house-servants every night from the suburbs to the Chinese quarter, and if one happens to be out late one will certainly see Chinamen stealing quietly to the employers' homes after a night of gambling and dissipation. But in the morning the incalculable oriental will be ready with breakfast just as usual.

The Chinese are idolaters, and have temples containing the images of noble characters, whom they ask to present their petitions to the Great Being "Shing," who dwells somewhere in the sky. Roasted pigs, chickens, and sweetmeats are presented to the "Joss," in whose honor candles are lighted, incense and joss sticks burned. The worshipper kneels and touches the floor with his head as he utters his prayer.

In every Chinese quarter are underground opium dens, to which narrow flights of tottering stairs lead. They are deathly still, and the atmosphere reeks with the fumes of the drug. Every lodging-house, restaurant, and gold-bull supplies facilities for indulgence in the drug. The Chinaman's favorite drink is tea, though he has a spirit called "Samshoo," which is distilled from rice, and drunk from small cups hardly larger than thimbles.

GUARDS RUINS OF POMPEII.

Aged Sentry Keeps Sighters Out of Area of Excavations.

Old Luigi has occupied week by week for twenty-two years his little sentry box on the topmost point of the highest heap of ashes and scoriae that the excavators have cast up out of Pompeii to the northward, says a correspondent of the New York Evening Post. There he sits, and smokes in peace his diminutive pipe of execrable but not cheap tobacco. While the other guards are hurrying through the gaping ruins below him successive groups of drooping travelers, apparently just come from the building of Babel, old Luigi's only duty is to keep a weather eye open for the unduly inquisitive stranger who may want to make his way into the forbidden area of the excavations still in progress, or for the more pertinacious native who advances a hundred plausible reasons for similar transgression from the beaten paths of the adjacent vineyards and orchards.

For the troublesome native Luigi has short words and but scant courtesy. Toward the ignorant foreigner he is more affably disposed and a pipeful of imported tobacco and a few friendly words open both his heart and his lips.

Luigi has a magnificent view from his high perch. Behind him is the lord of the landscape, Vesuvius. He has been wrapped for an hour in a private mantle of cloud and that has just lifted to show his great gray shoulders white with unbecoming snow. Luigi says it will be a hard afternoon for the travelers at the summit. Immediately in front are the roofless, ashen walls of the ruins of the ancient city, sloping down to the very edge of that pre-erlier and greater rage of the monarch who visited sudden destruction upon the people that ventured to build upon the skirts of his trailing robe. Beyond stretches the almost level plain of the Sarno, laid out in rectangular garden-patches all the way across toward the rugged, towering heights of Monte Sant'Angelo, now capped with the late snows of departing winter.

In a sheltered nook, half-way up the steep, nestle behind the frowning outposts of a ruined castle the pink and yellow and white houses of the little village of Lettere, whence, just 1350 years ago, the last King of the Goths marched down to meet defeat at the hands of Narses in the plain below. Farther to the left one can just make out the castle of Nocera, where Hrola, Manfred's widow, wept her life away in captivity after the lamentable slaughter at Beneventum. At the right beyond the clustered buildings of Castellinare, the blue Mediterranean glitters out to the twin heights of Capri and the massive dome of Ischia.

Making Sure of Her Place.

"Do you ever have any difficulty in making your cook keep his place?"

"No, indeed, she never does. I am the only one in the kitchen who has any voice."

"How do you manage to keep her in her place?"

"I have my own kitchen, and I get my meals at the back of the shops, helping themselves from a large their fellow-countrymen, and they are always ready to face danger if there is a good chance of profit. The emigrants are generally farmers or mechanics, who, finding business dull, borrow money and journey to a foreign land in the hope of bettering their lot.

Of the Chinamen in the United States perhaps one-twentieth are merchants, who deal chiefly in Chinese products, such as ducks' feet, stuffed with chicken liver, wrapped in emerald silk, and preserved in oil, pork cured in sugar, dried cabbage, salted turnips, ancient eggs of ducks and many other things esteemed dainties by the Chinese palate. These articles, on account of the freight and heavy import duties, are very costly, but no Chinaman considers a man complete without them. The Chinese merchants export from the United States woolen cloth, flannel, cotton goods, petroleum, ginseng, and many other articles. Shoes and cigars are extensively manufactured by the Chinese, the number of cigarmakers being estimated at several thousands.

Though many Chinamen are scattered about the suburbs of western towns as cooks, household servants or laundrymen, and many others live on ranches or orchards, most of them congregate together as much as possible. In many western cities there is a quarter called "Chinatown." The houses of which, crowded like rabbit-warrens with yellow humanity, were a squallid, tumble-down, greasy, forlorn air, and are pervaded by a curious, indefinable

A donkey can't bray without raising his tail above the level of his back, and the Democracy still has an impediment in his speech.—Minneapolis Journal.

But we are drifting into a very dangerous notion, that any particular crowd of men, possessing strength either through numbers or wealth, may with impunity set themselves up as superior to the law. It is time that we, as a people, should bring ourselves up standing and think on these things. The laws are our laws all the time, not our laws when we like them and not the other fellow's laws when we don't. If enough of us do not like them there is an orderly and regular way for changing them. But while they are laws they must be enforced, not in a few places, but in all places; not against some, but against all who violate them; not in a halting, hesitating, quibbling fashion, but promptly, sternly, relentlessly, by men who are blind to everything but grim, cold, passionless justice. Friend or foe, weak or strong, if he violates the law, let him suffer the full penalty imposed by the law, with deliberate unswerving action of the whole machinery of justice. It is only thus that respect for the law because it is the law can be inculcated and maintained, and without such respect for the law—which is but the orderly expression of the popular will—no man is safe in life or property.—Indianapolis Journal.

We Have the Revolver.

Lord Lansdowne, in pleading on Tuesday for an unprejudiced consideration of England's tariff position, made use of a striking figure.

"We are among the commercial nations," he said, "like an unarmed man who goes into a room among men each of whom has a revolver. We ought to buy a large revolver and let everybody see it. Our market is the greatest in the world, and a threat to close it could not be ignored."

Lord Lansdowne had just stated the facts that moved him to urge England to "buy a large revolver."

Some years ago Canada gave British goods a tariff preference. Thereupon Germany discriminated against Canadian products. When England protested Germany threatened, if other British colonies followed Canada's example, to deny to England herself the "most favored nation" treatment, notwithstanding England's ports are open to German exports.

In other words, Germany threatens, if one part of the British empire encourages trade with another part, to discriminate against the products of all parts of the empire. And her free trade policy leaves England helpless to protect either her colonies or herself!

The United States has its troubles with nations which discriminate against its products, but none has ever dared to make it such a threat as Germany. The reason for this is the "revolver" which England lacks. Canada has been trying to benefit England, the center of the empire of smell, which is everywhere perceptible and often overpowering. The streets of a Chinese quarter swarm with men, women and children; the shops are adorned with gaudy gilt signs and lanterns of various shapes, sizes and colors. Here and there a blank wall is covered with notices on bright red paper, with black letters, which are read with much apparent interest by the Chinamen. On the sidewalks in the front of the stores are stalls, where fruit, vegetables and edibles of unfamiliar and unappreciating appearance are exposed for sale. In the doorways and corners tailors and cobblers ply their trades. A fortune-teller sits at a little table, on the wall behind which a large notice sets forth his powers and pretensions.

The proprietor of a drug store is frequently a physician wearing large-rimmed spectacles and assuming a mysterious air. Among his curative agents are powdered beetles, cockroaches, skins of caterpillars, snakes' bones, lizards, deer-horns and the blood of toads. The drug ginseng is found in every store, and is believed to be a preservative of youth.

The restaurants occupy the upper floors of three-story buildings, and are distinguished by gaily painted and gilded beams, adorned with rows of great lanterns. The rooms are decorated with handsome Chinese furniture and elaborately carved screens. Here the rich Chinamen give big dinners with many courses and musical accompaniments. The eating-houses for poor Chinamen are chiefly in cellars, and are rudely furnished. The merchants have their own kitchens, and eat their meals at the back of their shops, helping themselves from a large

The products of breweries and binder factories have kept up to the forefront, and while the brewery product is all right in harvest time, the binder is the main thing then and the one you think about now. You save money by buying the money you study up on—the binder with the very best improvements, lasts longest, improved binders have fewer bearings and gears, hence run easier, no weight on the horses necks means no sore necks, the best steel and malleable construction means the lightest yet strongest frame, and the whole means to you an investment that will please you, not one you will regret. We sell both the Milwaukee binders and the Minneapolis binders, mowers and rakes. Kindly call and see them.

Do You Want Something BETTER Than You Have?

PRICE.—You can buy better land for less money than you can in Nebraska or Iowa. If you buy for a home you can have more of same quality land for the investment you now have. If you buy for investment your $35.00 to $50.00 Missouri land rents for as much as your $75.00 to $100.00 land in Nebraska.

CROPS.—and crop conditions are as good as are to be found anywhere. Average rainfall greater than in Nebraska. Pasture season is long. Winters short and mild. For live stock breeders and feeders the conditions are as near perfect as can be found anywhere in the United States.

OTHER ADVANTAGES.—Here are good schools, many churches, rural mail service, farm telephone systems—in short, all modern conveniences.

Do you remember prices Nebraska land sold for a few years ago? Well, the same movement has begun in Missouri. Lands will never again be as cheap as now.

Sells & Downs Show Performers.

Whether the spectator be a lass from the farm or a belle from the social set, she is sure to admire the lady performers with the great Sells & Downs Shows, which will exhibit in Wayne, Wednesday, Aug. 12.

In the circus ring is one place where a woman has an equal chance with her male companion. As a rule she draws a higher salary, receives the greater applause and more commendations from the management, than does the male performer. Notwithstanding their high salaries and the scarcity of performers worthy of being featured with a show of the magnitude of the great Sells & Downs Show, probably more lady performers can be seen with that show than with any others six shows.

At the head of this large number stands beautiful Lulu Davenport, one of the half-dozen equestriennes who have attained eminence as a bareback rider. Her routine or repertoire of feats and evolutions are so varied that she can completely change her act at every performance for days at a time. In all she does there is naught that is commonplace. She scorns the ordinary and abhors the conventional in the vernacular, she begins where others leave off, and ends with an unapproachable achievement of acrobatic agility that is apparently unattainable and past belief unless seen with one's own eyes.

Burglary at Hoskins.
Green's store at Hoskins was broken into last Friday night and quite an amount of goods taken. The first estimate was $19.00 but several rings and razors were missed afterwards, so the amount may be twice that sum. Part of the goods were found in the shop of Kaute-Erickson, a shoemaker who has been in Hoskins for some time and generally regarded as honorable, but it looks as though Erickson was guilty of some knowledge of the affair, though John Schiller and George Mack probably did the job. Schiller was arrested at Norfolk and at a preliminary hearing before C. Tempin, justice of the peace at Hoskins, Saturday he pleaded guilty and implicated Erickson and Mack. Schiller has been around Hoskins part of this summer and a while last year, Mack has been working near Hoskins for a month or so. They were all drinking considerable and evidently arranged the job prior to Friday night, Schiller testified to this and says Erickson woke them up about four o'clock Friday morning, gave them a key to Green's store and told them it was time to do the job. They evidently were too boozed to find the key hole, as they broke into the store through a cellar window in the rear with a crowbar. The others deny any part in the deal but the testimony of Schiller and the presence of goods at Erickson's shoe shop will be a hard matter to explain. Monday Erickson and Mack were given a hearing and bound over by Justice Tempin. Mack was brought to Wayne and Erickson given a chance to find bail; but failing he was brought down Tuesday. A charge of breaking and entering and committing burglary will land the boys at Lincoln unless the circumstances are different than they now appear.

Dixon County Geology.
(Ponca Leader.)
Last week two geologists, Prof. Todd, of Vermillion, and Prof. Condra, of Lincoln were, in this section of the state working on the United States Geological Survey. While their headquarters were in Ponca they studied the rock formations that crop out along the river bluff from a point about two miles south of the mouth of Aowa creek to a point about four miles east of St. James. A matter of much scientific importance that was settled by this survey is that the layers of blue chalk rock and limestone that are exposed along the bluffs near Ponca pass below the level of the surface of the river near Mount Ionia. The layer of shale that is on top of the above mentioned rock formation increases in thickness, its upper surface being considerably above the surface of the river. At a point in the bluffs near the northeast corner of Dixon county the white chalk rock begins to appear above the shale. Farther up the river the white chalk formation is many feet in thickness. Now the white chalk that crops out of the bluff near the northeast corner of the county and also near Limegrove belongs to what is known as the Niobrara formation, while the shale, the limestone and the blue chalk rock belong to an older formation, known as the Benton. It will thus be seen that, roughly speaking, a line drawn from Lime creek to Limegrove and thence probably in a south-westerly direction marks the limit between two divisions of geological time. Much attention is now being given by the U. S. Geological Survey to the Artesian wells that are frequently found in the northern part of the county and from there west on both sides of the river. After a certain depth is reached the water increases one degree for every seventeen feet of additional depth, while under ordinary circumstances it would increase one degree for every fifty feet of additional depth. The reason for this abnormal rate of increase is not understood. Data is now being called that it is hoped will be of much assistance in the solution of the problem. It seems to be a well established fact that Dixon county is not rich in mineral resources. Practical experience and scientific investigation both go to show that this is the case. However, the depth and the quality of the soil that is found is of much value as a great amount of mineral wealth would be. The dark yellowish colored soil that covers the hills of Dixon county is known to the geologist as "loess." This soil is evidently not natural to this section. As to where it comes from and how it transported, no satisfactory conclusion has been reached. It is a noteworthy fact, however, that most of our hill and especially those in the vicinity of the river are covered to a depth of several feet with this fertile soil. The people of Dixon county will be interested in knowing that Prof. Condra expects to continue his work in this part of the state and the results of his investigations, as well as those of Prof. Todd, will in due time be published by the government in form available for distribution.

PIANO CONTEST!

THE WAYNE REPUBLICAN will give a beautiful Concert Grand Piano made by Chickering Bros., Chicago, and listed by them at $525.00. to the most popular lady in Wayne county and vicinity absolutely free, this lady to be designated by ballots cast for her by subscribers to, and by readers of the WAYNE REPUBLICAN, according to the terms and conditions set forth as follows:

1—Any lady, married or single, may enter the contest.
2—Any and every lady receiving one or more votes will be accredited with them at once and the result announced in these columns.

3—In every paper printed from June 15, to December 24, 1903, will appear two coupons; one is a FREE VOTE and may be voted by any one, the other is a SUBSCRIBER'S BALLOT and is to be voted by subscribers for whom they choose. For each cent paid by the subscriber, new or renewal, or arrearages on account of subscription, one vote may be cast.

4—Free votes must be cast within the time limit printed on each else they become void. Subscriber's ballots may be cast at any time before the contest closes, which will be at six o'clock p. m. December 24, 1903.

5—A ballot box will be placed in the REPUBLICAN office in which the ballots may be placed by the person voting or by some one for him, ballots may also be sent by mail. As votes are received they will be deposited in the ballot box, which will be kept under lock, and once each week in the presence of some disinterested person the same will be opened and the votes counted for the purpose of ascertaining the standing of the candidates.

6—The piano may be seen (or its counterpart) on exhibition at the M. S. Davies Book Store in Wayne at any time, and all interested may thus know it is no cheap affair, but that is splendid instrument, beautiful in tone as well as in finish, and for reason of its high grade was selected especially for this contest to lend character and interest to it, for too often a cheap piano is selected to give away in a piano contest and the winner is wasting time in competing for it. But we are going to do this right—we are going to give the winner a piano equal to the best one in any home in the county, and to gain us the acquaintance we wish, to add to our subscription list as many new readers as possible, and to clean up the last dollar of a large amount of back subscription, we desire the interest to be genuine and make those who participate in the contest feel that they are doing something worth while and that their efforts are appreciated by this paper.

Any lady contesting, or any one else, may act as agent to receive subscriptions for us, and a liberal commission will be paid them to do so. Blanks will be furnished them on application, also, they may extend to subscribers any and all clubbing combinations offered at any time.

The MILLER MANURE SPREADER

Doubles the Value of Manure by Covering Two Acres Where You Could Only Cover One By Hand

Note the following POINTS OF SUPERIORITY OVER OTHER MAKES: It is just the right width to straddle corn rows and leave all the land evenly covered with manure. Other machines CAN NOT DO GOOD WORK without driving team and spreader wheels on out corn stubble, a thing any farmer knows is impossible. THE MILLER IS THE ONLY SPREADER that will do good work in winter. Why? Because it has a solid bottom that is scraped clean every load. It is LOW DOWN, making it easy to load. Is lighter draft than any other machine. We can stop or start cylinder independent of feed, either is operated at will of driver. We can put on 6, 10 or 15 loads per acre and unload in six minutes. Is simple, strong and durable, having been on the market 14 years. Try one.

"KEMP"

20th CENTURY MANURE SPREADER

SUMMING UP POINTS OF MERIT

It is the only "Tight-Box" Spreader. It makes the fertilizing material doubly valuable to the soil. It cannot clog and break the beater driving gear. Nothing complicated to learn. A light team can draw it. No stops are necessary to diminish or to increase quantity of material spread. The operator can accurately regulate the number of loads spread per acre.

It saves labor and increases crops. It spreads evenly and from starting point. It is operated entirely from driver's seat. There is no hard work to be done. A boy can operate it easily. Change of feed is instantaneous. It is the strongest of all spreaders. The simplest and most reliable. It is the latest machine of the original inventor of manure spreaders.

No risk or delay for required parts.

Chaffee Letter.

The following from A. W. Chaffee's family who live in Boyd county near the Dakota line will be of interest to their old friends here. They enclose a couple of kodak pictures of their home, and friends may drop in and see them and know how they are getting along on the Boyd county claim.

EDITOR WAYNE REPUBLICAN:

Dear Sir:—You will find enclosed one dollar for our paper. We think we can't hardly get along without our home paper.

We are getting along very well, have a big crop. Our oats and wheat was shoulder-high to Mr. Chaffee and very heavy. Corn is six to eight feet tall, all eared out nicely. We think wheat will go 20 or 25 bushels per acre. We have our farm all broke out and have a nice grove started of cottonwood, box elder, soft maple, ash and elm; trees are from 6 to 15 feet high; we have 32 nice cedars growing tame, wild plums and 18 tame cherry trees, had about 2 quarts of cherries; had 30 current and 70 gooseberry bushes, and lots of flowers. My sweet peas are 6 to 8 feet tall and loaded with blooms, in fact everything in Boyd county looks wild, even to the weeds. We have had lots of rains but no wind to speak of, north and east of us there has been hail but none close to us.

We have a new school house in our district and have had six months of school and we will have fall and spring terms this next year. We have had Sunday school since April, Dora is one of the teachers. We have our grain all out and some hay stacked. Hay land is pretty wet but the grass is very good, tame hay is very good, especially alfalfa; our potatoes are very large and nice.

We have seven head of horses and nine head of cattle. Butter is 15 cents, eggs 10 to 12, wheat 73, corn 40, oats 30 to 40, rye 35, hogs $4.65; but lumber is so high it would take the whole farm if one wanted to build house, coal is $8.50 to $9 and machinery is about the same as it was in Wayne, Mr. Chaffee says. Yours truly,

MRS. KATE CHAFFEE, Fairfax, S. D.

TORNADO IN KANSAS

GREAT DESTRUCTION IN VICINITY OF PITTSBURG.

Hundreds of Houses Are Ruined—Two Known to Be Dead and Fully Sixty Injured—Most of the Houses Belonged to the Coal Companies.

Pittsburg, Kan., About 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning a tornado passed through the thickly populated district north-east of Pittsburg, destroying hundreds of houses, mine tips and buildings of every description, leveling to a mass of wreckage a large portion of every camp between the DeVin Miller shaft, north of Frontenas, and the Morgan shaft on the state line, and converting into a strip of thickly populated territory eight miles long and two miles wide and having death and destruction in its wake. At least two persons were killed and fully sixty injured, some of them fatally, and perhaps many others were injured whose names have not been procured.

The tornado swept across the country from the northwest, doing great damage in all the mining camps, which are thickly clustered in that section of the country.

The destruction appeared to commence at the DeVin-Miller camp known as Millerton, and from there southeast through camps seventeen and thirty-one, Nelson, Midway, Yale, Cornell, Littlefield and the other camps, nearly totally destroying some of them, and doing terrible damage to all.

The property loss will not be great, for most of the houses destroyed were the humble houses occupied by the miners, and in most cases belonged to the coal companies.

DEFAULTER OWNS UP.

Treasurer of Preachers' Aid Society Took $80,000.

Boston, Mass.: In a letter written last Tuesday from Montreal to the pastor of his church in East Boston, Willard S. Allen, treasurer of the Preachers' Aid Society of the New England conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, confessed that he was a defaulter to the amount of more than $80,000 of the society's funds.

Mr. Allen has been treasurer of the society for twelve years, clerk of the East Boston district court for twenty-two years, and for sixteen years was a prominent member of the school commission. He left home about a week ago without announcing his destination, and the first heard from him was the letter to the East Boston clergyman.

Mr. Allen said that he had lost the money in speculation. He requests the minister to notify the members of the Allen family and the officers of the society of his confession.

Mr. Allen for more than forty years has been prominent in the legal circles and social life of East Boston. He is 62 years old.

Twenty-five years ago he joined the corporation known as the Preachers' Aid Society, and in 1891, was elected treasurer of the organization. His accounts have been audited each year, and securities making up the permanent fund have been examined. The report was duly received and audited before the March conference.

It was not until a year ago that a suitable bond as treasurer was advocated by some members of the society as an ordinary business measure, and a vote passed last May required that the bond be given. When in July the bond had not been deposited, inquiry was made. Mr. Allen promised to give the matter his immediate attention, to see that all bonds of the society were officially recorded. Until the receipt of Mr. Allen's confession it was supposed that this had been done.

Parkhurst knew Riley while a prisoner, as he was formerly a deputy sheriff of this county and had often visited the penitentiary. He met Riley at the depot when he was released for good behavior from a five-year sentence for burglary, took him to the ball game and in every way was treating him as a friend.

While walking home with Mr. and Mrs. Parkhurst in the evening Riley suddenly turned upon Parkhurst and administered a severe beating. Then, according to Parkhurst's statement, he was robbed by the paternal ex-convict and forced to run for his life.

Riley hailed a passing hack and was driven away with the woman. Neither has been seen since. It is believed that Riley fell in love with the warden's pretty daughter while he was a prisoner.

Lee went to his assistance, but before he could seize the fish Wagner was dragged head first into the lake. The line became entangled about Wagner, and although he struggled desperately he was pulled under the water and did not rise again.

Attempts to find the body have failed. Lee says he got a glimpse of the fish as it pulled Wagner from the boat. He describes it as the largest trout he ever saw, and there are many big ones in Keuka Lake.

STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Wheat Floats in the Floods—Heavy Rains Throughout State Hinder Farmers' Work—Inch and a Half of Rain Falls in a Night.

A terrific rain and electrical storm passed over Gibson Friday evening. No damage was done. At Butler the rain was the heaviest of the year. Buckeye valley was a river of water, with flood gates being in the water.

An inch and one-half of rain fell in One County Friday night, reducing the corn situation and helping all farm crops. A drenching rain of two inches fell up on Norfolk. Streets were in a bad way as a result. The temperature dropped to 50 degrees and winter wraps were not at all uncomfortable. The maximum temperature was 61. Winter wheat is drenching out about 11 bushels to the acre. It is a disappointment to farmers. Wet weather at a critical moment is given as the cause.

At Fairbury 1.80 inches of rain fell, bringing the total for three days to 2.25 inches, and thoroughly soaking the ground, as the rain fell slowly and steadily. It is retarding threshing some, but not the making of a good corn crop.

Another shower was accompanied by a heavy thunder and lightning, passed over St. Paul. The precipitation was 1.55 inches. Franklin was visited Friday night with the most severe rain and electric storm for years. About two inches of rain fell in less than an hour, and creeks were bank full and overflowing the bottoms. A small railroad bridge, between Franklin and Kearney, was somewhat damaged and delayed traffic a few hours. The fighting was very bad, and 90 per cent of the Franklin Telephone Company's telephones were burned out. H. Platt's house was struck, doing little damage. William Reizigs had three head of horses killed. A message was received during the night that Tom B. Northrup was killed by lightning at Waverly, Neb.

Heavy showers are reported from Harvard, David City, Fremont, Leitch, Schuyler, Beatrice, Edgar and Lincoln.

TO ESCAPE PRISON.

Mrs. Lillie Fighting to Keep Out of Penitentiary.

To save her from imprisonment for life for the murder of her husband, Mrs. Lena Margaret Lillie of David City, by her attorneys, has filed in the supreme court at Lincoln a bill of exceptions. It is the most ponderous one ever filed with the clerk of the Nebraska supreme court. Among the principal objections is the admission of alleged foreign evidence, the incompetency of a juror, and lack of motive for the crime.

Mrs. Lillie is accused of murdering her husband as he lay in his bed on the morning of Oct. 24. They retired after a jolly evening spent with friends. Early in the morning two shots were heard in the bed room, and then Mrs. Lillie was heard screaming that "Harry has been shot." She alleged that the bullet fired through the window. No money was taken and the room was not disturbed. No one in the house saw or heard the robber. Lillie died without retaining consciousness.

The case was sensational. Mrs. Lillie was sentenced to imprisonment for life. A stay of execution was granted and now the case comes to the supreme court on appeal.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Weak Boiler on Traction Engine Blows Up and Man is Scalded.

Guy Saylor of Denver City, the owner of a steam thrashing outfit, was horribly scalded and the doctors have given up all hopes of his recovery. Mr. Saylor had taken his outfit to a neighbor's where he was to commence the season.

The engine was an old one and while he was working about the boiler a weak place gave way and was scalded by the boiling water and steam. More than half of the surface of his body was literally cooked.

FARMERS NOT BANKRUPT.

Speculators Fail to Find Cheap Cattle in Halted Cattle District.

A Norfolk special says: I. G. Westervelt and Alvin Lowe have just returned from a trip through the hail stricken territory about Tilden, where they went for the purpose of buying live stock from the farmers. They came home without an animal, however, as the husbandmen of that section are in no need of ready cash and are not forced even by the utter loss of this year's crop to sell a thing. They prefer to buy for their own adjoining country and fatten their own herds.

OIL TRUST IS HIT.

Foreign corporations must file articles of incorporation in Nebraska and pay filing fees. It is estimated that the fees will pay off the entire floating indebtedness of the trust. This decision was rendered Thursday by the supreme court, and the Standard Oil Company is expected to pay into the state treasury $30,000.

POISON IN SARDINES.

The entire family of D. W. Ward, a merchant of Ballagh, was poisoned by eating sardines. Ward and two children are dead and a third child is dying. Mrs. Ward will recover.

MORE RAIN IN BEATRICE.

Beatrice was visited by a light rainfall Friday, but not enough water to help the crops, which have been suffering for moisture for the last few weeks.

HOPE FOR BOY'S RECOVERY.

Dr. Lord of Omaha, assisted by Dr. Fittle of Lyons, performed an operation on the 16-year-old boy, who was severely kicked by a horse. Mr. Kelly lives near Lyons on the Omaha reservation. The boy is doing nicely and there is hope for his recovery.

GRASS CATTLE COME TO MARKET.

Grass cattle have commenced to go to market from Okallala. Twenty loads went out on one train. The cattle are in fine condition for market.

COWS MAKING BIG MONEY.

Over $5,000 was paid out every month to farmers in the vicinity of York for the cream, which is sold to the creameries there, and hundreds of pounds are shipped to creameries in Omaha and other points. From one to five separators are sold each week to farmers, who are realizing that a separator increases their income from their cows over 50 per cent over the old process of skimming the milk.

NEW TELEPHONE LINE.

The York Telephone company is building a line into McCool, and has commenced to string the wires.

WINS FIGHT WITH HOPPERS.

Insects are Poisoned by Millions in Nebraska.

An ounce of arsenic thoroughly mixed in a half bushel of fresh stable manure is the effective poison used by Prof. Lawrence Bruner, an entomologist who studied grasshoppers for two years in South America, in his campaign against the insects at Hailgrove.

And millions of the insects died. The method was simple. The poison was prepared upon the ground where the grasshoppers were feeding. Crops manifested by the pests were fortified and shut off by strewn the preparation around the edges of the fields. Where the "hoppers" had a good "stand" it was scattered promiscuously about in the fields.

Reports from Hailgrove indicate that the remedy was successful in every way. Strayhine will also do in the place of arsenic. So will a 10 per cent mixture of insect powder.

The grasshoppers may be kept out of corn and alfalfa fields, it is claimed, by sowing the preparation about the edges of the crops before harvesting begins. Bran is the best substance and the grasshoppers like it much better than manure, but the latter was substituted in order to save the lives of the birds, which died by hundreds when bran was used.

PRISONERS QUIT JAIL.

Leave Note for Sheriff, in Which They Thank Him for Kindly Attention.

Three prisoners confined in the county jail at Sidney made their escape Friday morning at 1 o'clock by prying open the big lock box in the steel cage and afterward securing with a wire the key which opens the padlock on the door of the cage. After reaching the corridor they cut a hole in the ceiling passed through an attic and cut an aperture in the roof of the jail, slid down the iron pipe and left for parts unknown.

There were two other prisoners in jail at the time, but they refused to go and were locked up to prevent an outcry. Sheriff Babst was out of town at the time and had left his deputy, Dan Davidson, in charge. It was 7 o'clock next morning before the discovery was made.

They left an interesting letter for the sheriff, couched in very endearing language and winding up that they loved freedom better than a term in the state house.

CONTAINS TOO MUCH ALCOHOL.

Nebraska Druggists Are Ordered to Destroy Grape Juice.

Druggists and grocers in Lincoln and many towns in southeastern Nebraska are worried and perplexed. It is all because manufacturers have loaded them up with "pure grape juice" that has fermented and now contains from 6 to 8 per cent of stimulating alcohol.

Druggists of Elmer Stephenson, internal revenue collector, have prepared many warrants, and it is necessary to the honorable vendors at the Epworth League assembly now in progress at Epworth Lake Park are also slated for a thorough cleaning out.

Dealers claim that the alcohol comes from the carelessness of the manufacturers and they are not to blame. But no talk goes with the revenue men. They demand that the grape juice be destroyed or presentations will follow.

MAD DOG SCARE.

Bites Boy and Cattle and Makes His Getaway.

There is considerable excitement at Syracuse over a mad dog scare. Monday a dog, supposed to be suffering from hydrophobia, ran amuck, and aside from biting a number of children and a cow, he bit two head of horses and a man. The dog was shot and every one is looking for a strange attack on a man with a shotgun.

SEVERE STORM.

Considerable Damage Around Tekamah and Holdrege.

Three days of intense heat was followed Tuesday by scattered storms of rain, and a wind. In Tekamah there was only a light shower. At Tekamah there was a heavy fall of rain and hail, doing some damage, flooding the race track and causing a postponement of the opening of the Nebraska circuit meet.

Twenty-one head of cattle were killed by lightning on a ranch near Holdrege. A. Gustavson, owner of the ranch, was nearly drowned in a small stream which the heavy rain had swollen.

BITTEN BY PET DOG.

The 16-month-old child of F. P. Crocker, a farmer residing six miles south of Beatrice, was bitten by a pet dog. Only a slight scratch above the eye was left by the animal's teeth, but since the child was bitten the dog has acted strangely, and the family is greatly alarmed for fear the animal is afflicted with hydrophobia.

WORKMAN HAS SEVERE FALL.

Henry Furst, foreman of the brick work at the new union depot at Fremont, fell from a derrick and sustained serious injuries. He was at the top of the derrick, when a board broke, throwing him to the ground. He was twenty-five feet. No bones were broken, but he was badly bruised and hurt internally.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

During a terrific thunder storm the barn of R. C. Sahr, in the south part of the county, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

SARTO IS ELECTED.

ITALIAN IS CHOSEN HEAD OF CATHOLIC WORLD.

Pope Pius X. Understood to Have Been Leo's Favorite—New Pontiff Is 68 Years of Age—Known as the Patriarch of Venice.

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto, patriarch of Venice, was elected as the successor to Pope Leo XIII. Tuesday on the seventh ballot of the conclave in Rome. He has taken the name of Pius X. The new Pope is not so well known as some of the other cardinals who were leading candidates for the head of the church, but he is said to be very pious, yet broad and liberal minded. Pius X. is the two hundred and thirty-fourth successor to Peter the Fisherman.

It was not more than a year before his death that Leo, in conversation with Father Leonzo Perosi, the Italian composer, referred to Cardinal Sarto, the patriarch of Venice, in now historic terms. "I had him very dear, Perosi," said his successor in the future he will be able to do much for you. We finally believe in all his successors."

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto was born in 1835 and his fifty-eighth year is now passed. He was created Cardinal and Patriarch of Venice by the conclave of June 10, 1903. The new Pope was born in the town of Fiume, in the province of Udine, Italy, on March 2, 1835. His education was at the seminary of Udine, where he was ordained a priest in 1857. He was made a bishop in 1875, and a cardinal in 1883. He was made patriarch of Venice in 1893.

When the conclave showed that Leo's favorite was to be elected, the conclave was adjourned for several days. The conclave was held in the Vatican, and the election was held in the morning. The conclave was held in the Vatican, and the election was held in the morning. The conclave was held in the Vatican, and the election was held in the morning.

METHOD OF CASTING BALLOTS.

Procedure by Which the Cardinals Elect a Pope in Conclave.

The cardinals, when seated, are surrounded by a semicircle of cardinals seated by the late Pope, given for the only cardinal living who was created by an earlier Pope. Upon a table before each of the cardinals are placed a number of ballots, each of which has a number written on it. Upon a table before each of the cardinals are placed a number of ballots, each of which has a number written on it.

COLLEGE OF CARDINALS VOTING FOR POPE LEO'S SUCCESSOR.

The conclave had been obtained the doors of the Sistine Chapel were opened by the secretary of the conclave, Mgr. Merry Del Val, and the masters of ceremonies were admitted from the Vatican. The secretary then asked the successful cardinal: "Do you accept the election?" and received a reply in the affirmative. All the cardinals were then lowered to the ground by the masters of ceremonies next conducted the new Pope to the altar, where he laid aside the robes of cardinal and donned white stockings, red shoes, the long white tunic, the alb, the mitre and the crozier. He then received the benediction of the Pope.

The new Pope was then given the fishermen's ring, which he immediately received for the purpose of having his name engraved upon it. An hour after the ballots had been counted and the result made known to the members of the sacred college of cardinals, Cardinal Maffei, secretary of Apostolic Briefs, announced to the great crowd assembled in front of the Vatican the name of the successful candidate for the throne of St. Peter on earth and the papal name chosen by him. The announcement was received with a mighty shout and the troops on guard immediately fired up on the piazza and presented arms in a salute to the new pontiff.

Many Fruitless Ballots.—The cardinals in conclave for the purpose of electing a successor to Pope Leo took their fifth ballot Monday morning, with no result. At 1:30 smoke was seen coming out of the chimney over the Sistine Chapel, which indicated that no election had been made. At 2:25, p. m., after the sixth ballot, smoke again rose to the world.

Monday was the third day of the cardinals' imprisonment. In the hope that over night an agreement might have been reached, the foreign ministers, many other personages and two or three thousand of the general public of Rome, gathered during the morning to await developments. They were doomed to another disappointment.

The result of Sunday morning's ballot was awaited by 2,000 or 3,000 persons, who began to suspect that an election had been reached without a sign, smoke to appear at 11:20 o'clock, and a light smoke followed for several minutes.

When the time for the afternoon ballot approached there was seen for the first time a sign of public interest in the election. The great square of St. Peter's rapidly filled with a vast multitude stretched from the entrance of the basilica for more than 200 yards. It was the most striking sight that Rome has seen in recent years. There were fully 50,000 persons in the assemblage, representing every class of Roman society, as well as almost every race on the globe.

Considerable error has been made in the various analyses that have been recently published concerning the sacred college. This has been largely due to the constant changing of the personnel of the college by the deaths of cardinals and the creation of new ones. In the college as it is now constituted there are thirty-nine Italian cardinals and not forty-eight, as has been stated in many accounts published heretofore. Of the 153 appointed by Pope Leo sixty-three remain. The sole survivor of those appointed by Pope Pius IX. is the cardinal camerlengo, Gregorio di Santo Stefano. At present there are only twenty-five foreign cardinals.

At present there are only

DESPAIR AND HOPE

A Tragic Life Story.

If there is anything in the theory that we get our heaven and hell here on earth, it could be said with perfect truth that a $1 medical prescription known as D. D. D., literally lifted this man out of hell.

In contrast, if the reader will fairly consider the picture after treatment with D. D. D., a new man is seen. Study this picture; contrast the two. Something has worked a wonder here.

The name of this gentleman is Mr. Henry Walters, of St. Louis, Mo. He has the sworn affidavit of Mr. Walters that in just twenty-nine days after starting treatment with D. D. D. he discontinued further use of it.

Mr. Tucker purchased a drugstore at Pender some time ago and is doing well. Mrs. Tucker has lived here from childhood and has a host of friends. Both are members of the Baptist church at Wayne.

THE SUNDAY SERVICES.
 Sunday was bacalaureate day, and of so high a type have been the ministers secured to deliver the address to the graduates in recent years, that the people have come to expect sermonizing of a high order, and in this the large audience assembled in the opera house was not disappointed this year. The speaker on this occasion was Rev. Dr. Rowlands, late of Lincoln, but now of Davenport, Iowa, and one whom many of the citizens of Wayne have heard at various times. The subject was the life of Daniel, and the theme the place of heredity, of environment and of personality in determining the character of a man. The aptness of illustration, the charm of the speaker's voice and ease of manner, and withal the depth and vigor of the thought, combined to engage the audience with extraordinary attention. The vigor with which the speaker attacked the theory of determinism and upheld the view of the power of choice and consequent responsibility constituted one of the strong and wholesome portions of the sermon.

The music rendered on the occasion deserves more than passing mention, and Miss Cunningham's efforts to make it such were as untiring as they were successful.
 The marching of the body of students and faculty in a body from the college to the opera house, as is the annual custom, presented a most impressive sight, the procession being led by the members of the graduating class in caps and gowns. The column extended over two blocks. Thanks are due to Rev. Dawson and Rev. King, who participated in the service, for dismissing their congregations.
 The conjoint program of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. on Sunday afternoons has come to be one of the notable meetings of commencement week, and last Sunday's service maintained the previous high standard. As relating to the topic for the day, "Live as if life is earnest and it will be so," Miss Euzalia Johnson read an excellent paper on "Life as a Holiday," and Mr. Lookwood on "Life as a Reality." Both papers were excellent and their significance was intensified by the talk which followed by Dr. Rowland. Indeed, there are those who think this talk of the Dr's. was the equal if not superior to the more formal one of the morning. Surely that Sabbath day will be one long to be remembered especially by the many young men and women who were privileged to enjoy it.

TEACHERS' CLASS ORATIONS.
 On Monday evening in the chapel hall were given the orations of the first section of the Teachers' Class. The members of the class spent a good part of Monday in re-decorating the stage in the class colors, ultra marine and old gold, and a surprising transformation of the old stage was accomplished. Miss Vonn-berg, president of the class, was the presiding officer, and as usual the exercises began promptly. A pretty piano solo by Miss Edith Myers was followed by the oration of Miss Bengston of Magnet, on the subject, "If I were Rich," in which the true uses of riches were attractively and philosophically set forth.
 LeRoy Roggles, Three Rivers, Mich., spoke with clearness and force on the evils of "Competition" as viewed from the standpoint of true political economy, and Miss Pearl Francis, Gibbon, Neb., in telling phrases set forth the need of trained faculties in an oration whose caption was, "A Clear Head."
 Not inconsistent was it that Will F. Richardson of Wayne, should elect the subject, "A Broad Mind," for his theme and not narrowly was it treated. "A Head, a Heart, a Hand," with the grace of intellect, the vigor of conscience and the readiness for service implied therein found appreciative consideration by Miss Bailey, of Newcastle. A sweet vocal solo rendered by Miss Pa mer gave acceptable variety to the program at this point, and this was followed by the oration of Michael Hofer, Mitchell, S. D., on the subject, "Our Nation." Though Michael has not lost all the traces of his "raunter-sprache" he is none the less a true American patriot and will do his part in making our country greater as he predicts it will be. Miss Blanche Weaver, Wakefield, in an unusually sane, discussion of the question of the occupations of sexes under the title, "If I Were a Man" brought out many excellent points worthy of a wider hearing.
 A characteristic found in the lives of the men of our country who have made history, was urged upon aspiring young men and women today, that of "Earnestness," by Claude Ramsey, Winside, "Ideal of Duty," than which for mortal man there is none higher, was dwelt upon with profit and delight to the listeners, by Miss Eva Beauchemin, Elk Point, S. Ds.
 As befitting an evening of oratory, its close was marked by melody, a pleasing piano duet by Misses Pile and Rundquist.

On Tuesday evening at the appointed hour there filled again into chapel hall with sacerdotal dignity the classic column of learned neophytes. Mr. Claude Ramsey, vice-president of the class, presided over the exercises. After a piano solo given by Prof. Dilworth with his usual charm and skill, Miss Vennerberg of Wayne, talked on "Ideals" and gave evidence that she is wont to pursue them. "Our Nobles: Birthright," received worthy treatment at the hands of Mr. Nies of Wayne, while Miss Jenkins of Carroll, followed with some excellent advice about "Seeing Things." Mr. Ira Steele, also of Carroll, spoke with force and feeling on "Cuba, the New Republic." "The First Fiddler" was the figurative title of a charming essay on pioneers in action, by Miss Pile, of the College, the delivery of which was followed by Miss Cunningham in a refreshing vocal solo. Miss Ross of Winside, talked in pleasing revery on "A Dreamer," and Mr. Asplin of Bega, mixed good sense with philosophy in a discussion of the "Philippine Islands."
 "He is Odd," was used as a text for the consideration of some unique characters in history, by Miss Paul of Grand Island, while some wholesome philosophy on "Encouragement" was eloquently proclaimed by Mr. Marshall of Verdigris.
 "Novel Reading," its virtues and its seductions, was ably and pleasingly presented by Miss Rundquist, of Magnet. A piano solo by Prof. Dilworth concluded the program.

SCIENTIFIC CLASS ORATIONS.
 Wednesday evening was the Scientific night. For this occasion the stage decorations were cream and crimson, the class colors. Mr. Junge is the president of the class and acted as chairman of the evening. A piano solo from Chammanade by Miss Bressler proved a worthy introduction to a program of unusual excellence. Miss Nieland of Wayne, led the intellectual march with an inspiring oration on the subject, "Scorn to Do Wrong," and Mr. Junge of Pierce, followed with a forceful presentation of the theme, "No, and Mean It." "United We Stand" was made the occasion of a worthy eulogy to American union by Miss Coleman of Wayne. Mr. Mack, also of this city, entertainingly discoursed on the curious but pregnant subject, "Follow Your Noses." "Literature as a Factor in Life," was the theme of Miss Leahy's appreciative treatment of matters literary, and then came Mr. Beauchemin of Elk Point, S. D., who delivered an exceedingly rational talk under the caption "No Chance for Me."
 Miss Elmore favored the audience at this point with a charming vocal solo, and then Miss Bingham of Parker, S. D., talked on "The Good Times Coming," emphasizing especially that in the Golden Age woman would be supreme. "The Poor Rich Man" was the subject of an oration marked by much originality and sanity by Mr. Berts, of Verdigris. Miss Ringer of Wayne, in a telling oration urged the significance of "A Social Problem" that is ours to solve, and Mr. Vaught of the College faculty, in an oration that was at once profound and fascinating dwelt on "Whence and Whither."
 Fred M. Pile, of the College, fittingly brought the strong series of orations to a close in an eloquent, effective and pleasing treatment of the subject "Smatter."
 The program was concluded with a solo by Miss Rundquist.
 This class is the largest Scientific class in the history of the school and this fact combined with the excellent character of its members, makes the class one of which the school is proud.

THURSDAY EVENING PROGRAM.
 This evening there will be a lecture at the opera house by Rev. Hatch of Omaha, to which an admission of twenty-five cents will be charged to other than college students. The diplomas will also be presented after the banquet. Prof. Gregg has been designated as toast-master and the following are down to respond to toasts: Mr. Lookwood, Miss Nieland, Miss Wallace, Prof. Wolfe, Mr. Beauchemin, Rollie Ley, Mr. Mack, Miss Cunningham, Miss Kingsbury and Mr. Raubach.
 The above article from the pen of Prof. Crogg, of the Nebraska Normal college, especially for the Wayne Herald is loaned to us this week as a courtesy which we beg to acknowledge. The article covers the ground fully, does justice to the college as only one who has observed fully the work of the college for the year past and seen all that the past week has afforded.

College Commencement Week.
 To-day marks the close of one of the most successful years in the history of the N. N. C. Thirty graduates take their diplomas and, while they realize that such documents merely testify to one stage of progress in the intellectual life, they will none the less find themselves the better equipped for usefulness and success by reason of the year spent in acquiring elementary truth and strengthened faculty. This last will be true, only in less degree, of the hundreds of other students who have spent the whole or a part of the year in the Normal. But many of time will join the ranks of that ever increasing company, the alumni of the N. N. C.
 But a body of college students above all other companies looks to the future, and so by dint of association, if from no other cause, do college institutions and faculties. Looking to the future then, let it not be forgotten that the great need of the N. N. C. is greater building capacity. This is especially imperative now that the institution is hereafter to be on the small list of schools in this state, privileged to issue State certificates.
 As to faculty, the school will retain its old force with the exception of Miss Kingsbury, who takes a position in our State University. The school here will miss her scholarly culture and refinement. Her work in German and Latin will be taken by Miss Polk, who has just completed two years of post-graduate work in the Iowa State University. With a large portion of the faculty retained and the opportunity they have had to do the work needed by those who attend the school, it is not assuming too much to expect of them better work in the future than ever.

The school in every way, under the untiring efforts of its efficient president, has struggled to deserve success and it is but fair to presume that ever greater success will come.
 The following is the report of the various programs and exercises that have transpired, and been listened to by large and attentive audiences.

THE CONTEST.
 The week's exercises began on Saturday night with a contest between the literary societies. The program was rendered in the college chapel which had been tastefully decorated, one half the stage being in Crescent colors and the other half in the colors of the Philomatheans.
 Prof. Wolfe was the presiding officer and promptly at 8 o'clock the first number on the program was rendered, a pleasing piano solo, by Miss Rundquist. Then followed the contest in essays, Miss Schwichtenberg representing the Crescents and taking as her subject, "The Face I Know Best." Her portrayal of the face of a mother was impressive and marked with fervor. "Joan of Arc" was the character that engaged the disquisitionary power of the Philo essayist, Miss Edith Beechel, who presented in forceful outline the purpose and achievements of the Maid of Orleans.
 The orations were led by Mr. Meinke (P.), a soldier of the Spanish-American war, who appropriately and eloquently spoke on the "Ship of State," and were closed by Mr. Smith (C.), who declaimed on "Masters of History" in a manner most acceptable to his attentive listeners.
 The program at this point was varied by one of Miss Cunningham stirring solos, and then followed the recitation numbers.
 "His Pa's Romance," Miss Longnecker's (P.) selection, was well interpreted and therefore well delivered, while Miss Ora Moore (C) spoke the thrilling lines of "Toussant L'Ouverture" with a grace of bearing and perfection of enunciation seldom exhibited by non-professional elocutionist.
 The debate was upon the question, "Is foreign immigration detrimental to the United States?"
 Mr. Rohn (C) affirmed and Mr. Rightmire (P) denied. It is agreed by all that this was a splendid forensic performance, the first speaker excelling in logical presentation of matter and the second in enthusiasm and force of his delivery.
 The following judges acted on the essays and orations: Messdams Phillips, E. B. Philleo and Dawson. On the orations and debates the judges were Prof. Snodgrass and Messrs Lundburg and Davis. The decision averaged less than two points in favor of the Crescents, the announcement of which was made the occasion for vocal ebullition on the part of Crescent members and the large audience dispersed amid the cheers and college yells of the victorious society.

"May heaven have mercy on your poor, tired little soul," he answered, solemnly. "It is more than we know. In the last great battle, General Winans was wounded near our death, and left on the field. When search was made for him he was not found. Whatever his fate was—whether he was buried, unburied and uncounted, lying in some obscure grave, or whether an unknown fate met him, is as yet uncertain. We hope for the best while we fear the worst."

One hand still lay on his coat sleeve—the other one followed it, clasped itself upon them, growing closer to him as if shielded herself against his strong, true heart from the storms that beat on her frail womanhood. One moment he felt the wild throbs of her agonized heart against his own; then all was still. Lulu, the lifeless form in his arms, he laid it on a sofa and called to Lulu.
"I had to tell her," she exclaimed. "She did not hear it as well as we hoped. I am afraid I have killed her."
"Ah! grief seldom kills. If it did, this fair world would not have so many of us striving, busy atoms struggling for its possession. She came back to life again, lying still and white as Lulu's living arms. Captain Clendenon and his mother went out and left her there. They would not intrude on the sweet heart whose wounds they could not heal."
"After all we can hope still," Lulu said, cheerily. "All is uncertainty and mere conjecture. We can still hope on, until something more definite is known."
"I can hear it," came softly from the other. "I have come so much. I can still endure. While that's help I will be patient under all."
"Whom He loveth He chasteneth," answered Lulu.

When New Year's Day came with its social gaieties, receptions and friendly calls, one of Lulu's latest and most surprising visits was from our old friend, Bruce Conway. He had not called on her for a long time, and she had heard that he was in Washington. The warm blood suffused her face as she stood alone in the parlor, with his hand in her hand, and it grew rosier as he entered, and with his inimitable, inebriated grace, paid the compliments of the season.
"You do not ask me where I have been these many days," he said, as he signed the steaming aquetta she offered him in the delectable of china cups.
"I had heard that you were in Washington," she answered, apologetically. "Mrs. Conway is well, I hope?"
"Is well—yes, and misses you amid the gay scenes of the capital. What have you been doing secluded here in your quiet home, little sister?"
"Oh! nothing particularly."
"You have not been falling in love, have you?"
"Why? with an irresistible bluish."
"I wanted to know—that is all. Aunt Conway and I are going abroad this spring to stay, oh, ever so long. Brownie, cannot you guess why I have come here this evening?" his voice growing eagerly earnest, a genuine love and earnestness shining in his eyes.

"To make a New Year's call, I guess," she answers, with innocent unconsciousness in her large dark eyes, and the faintest dimples around her lips.
"Guess again, Brownie?"
"I cannot; I have not the faintest idea," turning slightly from him.
"Then, Brownie," taking her unwilling hand in his. "I have come to ask you for a New Year's gift."
A scarlet geranium is fastened in with the lace at her throat. She plucks it out and holds it toward him with a mischievous smile.
"Will you take this? I am sorry it is all I have to offer."
He takes the hand that holds the flower and puts it to his lips.
"It is all I ask; so your heart comes with it."
Vainly she tries to draw back; he holds the small hand tighter, bending till his breath floats over her forehead.
"Lulu, I did not come here for the gift of a hot-house flower, though coming from you it is dearer than would be a very flower from those botanical gardens that are the rage in Washington. I wanted a rare flower—'even yourself.'"
Her face is hidden in one small hand. In low tones she answers:
"I thought this matter was settled long ago. Did I not tell you no?"
"You did, and rightly then, for I did not fully appreciate your pure womanly affection. I thought I could easily win you, and having lost you, I loved you more. Lulu, I am woefully in earnest. Refuse me now, and you, perhaps, drive me away from you for years—it may be forever. I love you more than I did then—a thousand times better. I am not so feeble as you think me. I have fancied many pretty women, but only loved two—Grand Grey and you. I love you for her is a thing of the past, and has to do with the past only—obscure of harp-strings that broke long ago—my love for you is a thing of the present, and will influence my whole future. You can make of me a nobler man than what I am. Willard is willing, your mother is willing. I have asked them both, Brownie, let me make of that Continental trip a wedding tour."

Her shy eyes lifted, meeting in his a deeper love than she ever expected to see in them for her.
"Let me see," he goes on, "Aunt Conway and I are going to Europe in June—there is time enough for you to get ready. Think of it, Brownie, I am to be gone months and months. Can you bear to let me go alone?"
"No, I cannot," she sobb, bidding her face against his shoulder; and Bruce takes her in his arms and kisses her with a genuine fondness, prize her, after the fashion of most men, all the better because she was so hard to win.

CHAPTER XIX.
A period of three months goes by after Lulu's marriage, swiftly to those who are gone, slowly to those who remain. Mrs. Clendenon, in quiet household employments, fills up the aching void of her daughter's absence. Grand, in pursuance of the charge Lulu has left her, finds much of her leisure employed in scenes and undertakings that gently divert her mind from her own troubles to those of others. Under it all, the ground that time has only seared his hidden, as near as she can slide it, from the probing of careless fingers. His Captain Clendenon shifts himself up in this duty law office with his red-tape

There is nothing for him to urge against this appeal. She touches up the ponies with her slim, little whip, lightly and impatiently. They are off, like the wind, for home again, as he makes the last appeal he can think of to this indomitable young spirit.
"Newspaper will come of your husband at any time, Mrs. Winans. Will you go, and let me remain, found you gone, he would be most bitterly displeased. Remember, it was his express desire that you should remain in your home here. I beg your pardon, if I seem persistent, but it is only through friendly interest in you and yours that I take the liberty."
"Ah! but," a gleam of triumph lightening under her black lashes, "you forget that I have my husband's consent to visit Memphis. You brought it to me. I'm returning to the home of my childhood. I am not violating any command or desire of his."

"Once more," he says, despatching, "let me beg you not to think, for the sake of the money of leaving you, all you love, of going to that plague-stricken city."
"It is useless." She set her lips firmly. "I am sorry to refuse your request, but the call of duty I must obey. My arrangements are all made. Norah is to stay and to take care of my home. My visit to Portsmouth this morning was for the purpose of leaving Lulu's previous charge in the hands of a dear Christian friend; so, trying to win him to smile by an affected lightness, "You may tell your mother she will have company she did not anticipate, though you were so ungrateful as to persuade me not to come."

She carried her point against the entreaties of all her friends, and in less than two weeks, three dusty travelers—worn in body, but very strong in prayerful resolves and hopes—were entered as assistants in nursing in one of the crowded hospitals of the desolated, plague-stricken city of Memphis.

How One Man Tested the Cash Value
"If there's one thing more ingrained in the average man than another it is the feeling that he is entitled to some property that some one else is keeping him out of," remarked a man who looked as if he possessed plenty of common sense.

"Even now I flatter myself that I know a little of life and the world, and I have read the newspapers enough to be alive to the fact that many unprincipled men make a livelihood by discovering claims that never existed, but I'm ready to admit that I felt more than elated the other day when I received notice from one of these agencies that I'd better call, as I might be interested in a case they had under investigation."

"The man questioned me as to my family history as far back as I could remember, and it wasn't long before I was as much interested in the matter as he seemed to be. There was no doubt he had studied up our branch of the family pretty industriously, for he told me many things that got me interested in his scheme at once, and I began to feel that if there were impostors in the business at least he wasn't one. According to his way of figuring there was $25,000 tied up with red tape in one of the English courts, to which I came in on the ground floor for one-third. I began to feel that perhaps my mother was right, after all, when she contended that the family had been defrauded out of a large inheritance, and I felt sorry that I had once told her that if we were kept out of any property it was by the rightful owner. When the man saw I was interested he grew eloquent and dilated upon the ease with which the fortune could be obtained. Of course, it would require money, but I would be a fool not to expend a little when the return would be so great. I allowed him to exhaust himself in picturing my good fortune and then I sprang a little scheme of my own."

"If there's anything in this," I said, "you can bet I won't allow it to slip through my fingers!"
"Anything in it?" he asked, slapping me on the back. "Why, man, the money is as good as if it was in your pocket."
"I'm glad to hear you say so," I replied, dropping into a very confidential tone, "because, to tell the truth, I'm rather embarrassed just at present. Say, can't you let me have $20 for a day or so?"
"My words seemed to stagger the man and he dropped back in his chair as if he had been shot. When he showed no inclination to respond to my request, I left him, feeling satisfied that it wasn't advisable to push a claim for thousands on which I couldn't borrow a twenty-dollar bill."

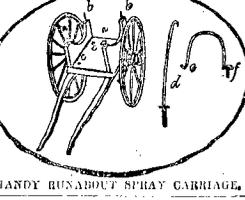

Methods of Fertilizing Meadows.
There has been much controversy over the method to be employed in fertilizing meadows to obtain the best results, but experience has shown that most meadows must be treated as individual plots of land; that is, fertilized according to its special needs. A meadow that has been cropped for a long time naturally will require some pecceding and that the fertilizer be supplied at different times and be composed of different ingredients. On the other hand, a meadow in good condition and not too old will require only top dressing with stable manure and even this must be done in accordance with the needs of the particular meadow to which it is applied. As a rule, ten two-horse loads of manure to the acre put on with a manure spreader so as to properly and evenly cover the ground, is the quantity that will give good results at the minimum of expense. The use of the spreader is urged in applying for the coat is not only even but is fine and in the best condition for good results and quick action.

Shipping Eggs for Hatching.
In discussing the packing of eggs for shipping—that is, in small quantities for hatching—a Michigan Farmer correspondent writes that he prefers a good strong basket to any other kind of package. He puts a layer of excelsior in the bottom of the basket, wraps each egg in paper, then in excelsior, and places in the basket small end down. When the layer is full it should be so firm that there is no moving about of the eggs with the motion of the basket. If more than one layer of eggs is used he puts a good thick layer of excelsior on top of the first layer and proceeds as before, flushing with a layer of excelsior. When the basket is full he stretches stout unbleached muslin across the top and sews to the edges of the basket, drawing it tight. Then he plainly labels the basket so that it will be carefully handled. He says a half bushel basket will hold fifty eggs packed in this way.

From Grain to Grass.
Every owner of a cow welcomes the time when the animal can be turned out to pasture. In changing from dry feed to grass it is well to go somewhat slowly, especially if the flow of milk is large, says Dairy and Creamery. The

FARMERS' CORNER.

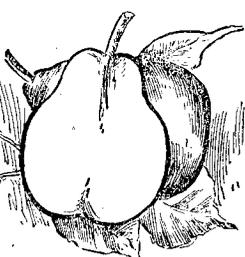

Handy Spraying Rig.
One of the greatest difficulties the farmer or horticulturist meets in spraying is in carrying about the pump and barrel. The stonebait often must be used where the rows are narrow, but the draft is much easier if pump is mounted on wheels. I have arranged a platform on a pair of wheels which is a simple, handy rig. The axle is shortened to about 4 feet, making a very compact arrangement that will turn in a very small space. For spraying potatoes when the rows are 3 to 3½ feet apart, the axle should be 4 feet long, so that the horse may go between two rows, while the wheels go between rows on either side.
The barrel when the pump is mounted on the side, is held in place by two bands of iron 1 inch wide and about 3-16 inches thick, fastened by the books e. into the eyes a. and drawn firmly into place by a nut on the bolt b. If the pump is mounted on the end of the barrel, as with the kerowater, etc., it is held in place on the platform by four rods d. that look over the chime of the cask and are bolted through the platform at c. c.

This rig is light and strong and can be driven in among trees and vines much better than a cart or wagon. The driver walks behind and drives and pumps while either one or two lines are used. With a good standard pump more work can be done in a day with this outfit than with any I am acquainted with.—Prof. S. T. Maynard in Farm and Home.

The Hartsborn Pear.
The illustration of the Hartsborn pear is about one-half size. The variety has been tested for a number of years in different parts of the country and pronounced promising. It is claimed to be a cross between the Bartlett and Winter Nellis, and with such parentage should be first-class. The fruit is of large size, skin thin, greenish yellow in color, with small russel dots. The flesh is white, fine-grained, juicy and of delicate flavor. It ripens late in the season and is a wonderfully good keeper. At present nurseries have but a small stock of the variety, and consequently trees are high in price. However, the variety is so promising that one would be safe in setting a few trees, at least.—Indiana News.

young, immature grass, especially in early spring, as is well known, contains a large amount of water, a condition commonly called "washy." Wheat and rye pastures are of the same nature. The dry feed ration should therefore be continued and be gradually reduced for two weeks or more after the grass is large enough for feeding.

Freak Farming.
There are radically different ideas as to what the better agriculture should consist in. The real farmer is said to adhere too closely to the ways of his fathers. He plods. The city man who goes to the country would correct all this by overturning it. He sees revolution in everything with which he has to do. Ways of doing business are not so much improved as revolutionized. The new things are of different kind from the old. The automobile is not an improvement of the horse and carriage; it is a new creation. The new telegraph uses no wires to carry its messages. The X-rays allow us to see through a board. The man who is familiar with all this wants to introduce some wholly new and startling thing when he goes into farming. He would reform it and revolutionize it. The upshot of it is likely to be a kind of freak farming. He will grow some specialty, perhaps popcorn, piceons, liquorice, chusung, wormwood, madder, basket willow, Arizona goats, skunks.

The point is that these small crops and factitious enterprises are more side issues and really have no great effect on agricultural prosperity as a whole. They may be very profitable here and there, but they are for the few and special conditions. More specialties cannot revolutionize a great series of businesses like the agricultural business, that engage four times more fixed capital than manufacturing. We have probably not reached the limit of "freak farming," except as it may be precluded as a more diversion. In the upheaval of old ideas, we have made many impractical experiments, but the farmer stands by the old things, improving them slowly and surely year by year. We must be near the point of collapse of all kinds of freak farming.—Country Life in America.

Herb Culture.
A young man inquires about the profits of sage. The common herbs, including thyme, sage, savory, marjory, fenel, etc., are sold to some extent in large markets, either in bulk to manufacturers, or in bunches for the retail trade. The prices paid at wholesale would equal $200 or more per acre, and the plants are not hard to raise, although gathering and bunching requires considerable time. The difficulty is that the demand is very limited and the trade is mostly in the hands of a few growers, who have furnished their specialties for many years. New growers would find some trouble in making a place for the product in large amounts. Small amounts can be grown profitably by those who have retail vegetable routes. A trade in herbs could be added without much difficulty. If all the crop is not sold green in bunches, the remainder can be dried, boxed and sold in winter; the demand is best in late fall and early winter. Herbs may be grown as a second crop, the seed being started now and the plants set after early pears. Set Six 12 inches and cultivate until the crop covers the ground. Cut alternate rows in September and let the other rows fill the space.

Farm Notes.
Don't crop the farm to death. Raise some stock.
The busiest farmer is not always the one who does the most work.
Clean milk never came from a can that was not clean when the milk went into it.
Attend to the feed of the work horses just as carefully as to the meals of their drivers.

There is nothing that will turn the wastes of the farm into money faster than growing pigs.
Some one has asked if alfalfa will not become a pest. Yes, when money becomes a pest alfalfa will be in the same boat.
Corn will bring twice as much in a hog as in a sack. So will hay in a cow bring twice as much as in a bale.

Does it pay to save a cent's worth of food in the dishwasher containing washing powders and kill $20 worth of pigs by feeding such slops?
The way to keep the work in hand is to keep it in mind. Great assistance can come by the use of a small memorandum book in which can be written the things that are most essential.

One-half of the clover hay in the country is not saved so as to secure the best results. If not cut too late or too early it is improperly cured. It is a difficult matter to get it just right.

An imposition that is often practiced on the woman—the farmer's wife especially—is if there is an old, ringboned, spavined, crippled horse that is stove up generally and good for no earthly use it is kept for the women to drive.

The solution of the hog leaving the farm depends on the conditions. Some boys to stay on the farm. Again there will be great inducements for them to do so. There are boys who left the farm who bettered themselves and have done so as well as they could have done had they remained on the farm. It is not encouraging to rent land to some rich farmer and give him about all that can be missed and be his servant at the same time.

When to spray apple trees depends upon the purpose desired. Use Bordeaux mixture when the buds are swelling, and if cater worms are abundant, and also when the blossoms are about to open. After the blossoms fall spray again with Bordeaux mixture, also Paris green, repeating both applications a week or ten days later. In about ten days or two weeks another application may be made of Bordeaux mixture. These remedies or preventives are for scab, bud moth, codling moth, tent caterpillar, curculio and canker worm.

ANOTHER INTERNATIONAL EPISODE.

BETTY RAWLINS had a bank account, and a huge one at that. But Betty had a greater fortune in her face, for she was as pretty as a spring beauty, and though she was perverse and pouty when she wanted to be she was ordinarily as sweet as a violet.

Betty lived in the summer time at Lowland Glen, not many miles removed from Fort Sherman, a big garrison to fill the ranks of the company had they been fowled to drop the sword and shoulder the flag. Betty loved the military—what girl doesn't?—and if the truth be told Betty's heart was set on marrying into the soldiery, but she had made up her mind secretly that he couldn't think of looking at anything less than a colonel, and when she thought of it she sighed. The regulars were all so dreadfully old, and Betty was only 19, mind you.

There was young Roy Lanyard stationed at Fort Sherman. He was mighty good looking, Betty admitted this to herself, and it wouldn't be a bit hard to love him, but Roy was only a captain, and nothing but a colonel would do. Captain Lanyard, as just as desperately in love with Betty as a young soldier just old enough to know his own mind can be, he didn't care a rap about Betty's bank account; in fact, he never gave it a thought. It was just Betty herself that he wanted, but he didn't dare say so.

Now Betty had another failing, not uncommon among American girls, but old enough thoroughly to understand that Yankee husbands are the best in the world, and that was a firm belief that the ideal condition in married life would be that which would come from a husband who was a combination of CAPT. ROY LANYARD LOOKED ON AND WAS MISERABLE.

Englishman and English army officer. "The colonels are younger over there," said Betty to herself, "and they are all of aristocratic family, and, oh, well, Englishmen are just too lovely for anything."

The summer colony at Lowland Glen was unusually large that season. There were bunches of swell doings, as the slangy Yale cousin of Betty would put it. The army officers from Fort Sherman were much in evidence, and one young captain in particular was very much in evidence in the vicinity of Miss Betty Rawlins. Betty saw into the evidence clearly, and how she did wish that the president would retire some few hundreds of superior officers so that Roy Lanyard could tack the abbreviation "Col." to the front part of his name.

One day there was excitement at Lowland Glen. Mrs. Calumet had invited two Englishmen, one of them an army officer, to spend the month with them at their summer home. The news reached Betty the morning after the arrival of the Calumet's two guests. Twenty young women had told her about it. Let the girls alone for spreading news of this kind. "And Betty," said one of her informants, "one of the Englishmen is a colonel in his majesty's service, and young and good looking at that."

Betty's heart gave a thump. "At last," she murmured to herself. The next afternoon Betty met the Englishmen at the Dexter Country Club. Her heart fluttered a little as the younger of the two men—the other was old and out of the running—was introduced to her. Colonel Reginald Southcote was his name. It fairly rang of aristocracy and militarism. Betty knew that he was if Simon-pure Englishman all right enough because of his name, his accent and his clothes—which didn't fit.

For the next week Colonel Reginald Southcote was Betty Rawlins's shadow. Captain Roy Lanyard looked on and was miserable. Betty gave him two dances and about three words during the entire week.

"No show for one of Uncle Sam's poor artillerymen when there's one of King Edward's men with a dravel and a monocle about," sighed poor Captain Roy.

Colonel Reginald Southcote was not long in finding out that Betty Rawlins had a pot of money and that she adored the military. Betty asked him one day what his regiment was, and he replied proudly: "I am the colonel of the Royal Yorkshshire Regiment," he said.

Betty had heard tales about Englishmen pretending to be what they were not, but the colonel looked honest enough, and the girl was half ashamed of herself when she went to a library in the city and took down a British military gazette from the shelf and looked for Royal Yorkshshire Regiment. She found it all right, and with the name of Reginald Southcote set down as colonel thereof.

From that time Betty was very cordial to the colonel. She turned the conversation occasionally on the Boer war, expecting to hear some deeds of daring modestly told, but the colonel was strangely silent on the subject of field service, and Betty put it down to a brave man's reticence; when it came to speaking of his own acts on the field of battle Betty might not have liked it had she known that when she was looking up the colonel's regiment he was making inquiries in certain financial circles about the extent of her bank account. The report seemed to please him, and he proceeded to make hay while the sun shone, and it was a particularly cloudless month at Lowland Glen.

Betty knew with a girl's intuition that an offer was not far away. She felt a pang, however, every time she saw Captain Lanyard and saw how miserable he looked, though he tried to put a brave face on the matter. "The truth be told, Betty cried a little in the privacy of her room when she looked at the glorious old flag in the sun in the sunshine at the flagstaff peak in the fort beyond, and sighed and sighed again.

One day Lawyer Coke, who looked after Betty Rawlins's estate, heard from a close friend that a certain Englishman had been inquiring about Betty's financial standing. "Portune hangs or it not a fraud," said old Coke to himself, and then, as luck would have it, he happened to pick up a copy of the Broad Arrow, the journal of the united services of Great Britain. Lawyer Coke looked at it. His eyes fell on a paragraph and he chuckled. He folded the paper up, put it in his pocket and took the first train for Lowland Glen. He marked the paragraph in the paper and put it where he knew Betty would be sure to pick it up, and from the nature of the publication he knew she would be sure to read it from start to finish.

Betty Rawlins felt that the hour was coming when she would have to answer a question put to her by Colonel Reginald Southcote. She was thinking of this when she picked up the Broad Arrow. She knew what the paper was, for she had heard of it. She read it eagerly. The date of the paper was three months back. The marked paragraph caught her eye. She read this:

"General Powell-Baden inspected the Royal Yorkshshire Regiment last Thursday. It was the first training day of this militia organization for a year. The new men were in poor trim, and Colonel Reginald Southcote, who has seen no foreign service and very little at home, had hard work to give commands and to sit his horse properly. The regiment will need overhauling to bring it up to even militia standards."

The paper dropped from Betty's fingers. "Milliaman never saw a day's real service, couldn't sit on his horse," and then Betty gasped. Her thoughts turned to another paragraph that she had read in an American journal. It told how one Captain Roy Lanyard had received the Congressional medal of honor for personal gallantry in the saving of the life of a comrade under fierce fire in the Philippine Islands.

Betty knew that night at the ball at the hotel that Colonel Reginald Southcote was seeking her out, but she avoided him. Captain Roy Lanyard met her and she smiled on him, and there was a look in her eyes that made the young soldier's heart beat. "Won't you go for a walk with me?" he said. "Yes," she answered softly.

As they passed down the hotel steps the moonlight fell full upon them, and Lawyer Coke, who was standing on the veranda, smiled, and, being a bit of a wag, he turned to a friend who had been watching the course of events for a month past and said:

"Alas! Poor Yorkshshire."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tale of a Grateful Moose.
The moose and elk liberated in the Adirondacks by the State of New York and William C. Whitney during the last two years have played rather odd pranks in the gardens of the natives and with loads of hay in transit, but it cannot be said that they are ungrateful animals, says a New York Times writer. The home of the moose this winter has been in the vicinity of the Brown's Tract ponds, and there on Saturday evening the crew of a freight train on the Racquette Lake railroad discovered a cow moose in distress. The animal had been walking along the shore of a pond and broke through the ice and plunged under in the hole for some time, unable to help itself.

According to the story told by a trainman, he and his companions looked on with varying emotions, but finally summoning their courage, they went to the animal's assistance and got it out of the water with the aid of boards. Instead of taking to the woods after its rescue the moose followed the trainman about as a pet dog might, ate all of their luncheon that they could spare, warmed itself at the side of the locomotive, got in the way of the train and refused to go even when the train was compelled to move away. Its gratitude was evident.

The elk and moose with which it is hoped to restock the Adirondacks have taken good care of themselves during the winter. The killing of a young bull moose near Newcomb has aroused public feeling considerably.

Humanity and Polity.
"Skinner was finding faulty because the fire engines horses are driven so wecklessly fast."
"I'll bet if his house was on fire he'd favor driving them a good deal faster."
"No, he wouldn't. He's got that old shell of his insured for twice its value."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

With Variations.

The way of the philanthropist, of whom the author of "A Third Pot Pourri" tells, seems unduly hard. The philanthropist, who was a gentle old lady of Exeter, England, got hold of a maimed sailor, who moved her to great pity. To help him along she purchased a tray on which he was to expose gingerbread for sale.

She gave him a start in gingerbread, also the privilege of standing before her most respectable residence to cry his wares. In addition, she composed and taught him the following words to repeat at intervals: "Will any good, kind Christian buy some fine, spicy gingerbread of a poor, afflicted old man?"

The first morning the sailor sold a shilling's worth of gingerbread in a short time, and his success went to his head. Pretty soon, from his station on the pavement in front of the gentle old lady's house, his voice floated in to her in this appeal: "Will any poor, afflicted Christian buy some fine, spicy gingerbread of a poor, afflicted old man?"

Despite this sadly infixed cry, trade became very good so good, indeed, that when the philanthropist again heard her words they ran: "Will any poor, afflicted Christian buy some poor, afflicted gingerbread of a good, kind old man?"

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven, however, that it is a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Queer Visiting Cards. In Corea visiting cards are a foot square. The savages of Dahomey announce their visits to each other by a wooden board or the branch of a tree artistically carved. This is sent on in advance, and the visitor, on taking leave, pockets his card, which probably serves him for many years. The natives of Sumatra also have a visiting card consisting of a piece of wood about a foot long and decorated with a bunch of straw and a knife.

Fibroid Tumors Cured

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine. Some time ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and today I am a well woman.

Venezuela Etiquette.

For some time now the world has been looking at Venezuela with more than ordinary interest. This gives timeliness to a paragraph from a recent number of the Evangelist. In regard to the multiplicity of "generals" in the Venezuelan army, it has been observed that those worthies, so numerous as to be almost unimportant, are the only men who are allowed to wear their spurs at official receptions.

The major of an English regiment, being about to pay a call of ceremony upon the governor of an interior province, asked his servant for his sword, intending to put it on with his uniform. The mozo grimly inquired his rank in the army, and on being told, observed that officers of that grade in Venezuela were not allowed to wear swords through the streets on visits of ceremony; but he added that he, the servant, holding the rank of general in the army, could wear his own sword, and laid it over to his master at the governor's palace.

She Didn't Care. Maplebluff, Iowa, Aug. 10.—"I felt as though I didn't care whether I lived or died. I was so miserable all the time." In these words does Miss Nellie Barfoot of that place describe her condition. Every woman who is, or has been sick and suffering will understand and appreciate just how Miss Barfoot felt, and there are no doubt many thousands of similar cases. It is truly an awful thing when a woman gets so low that she can say "I don't care whether I live or die."

But Miss Barfoot tells a different story today, and her words should guide every suffering woman to the path of health and happiness. "I used Todd's Kidney Pills, and I am cured. I feel like a new person, and I would say to every woman suffering as I did, give Todd's Kidney Pills a trial and you will not be disappointed. They are worthy of the highest praise."

Advice on How to Succeed. THERE are some fatal signs of a warning in the epidemic of advice on how to succeed. It is futile enough, as a rule, for one man to give advice to another in a particular case when his advice has been sought and when he knows all the main facts. But what an utter waste of time for one man to advise an infinitely large and wholly unknown audience of all ages, conditions and aptitudes. And upon such a subject as success! What is "success"? Does anybody know? Can anybody tell? Is it to earn $10,000,000 and lose friends, family life, and health? Is it to become President or Senator and lose mainly self-respect by truckling to bosses, lying about one's real views on every important question and making one's self a mere voting machine to register the will of an interest or a combination of interests in control of the campaign committee and therefore of the party? Is it to write a book to catch the crowd—a book one must apologize for to all one's acquaintances? Or is it merely to keep one's self-respect, to work conscientiously at the task in hand and to care not a rap for consequences? When Shakespeare made Wolsey say, "Fling away ambition," he was expressing something more than the bitterness of a soured and stricken statesman. Whenever a man entertains an ambition beyond the development of his own intellect and character, doesn't he mount himself upon a steed that has never yet been broken to bridle?

What the deponents of advice on success are really seeking is something they can never find—how to succeed without work. At bottom all the envy of the well-to-do in the bosoms of the not-well-to-do is based upon hatred of work. The rich man is not envious for his riches, for his responsibilities; the facts that he has to work and to worry without ceasing, that he never has a thought free from responsibility of some sort, are absolutely ignored. All the covetous thinks is, "That fellow doesn't have to work." And it is impossible to convince him that he is mistaken just as it is impossible to convince the average human being that he would not, and could not, endure it to change places with the King of England and Emperor of India unless he had been bred from childhood to the dull life of royalty. It is easy to reason men into a belief in the multiplication table and the law of gravitation. The impossible begins when one seeks to demonstrate the propositions about life that are "plain as the nose on your face." There isn't room for doubt that the only escape from wretchedness in this

HOW FIRES MAY START.

Several Things That Will Cause Spontaneous Combustion. Damp lampblack will ignite from the sun's rays. The same can be said of cotton waste moist with lard or other animal oil. Lampblack and a little oil or water will, under certain conditions, ignite spontaneously. Nitric acid and charcoal create spontaneous combustion. New printers' ink on paper when in contact with a steam pipe will ignite quickly. Rotted linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts on cotton waste will ignite in a few hours under a mild heat, and will in time create enough heat to ignite spontaneously, says Cassier's Magazine. Bituminous coal should not be stored where it will come in contact with wood partitions or columns or against warm boiler settings or steam pipes. This coal should not be very deep if it is to be kept on storage for a long period. If piled in the basement of a building it should be shallow and free from moisture and under good ventilation. That liable to absorb moisture should be burned first. If on fire a small quantity of water showered on this kind of coal cools it and retards any great supply of water reaching the fire, thus necessitating the overhauling of the pile. Iron chips, filings or turnings should not be stored in a shop in wooden boxes. The oily waste which is not infrequently thrown among them adds to the danger of fire from this source. The sweepings from the machine shop, if kept on hand, should never be placed over iron shavings. This mass of disintegrated iron is enough to ignite heat and combustion, when mixed with oil will ignite spontaneously after becoming damp. A steam pipe against wood will cause the latter to ignite spontaneously after being carbonized, particularly if superheated steam enters the pipe, thus increasing the temperature.

TAKING "A DAY OFF."

A party of friends, men whose professions leave them little time for rest or amusement, went into the country for a twenty-four hours' holiday, resolutely determined to free their minds for that length of time from all ideas connected with their work. "There's to be no talking shop," said the lawyer, "on penalty of exclusion from the company," and every one agreed with him.

The morning was spent in a long tramp along country roads; then came a hearty dinner at noon, followed by another tramp, which was brought to a close by a heavy shower. The company returned to the inn where they were to pass the night, and found a bright fire awaiting them. "Now let's have an evening of quiet enjoyment with these books," said the doctor. "I see there are a number here of which I've heard and that I haven't read. What do you say?" Again every one agreed, and presumably there was no sound in the room save the crackling of the fire, the soft rustle of the pages of book or magazine, and an occasional contented sigh.

A BACK NUMBER.

The Milk and Egg Diet. Staring the patient who has a sick stomach is an out of date treatment and one that does not attract attention, and nourishing food Grape-Nuts that the weakest stomach can handle and grow strong upon.

There is plenty of proof of this: "I had suffered from stomach trouble for six years and for most of the last two years had been confined to my bed, the trouble having become chronic in spite of the very best medical attention. I had always been a coffee drinker, but for the past year I could not drink it at all because it made me so nervous I could not sleep and my appetite was almost entirely gone.

"Then some friend advised me to try the pre-mentioned Grape-Nuts, and about three months ago I did so and since that time my improvement has been so rapid that my customers and friends are astonished and every day someone remarks upon my changed condition. I have gained 15 pounds, sleep well, my appetite is good and my digestion is perfect. Where I have lived on milk and light diet for years I now eat most anything I want and don't suffer any inconvenience either. The way Grape-Nuts food has built up my stomach and strengthened my nervous system particularly is just wonderful. "I drink your food drink Postum, too, and no longer feel the want of coffee. There is absolutely no doubt that leaving off coffee and using Grape-Nuts and Postum has brought me out of my bed from an invalid back to face health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and that reason is plain to all eyes. My wife and I, a few minutes investigating in the interest of health. Send to the Co. for particulars by mail of extension of time on the $7,500.00 cooks' contest for 788 money prizes.

OPINIONS OF GREAT PAPERS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS

A Combination of Farmers.

AN organization called the American Society of Equity, consisting of farmers and having its headquarters at Indianapolis, has issued a bulletin to the farmers of the West advising them that, by means of co-operation, it is easily possible to make $1 per bushel the minimum price of wheat during the coming season. The executive authorities of the American Society of Equity believe that it is easily possible, if the farmers will but exercise a small degree of self-restraint, to have the price of wheat in Chicago range from $1 upward, though the advice is given not to insist upon more than $1, for the reason that to hold for higher prices would lead to a great accumulation of the wheat supply in this country, which would have a disastrous effect when the time came to market the next harvest.

An obvious difficulty in carrying out a plan of this kind is the impossibility of securing concerted action among hundreds of thousands of individuals widely separated from each other and having little or no immediate inter-communication. It also has to be borne in mind that the command we have of the markets of Europe for the disposal of our wheat is a conditional one. If these were a failure of the crops in the great grain-growing countries of the world, of course, our wheat would be in demand, but when the wheat crops of the great grain-growing countries are satisfactory in quantity our sales are predicated on a willingness to take the same price that others are asking for equivalent supplies.—Boston Herald.

THE FARMER IS A TYRANT WHO COULD NOT WELL BE SPARED

NINE times out of ten when you scratch a farmer you scratch a tyrant," said a suburban man who always has a new theory in his vest pocket.

"It's a fact; I'm a farmer's grandson, a farmer's son, and a farmer myself, so I know what I'm talking about. To own land and have sole control of everything his eye lights on is what makes a man a tyrant. The man who bosses farm hands all day, and who bosses horses, cows and pigs from morning till night, naturally gets to bossing his wife and his sons and daughters. He is czar of his small rural Russia, and it takes a firm hand to hold him down. That's why so many farmers have feuds with other farmers in their neighborhood—so many czars naturally come in conflict, and fall out.

"More than any other man in the world," continued the amateur preacher, "the man who lives in the country needs a good, firm-handed, high-tempered wife to hold him in, and make him behave himself. Every farmer who will tell the truth will tell you this. The farmer's wife must be a good fighter—for she has, in most cases, lots of fights to fight. She has to fight for her chickens—the tyrant-farmer always tries to meddle with his wife's chickens; she has to fight for college educations for her sons and daughters—she has to fight for all their privileges and pleasures. The average farmer never can understand why his children don't love farm life as well as he does. The farmer's wife has to keep peace between him and his neighbors—she has to often to contend to get a horse to go to town with on little pleasure jaunts of her own. Oh, these things are all true, in too many farmers' families.

"The farmer is a fine fellow, and the world couldn't spare him, but he does love to boss to beat the band. Two of my daughters have married farmers, and I put mischief into their heads in good season and taught them how to hold their own. A man respects a woman who won't let him have his own way too much. My wife has regulated me until I'm pretty respectable—and that's why I see all these things. Most farmers are big tyrants—yes, sir."—Detroit Free Press.

Incidents illustrative of some of these traits are the following," he says: "A man living on Hell-for-sartin creek, refusing to allow his sick baby to be taken to a hospital at Berea college, 'because,' he argued, 'if she's a-goin' to live, she'll get well, anyhow, I reckon, and I don't guess, if she's a-goin' to die, nothin' we kin do won't save her.' Again, a man on Bullsick creek, in explaining why his child died said that 'no one couldn't make her take no medicine. She just wouldn't take it. She was a Baker through and through, and you never could make a Baker do nothin' he didn't want to do.' A mountaineer in Tennessee heard his wife complain that, no matter how hard she churned, and no matter what she did, she could not make butter come that day. "That nar's Nance Clay's doin's," said the husband. "I'll soon fix her." He proceeded to draw the figure of a woman on a sheet of paper, and when it was finished he marked with an oval the place where her heart would be. He pined the paper on the wall of his log cabin, melted a silver coin into the form of a bullet, took down his rifle aimed at the drawing and shot the bullet through the oval. He believed that a neighbor named Nancy Clay—presumably an aged splinter of shrewdness temper of meddling disposition—had bewitched the milk, and that by shooting her through the heart in the drawing he could cause her to sicken and die. This is a very ancient notion, found in one form or another among the red Indians, the negroes, the Asiatic, and many other old races."

Spelling a Phrase. In her "Letters from the Holy Land" Lady Butler protested vigorously, although vainly, against the introduction of railways into Palestine.

Every yard of that small and beautiful country is precious in her eyes, and that its echoes should be awakened by a sporting locomotive is, she believes, abhorrent to reverent persons. She scores a point with her statement that an express train could run in two hours "from Dan to Beersheba," which cuts down the significance of the familiar association of the two places so that there seems to be nothing left.

The Way to Court. "Well," said the young lawyer, "I pleaded my first suit yesterday and won it."

"You don't say?" "Yes, congratulate me, old man, I'm engaged to Miss Love."—Philadelphia Press.

The national bad habit is not stealing, drinking, gambling or loafing, but plain, every-day exaggeration.

Man-Made Floods and Desolation.

BEFORE 1862 there was a good boating stage of water through the open season in the Western rivers. This ranged in the Ohio and Mississippi from twelve to fifteen feet. Now, in nearly all the rivers, there are periods when the water is very high, and other periods when it is very low.

Forty years ago the smaller rivers and streams in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York—many of them fed by springs and a regular flow the year around, and were full to the banks. The man who returns to his old home in these States now finds these creeks and rivers almost dry in the summer and raging torrents in the spring.

Many of the springs famous forty years ago are no longer in existence. Streams that then gave a regular supply of water to hundreds of farms are now in the summer time simply a series of pools. Even in our largest rivers in the dry seasons there is scarcely water enough for navigation, while in the spring come great floods like that recently raging in the Missouri and its tributaries.

There is a reason for this change. Fifty years ago the native forests in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York were in their wild state. The trees had not been cut and the underbrush had not been cleared away. Now these forests have all been cut. Where there were square miles of forest there are now square miles as bare of trees as the prairies in Illinois.

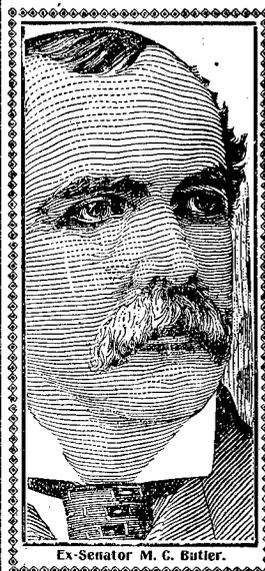

Forty years ago the headwaters of all our great river systems were in highlands covered by trees. Gradually inroads were made upon these forests, and the mountains in which are found the fountains of the Ohio River system are now denuded. In the mountain regions at the sources of the Missouri and its tributaries two-thirds of the timber has been cut. In Wisconsin and Minnesota, on the headwaters of the Mississippi, 90 per cent of the trees have been cut.

Had the forests on the mountains and foothills not been cut or been destroyed by great forest fires, the snow would not have melted quickly and the heavy rainfall would, in part, have been retained in forest lands. Under present conditions, however, the thousands of mountain streams run with overflowing banks to the rivers, and the great river became a terrific agent of destruction.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Warning to Strikers.

WE all know from past experiences that it is quite possible for the members of a great community, in all except their food supply, to subsist when the outputs of mills and factories are reduced to less than half of the amount which is possible for them to produce. But such a shutting-down means that the great mass of the wage-earners are no longer in receipt of earnings which rise in any degree above what is necessary to merely maintain existence. Under such conditions the operatives in American factories are made to realize by painful personal experience that there are other qualifications besides the better rate of wages and the minimum hours of daily work in determining whether their condition is or is not a satisfactory one. The man who can find work only for one-third to one-half of his time is ordinarily hard pressed to support his family, and hence we would suggest to the labor organizations that, while their demands in many instances may be just ones and worthy of determined maintenance, such demands should be made with discrimination, and that sympathetic strikes, which disarrange trade, should be deprecated, and not advocated. We say this because it is easily possible, by an extension of the troubles we are now having, to so paralyze industry as to bring what is known as business prosperity to a prompt and for some years to come, an effective ending.—Boston Herald.

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA Recommends Pe-ru-na For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia—Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of Other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

Ex-U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina was Senator from that State for two terms. In a recent letter to The Pe-muna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., says: "I can recommend Pe-muna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Pe-muna cures catarrh. Pe-muna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Pe-muna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Pe-muna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Pe-muna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Pe-muna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Pe-muna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Pe-muna is a catarrh remedy. Pe-muna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

A "Stone Forest."

There is what may be called a stone forest on Sau Nicholas Island, off Southern California. This weird forest is the result of some awful eruption that must have taken place long ago and is described thus. The original condition of the land was that of a huge forest, when an eruption of the Mount Pelee order swept down upon it, blasting off the verdure and leaving only the long stumps of what were once beautiful trees; then the outbreak, as is often the case, caused the sea to rush in on the land. The action of the water and chemical remains of the eruption (combined lime and lava) transformed, after long years, the stumps into solid stone. The general condition of the country now is a wild and barren tract of land. It consists of hilly and sandy stretches of dead forest, all the timber being stricken to the ground and the trunks rarely showing more than 8 feet or 9 feet above the earth. Here and there a large mass of timber is seen clustered together as though for protection against the inevitable.

By Another Name. Secretary Cortelyou was enjoying a stroll in Lincoln Park which happens to be not far from his home on Capitol Hill. In front of a bronze statue (Lincoln which adorns this square Mr. Cortelyou noticed two colored women, one of whom, as evidenced by her dress, was from the country and taking in the sights of Washington with a city relative. "And you can't guess who that is?" the Washington woman was repeating, pointing to the statue of the emancipator. "I don't guess I can," was the response of the visitor. "Who is it?" "Why, child," said the ebony guide proudly, "dat am de instigator ob our renova."—Saturday Evening Post.

COMPELLED TO USE A CRUTCH FOR EIGHT MONTHS. DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. F. CONLIN, CARBONDALE, PA.

Mrs. F. Conlin, 66 Green-Avenue, Carbondale, Pa., says: "I suffered with backache, and despite the use of medicines, could not get rid of it. I was compelled to use a crutch for eight months, and a part of the time was unable to walk at all. I finally screamed if I attempted to lift my feet from the floor, and, finally, lost control of my limbs through weakness. I could neither bend nor straighten my back, and I was unable to get up to my full height, and I was unable to get on my feet. I was brought home a box of Doan's Pills. I felt better in a few days, and, continuing the treatment, I was soon able to walk. At the end of two weeks the pain in my joints left. When I had completed the treatment I had not a ache nor a pain, and I have been in that condition ever since.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine, for bowel complaint in any form either for children or adults. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For Sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

Not Over-Wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is every where recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

September Number of New Idea Woman's Magazine

The women who clamor for advice—how to turn their time and talents to account—will receive many valuable hints from the series of articles entitled "Profitable Industries for Women," which is begun in the September number of the "New Idea Woman's Magazine" under the heading of "Poultry-raising," from the pen of Sarah E. Salter. The new department of "Correct Dress for Men," also begun in the September issue and contributed by Hawthorne, a well-known authority in haberdashery, bids fair to be of paramount importance in this periodical, because many women do much of the shopping for the men of their families and are glad to have suggestions. Every item in the September number, either technical or fictional, is of more than passing interest.

From Hon. W. F. Norris.

(In Elgin Review.)

A private letter from Hon. W. F. Norris, now in the Philippines where he has been serving the United States government in various positions of trust and honor for the past three years or more, contains some things that may be of interest to the Review readers. Judge Norris was the republican candidate for congress from this district four years ago this fall. Among other things he says "I am holding court in the city of Iloilo, Island of Pansy, Philippine Islands. I don't know how long I may remain here, but a letter so directed will reach me all right. So you are in Elgin; I had not heard of your leaving Washington. Hope you are doing well, and yourself and family are in good health. Remember me to George Coupland when you see him, as I recollect Elgin is George's town. I was there once, advising in the afternoon, as I recall, and left next morning. This was when I was campaigning for congress. My recollection of Elgin is that is a pretty little place, situated in a beautiful and fertile country. I thought some of coming home this year, but don't think I will before next spring. I sometimes think our people are about as much in the dark concerning the Philippines and Filipinos as they were before the commencement of the Spanish war. Court work is peculiar here, very different from what it is in one of the states. I am now engaged in one of the most peculiar as well as important cases ever before me. It is known as the poisoning case originating in the cholera time last fall. Two hombres accused several prominent Spaniards, including the bishop and leading business men, of giving them poison to scatter, as putting in wells, vegetables, rice, etc., and giving them money for such act. The star witness in the justice court comes before my court and states that it is all a lie, that he was beaten by the sergeant of the municipal police and forced to make the accusations against the Spaniards. It has caused a good deal of excitement and if possible when terminated should be followed by several arrests or a thorough investigation. Cordially yours,

W. F. NORRIS.

PIANO CONTEST!

THE WAYNE REPUBLICAN will give a beautiful Concert Grand Piano made by Chickering Bros., Chicago, and listed by them at $525.00. to the most popular lady in Wayne county and vicinity absolutely free, this lady to be designated by ballots cast for her by subscribers to, and by readers of the WAYNE REPUBLICAN, according to the terms and conditions set forth as follows:

- 1—Any lady, married or single, may enter the contest.
 - 2—Any and every lady receiving one or more votes will be accredited with them at once and the result announced in these columns.
 - 3—In every paper printed from June 15, to December 24, 1903, will appear two coupons: one is a FREE VOTE and may be voted by any one, the other is a SUBSCRIBER'S BALLOT and is to be voted by subscribers for whom they choose. For each cent paid by the subscriber, new or renewal, or arrears on account of subscription, one vote may be cast.
 - 4—Free votes must be cast within the time limit printed on each else they become void. Subscriber's ballots may be cast at any time before the contest closes, which will be at six o'clock p. m. December 24, 1903.
 - 5—A ballot box will be placed in the REPUBLICAN office in which the ballots may be placed by the person voting or by some one for him, ballots may also be sent by mail. As votes are received they will be deposited in the ballot box, which will be kept under lock, and once each week in the presence of some disinterested person the same will be opened and the votes counted for the purpose of ascertaining the standing of the candidates.
 - 6—The piano may be seen (for its counterpart) on exhibition at the M. S. Davies Book Store in Wayne at any time, and all interested may thus know it is no cheap affair, but that its splendid instrument, beautiful in tone as well as in finish, and for reason of its high grade was selected especially for this contest to lend character and interest to it, for too often a cheap piano is selected to give away in a piano contest and the winner is wasting time in competing for it. But we are going to do this right—we are going to give the winner a piano equal to the best one in any home in the county, and to gain us the acquaintance we wish, to add to our subscription list as many new readers as possible, and to clean up the last dollar of a large amount of back subscription, we desire the interest to be genuine and make those who participate in the contest feel that they are doing something worth while and that their efforts are appreciated by this paper.
- Any lady contesting, or any one else, may act as agent to receive subscriptions for us, and a liberal commission will be paid them to do so. Blanks will be furnished them on application, also, they may extend to subscribers any and all clubbing combinations offered at any time.

The MILLER MANURE SPREADER

Doubles the Value of Manure by Covering Two Acres Where You Could Only Cover One By Hand

Note the following POINTS OF SUPERIORITY OVER OTHER MAKES: It is just the right width to straddle corn rows and leave all the land evenly covered with manure. Other machines CAN NOT DO GOOD WORK without driving team and spreader wheels on cut corn stubble, a thing any farmer knows is impossible. THE MILLER IS THE ONLY SPREADER that will do good work in winter. Why? Because it has a solid bottom that is scraped clean every load. It is LOW DOWN, making it easy to load. Is lighter draft than any other machine. We can stop or start cylinder independent of feed, either is operated at will of driver. We can put on 6, 10 or 15 loads per acre and unload in six minutes. Is simple, strong and durable, having been on the market 14 years. Try one.

The E. T. Rennick school district, No. 1, in Brenna precinct has recently been divided, making two separate districts of it. The school house located thereon has been moved and another building is in course of construction.

We learn by talking with farmers and those who have talked with farmers that the corn crop prospects are good—far better than the anticipations of a few days ago. But can you remember a year in the history of the county when at some period during the season that the corn crop was not supposed to be going to the bow-wow, and can you recall very many years in that same time when Nebraska has not had big crops of corn?

State vs. Frank and Simon Scott was a case before Judge Hunter Wednesday afternoon. The charge was that of assault and battery preferred by one Chas. Hargitt. All the parties are residents of Shell. From previous introductions it seems that Hargitt has been keeping company with a young sister of the Scott boys very much against the wishes of the family and when the couple returned to the Scott home late Sunday night the Scott boys proceeded to do young Hargitt up in true Jim Jeffries style. Hargitt managed to make his get-away, however, without any serious injuries and immediately swore out warrants for the arrest of the Scotts who were brought down by Sheriff Messersmith.

Frank Scott pleaded guilty to the assault and was fined $25.00 and $5.00 for contempt in failing to pay the fine and the court ordered that the Scott boys be discharged.

Everything, from the Ptebeian Rowboat to a Millionaire's Yacht, Stands by the Big Fighting Machines of Uncle Sam.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.: With the north Atlantic fleet anchored off Oyster Bay, Sunday was almost a day of the bay and sound. Hundreds of pleasure craft, ranging through all the grades from the modest rowboat to the aristocratic steam yacht, hovered about the feet of great fighting machines throughout the day.

Official formalities were begun at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, when Rear Admiral Barker, commander in chief of the fleet, accompanied by Capt. H. H. Hill of the Kearsarge, and Flag Lieutenant E. W. Eberle, went in a barge to the Dolphin to pay his respects to Secretary of the Navy Moody.

When Admiral Barker was informed that the president also would attend the service orders were issued for all officers to appear in special full dress.

At 5 o'clock p. m. Sir Thomas Lipton, on board his steam yacht Erin, followed by the yacht Privator, passed the fleet. Sir Thomas stood on the bridge of the Erin and saluted each ship as he went by.

New Trial Is Refused.

Cynthiana, Ky.: Judge Osborn overruled the motion of the attorneys for Jett and White, convicted of the murder of Lawyer Marenz, for a new trial. A stay of execution was taken for both prisoners for sixty days.

BOTH FOUND GUILTY.

Jett and White Convicted of Murder of Marenz.

Cynthiana, Ky.: The jury in the case of Curtis Jett and Thomas White, charged with the assassination of Lawyer James R. Marenz, Friday morning returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment of each at life imprisonment. The verdict was returned when but a few persons were in the court room. Jett received the verdict with composure, but White flushed up and his eyes filled with tears.

The verdict occasioned little surprise, after the deliberation of the jury had been so prolonged. The only question which caused the delay, it is said, was that of punishment—death or life imprisonment.

The verdict on the whole is regarded as a victory for the defense, as the prosecution asked that the men either be acquitted or hanged. The case has been on trial almost three weeks.

At the first trial the jury disagreed, and it is believed the verdict Friday was a compromise with the juror opposed to capital punishment.

Friends of Capt. Ewen and other witnesses for the commonwealth, who have suffered greatly and were living in fear of their lives, are greatly relieved. They expected the death penalty and that it would have been followed by confessions from the condemned men exposing particularly in authority in Breathitt County who are considered to be back of the conspiracy.

There have been twenty-seven lives lost within the past two years in the Hargis-Cockrell feud in Breathitt County and this is the first conviction.

Jett is still under indictment for first degree murder for killing Town Marshal Cochran.

At the trial held in Jackson last month one juror hung the jury to the last on the question of guilt and this time one juror hung the jury for twenty-four hours on the question of sentence.

During the afternoon Judge Osborne heard the motion of the defense for a new trial. The grounds set forth consist of motions to evidence admitted for the commonwealth and ruled for the defense, and also to the ruling out of all-davits made by the defendants saying that a fair and impartial trial could not be had on account of the military display, which inflated the public mind.

TALK OF LYNCHING.

Ohio Man Suspected of Murder and Assault. Arcanum, O.: At Hagerman, Starke County, there are threats of lynching George Potter for the alleged murder of his employer, Daniel Randolph.

Neighbors found Randolph dead. He had been shot and his skull had been crushed with a club. He lay on the floor in a pool of blood. The girl was unconscious on the floor in another room, but had been revived and made a statement to the coroner, and the arrest of Potter followed.

EFFECT IS WIDESPREAD.

Johnson's Alleged Embezzlement Causes a Panic at Duluth. Duluth, Minn.: As a result of the alleged embezzlement of $35,000 of the funds of the Commercial Banking Company by E. E. Johnson, a trusted clerk, the Merchants' Bank of Duluth has closed its doors.

President Smith, in a statement, said that the failure was due to a run on the bank resulting from the closing of the Commercial Banking and Loan Association. He said that the bank had not anticipated the extent of the withdrawals and closed to protect all depositors as much as possible. This is the fourth bank suspending business as a result of the alleged embezzlement.

The bell was used to regulate the draught in the stack, and weighed six tons. The accident was caused by a breakage in some part of the machinery which regulated the raising and lowering of the bell.

YELLOW JACK IN TEXAS.

Quarantine Probably Will Be Established Against Monterey. Laredo, Tex.: In view of the appearance of yellow fever at Victoria, Tex., about seventy miles from Monterey, on the line of the Monterey and Gulf Railroad, the health authorities here have been made more cautious by the appointment of an additional force of guards by the state authorities.

Both the state and marine hospital service physicians are at present at Monterey, investigating the rumor to the effect that yellow fever exists in that vicinity. The consensus of opinion is that a quarantine against Monterey will be established and that the vessel taken it would mean a temporary stoppage of railway traffic.

BLAMED FOR LOCKJAW DEATHS

Four Philadelphia Merchants Arrested on Charge of Violating Law. Philadelphia, Pa.: The police have arrested four merchants, charged with violating the law regarding the sale of fireworks to minors. The arrests are the outcome of an investigation into the cause of death of four children from lockjaw, resulting from toy pistols wound.

Those arrested are: George Zorn of Zorn & Co., Benjamin Cripps, James T. Gray and Isadore Hirsch. The latter was arrested on suspicion. Since July 4 a number of deaths have occurred in this city as a result of lockjaw, which developed from toy pistols.

NOT SEVERE IN CUBA.

No Important Damage Has Thus Far Been Reported. Havana: While high winds and threatening conditions have prevailed in all the provinces of Cuba, there have been no reports of any serious damage.

The land telegraph communication with Santiago, which was repeatedly interrupted, has been restored. There was some destruction of crops and small buildings in the province of Pinar del Rio, where the wind appears to have been strongest. The laborers resisted, and a general fight ensued, resulting in the killing of Thomas McGowan of Philadelphia, who was shot through the right lung, and an unknown man, whose body was found in the car later in the day. W. R. Mensing of Perth, Minn., was shot through the neck and perhaps fatally wounded.

The robbers escaped unharmed, but two of them were arrested later.

Fifty Prisoners in a Mutiny.

Carthage, Mo.: Fifty prisoners in the county jail mutinied at midnight and made a demand for better food. The fire department was called out and turned a stream of water on the prisoners, who, after turning the lights out in the corridor, hurried empty bottles at the firemen and jail officers. One deputy was cut in the face. The prisoners were finally subdued.

Chicago Youth and Girl Drowned.

Williams Bay, Wis.: Lawrence Doty of Chicago and Miss Jessie Brown of Janesville were drowned in Geneva Lake. The couple left Williams Bay in the afternoon in a light rowboat intending to row to Rockford camp. They were not seen again, and next morning their boat was found bottom up on the beach at the south shore.

A Massacre Is Feared.

Sofia: The Bulgarian foreign office has received very disturbing news from its agent at Belk. The Mussulmans there are daily gathering in the mosques, and it is feared a massacre of Christians is impending. STATE OF NEBRASKA

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Defect the Officers—Murderous Woman Finally Captured by Strategy—Barricaded Her Dwelling and Stood Guard with a Gun. Barricaded within the residence of her divorced husband, which she had stored and taken for, Mrs. Martha Vincent, near Schuyler, defied the sheriff, who had gone to the house to serve a warrant for her arrest upon a charge of assault with intent to kill, Sunday.

When the officer arrived at the dwelling the woman poked the barrels of a shotgun through a window and warned him that further advance upon his part meant that he would receive the contents of both barrels.

Like a discreet official the sheriff retreated and in the evening, accompanied by Arthur Kasper and David De Vaul, he laid siege to the house, just out of sight of its watchful occupant.

The Vincent home is situated upon an island in the Platte River, and as the sheriff's two assistants knew the ground thoroughly, they lay in wait all night.

In the early hours of the morning they saw the woman open the door, when they rushed in, retreated and placed her under arrest. She set fire to the house, but her weapons of defiance and attack, consisting of a rifle and a shotgun, were also brought to town. She will also be charged with resisting arrest. It is believed that Mrs. Vincent is mentally unbalanced.

O'Brien of the state hatcheries at Scotts Bluff has been busily engaged during the last few days with his force of men searching the overflow lakes along the Platte and Missouri Rivers for fish that have been left there by the receding waters of the rivers. Along the Missouri he secured 1,500 pike from three to six inches in length, a lot of ten-month-old crappies, some yearling blue and a very large number of bluegills. The pike and crappies were taken to Newell and Edward Lakes near Cedar Creek. He found another school, which will be taken to McPherson's Lake near Schuyler. This work of the superintendent is the first work of the kind that has ever been done in this state.

The national government regards this work as of great importance, and has been engaged during the overflow season in hunting stranded fish and planting them in live streams. The last state legislature made a small appropriation for additional labor, which will enable Superintendent O'Brien to attend to a part of the work of his office, for which ought to be provided by the Rename Boy for Judge.

Harmony and Judge J. F. Boyd prevailed unanimously at the republican convention of the ninth judicial district, held in the city hall at 11 o'clock this morning. It took just seventeen minutes for the calling of the assembly, the disposition of credentials, a nomination and adjournment.

Judge Boyd expressed his appreciation of the honor in brief speech in which he stated that he had tried to administer the affairs of the office in a manner which would bring no blame upon the republicans and no dissatisfaction. "I have tried to treat everybody on a common level," said the judge, "with justice to all and favoritism to none."

While he realized that the chances for election at the outset seem brighter this year than two years ago, Judge Boyd said he would carry on just as vigorous a campaign as he had before, and asked help of the republicans along the line.

M. D. Tyler of this city was named by the nominee as chairman of the judicial committee. Other members are:

Antelope, N. D. Jackson.

Knox, W. D. Funke.

Pierce, Jos. A. Williams.

Madison, I. Powers.

On a call of counties, Judge Boyd was unanimously named. Judge Powers, chairman of the Madison county delegation, made a speech in which he brought out the responsibility attached to the bench and the fact that the man whom Madison county desired was thoroughly able in every way.

On motion of Lundberg, of Wayne, the nomination of Boyd was made by acclamation.

The committee was authorized to fill any vacancies that might occur. Then the convention adjourned.

A large number of the delegates presents took the noon train for Lincoln, to attend the state convention.—Norfolk News.

They Come for Hundreds of Miles to See Her.

Nothing So Wonderful in the Days of Specialism.

Dr. Caldwell

The success of Dr. Caldwell is attributed to her specialism. Dr. Caldwell, student, philanthropist, and physician of wide reputation, having given her entire time and practice to a line of special diseases, which enables her from long experience in handling these troubles to come forward as a master specialist. Her faculty for mastering disease, her ability to diagnose and her plan of treatment is excelled by few physicians. Dr. Caldwell, although a young woman in life, a plain woman, and one who is used to the ups and downs of life, puts herself on a level with her patients, and does not pretend to practice the old plan or fashion, which is to look wise and say nothing. She knows disease, she knows how to explain the symptoms of disease and the spot where located, and most of all she knows from experience, and what she has done in the past, she can certainly do for others in the future. It is said by Dr. Caldwell's friends that she can diagnose a disease of any patient without asking them a single question, that being the case, she is not likely to doctor them for the wrong ailment; she will not take an incurable disease and lead the patient to believe that she can cure them when there is really no hope for them. Her business is large and she has plenty to do, even at times, more than she can do, without treating incurable diseases and deceiving her patients. Dr. Caldwell is a graduate of one of the best schools in America. She has practiced her profession in some of the principal hospitals in this country. Her specialty comprises that class of diseases which the ordinary home doctor fails to cure, such as female diseases, heart diseases, diseases of children and the many special diseases of hidden nature. Her practice is mostly among the plain, hard-working people, who are unable to come to her in the city office for treatment; she is reasonable in her charges and very lenient with those who are not able to pay. She is charitable, and it is said has never been known to refuse a patient treatment who is worthy and in need. A number of important cases we herewith take the liberty to publish, which might be of interest to some who wish to know more of Dr. Caldwell's great work:

Sophia Kraus, Albion, Nebraska, cured of a bad skin disease.

Mrs. Lulu Towley, David City, Nebraska, cured of female trouble and female weakness.

Mrs. E. A. Studer, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of female and nervous troubles.

Mrs. Minnie Rudat, Columbus, Nebraska, cured of skin disease and bladder trouble.

Mrs. D. W. Burr, David City, Nebraska, cured of skin disease, nervousness and loss of appetite.

Mrs. Chas. Miller, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of dropsy, kidney and liver troubles and nervousness. She had been troubled for years.

LIVER TROUBLES

"I had Theford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $100 with doctors. It is all the same."—J. C. Caldwell, M.D., Chicago, Ill.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Theford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the congested bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion of bile.

Theford's Black-Draught will cleanse the bowels of impurities and strengthen the kidneys. A torpid liver invites colds, biliousness, chills and fever and all manner of sickness and contagion. Weak kidneys result in Bright's disease which claims so many victims as consumption. Theford's Black-Draught should always be kept in the house.

 The storm so severe at Wayne last Friday afternoon was of small extent. It took on the form of a water spout here and had a well defined cyclonic appearance, but the funnel did not touch the earth. Water ran a foot deep down the gutters of the streets and cellars were flooded. Ten miles north it only sprinkled. Hail fell here but did no damage, west a few miles it did some harm.

The Winside Tribune kicks on the result of the basket ball game played here last week when her girls were defeated by the Wayne girls. Now we think it was a fair game and was played and refereed just as well as it could be. The visitors were not in training like the home team who have camped on the basket ball field for the last few weeks. The girls were satisfied and and the Tribune should be—"don't contract that "kicking habit," its worse than the office itch or the gold bug disease.
 Dr. D. B. McMahon, of Newman Grove, coroner of Madison county, W. E. Harvey, and P. E. McKillip of Platte county, have filed a brief in the supreme court, attacking the validity of the state law protecting game birds. The men were fined $25 each for having in their possession five quails. They contend that the fines imposed were not, as required by the constitution, proportionate to the nature of the offense. They insist that even at $5 each for the birds found the fines would be excessive, but they were fined $75 and had five birds found.

On Saturday September 5, John Britton, of Sanborn, Iowa, will sell at auction in Wayne ever thirty head of fine shorthorn cattle, consisting of males and females. Mr. Britton is one of Iowa's best breeders and to most of our readers is well known being a farmer resident of the county and a breeder thoroughly reliable in every respect.

J. W. Nichols commences Monday for the Western Stock Food Co., of Omaha and will have five counties of Northeast Nebraska and all of South Dakota. Mr. J. L. Stainaker informed the writer a few weeks ago that Mr. Nichols had surpassed all ordinary records for agents in the sale of stock foods and his promotion was a matter of a short time. Mr. Nichols sold nearly a half car load of their goods in the past few days.

Carroll always sends us a nice delegation when we hold a picnic or anything else, be it good or bad. They are a social lot of folks and don't do anything by halves. August 25 they held their Seventh Annual Union Picnic of the lodges and have hung up a nice sum of money for purses, have provided a good program and their invitation to Wayne is royal and hearty. Let us go up in force and help our sister town celebrate.

A fine threshing outfit was pulled out of Wayne a few days ago by P. G. James and is tearing its way through the grain fields of Wayne county that is a surprise and a pleasure to both Mr. James and the farmers for whom he threshes. The outfit sold by Terwilliger Bros., of this city, is known as a Buffalo Plots 36-60 separator with automatic feed, weigher and stacker, and is run by an 18 H. P. double cylinder engine. It is a monster outfit indeed, the Case and other ordinary separators would go inside this machine which is large to take care of the extra space given to cleaning and saving the grain—you can't get grain into the straw stack. The double stroke cylinders on the engine permit a very slow pace over bridges and is a feature new to traction engines. It is the finest outfit ever brought into this county and could just be shipped on a 40 foot car. It cost $2,300.

Animals That Delight to Play.
 In animals the faculty of amusement awakes very early. Our four footed friends seem to be aware of this and make it a part of their parental duties to amuse their young. A ferret will play with her kittens, a cat with hers, a dog with her puppies. A mare will play with her foal, though the writer has never seen a cow try to amuse her calf nor any birds their young. If their mothers do not amuse them, the young ones invent games of their own.—London Tit-Bits.

According to a local tradition, probably invented, Sayville, N. Y., received its name in a peculiar fashion. The settlers were gathered in debate upon the shore, trying to agree upon a name for the place, and one after another proposed his suggestion with, "Say, how 'll this do?" After many suggestions had been rejected some one barren of imagination but sensitive of ear proposed that the oft repeated word "Say" be made the first syllable of the name and that "ville" be added at the second syllable. The idea took, and, says the legend, then and there the settlement was christened Sayville.

His Mistake.
 "Once at a party," said a Scotch cleegman, "there was a crusty old Scot seated at a whist table playing passionately, and his partner was a young woman, the daughter of a neighboring laird. You are to imagine this young woman's surprise in the heart of the game when the old fellow threw down his cards and bawled at her:
 "What kind of a game are ye playin', ye darned old—"
 "And then, recollecting himself, he bowed and said humbly to the astonished girl:
 "Ye pardon's begged, madam. I took ye in the excitement for my ain wife."

Marriage and Crime.
 It is said that statistics prove that in every 1,000 bachelors there are thirty-eight criminals, while in every 1,000 married men the criminal number only eighteen. If this is so, it surely proves that the present day members of the sex labeled coy and hard to please have at least an immense capability for keeping men out of mischief, sufficient to outbalance perhaps even the untold reputation handed down the ages by Mother Eve.—London Tit-Bits.

The funeral was held at the first Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Peter Birrell and the remains laid in Greenwood cemetery beside those of a younger brother who died only a few months ago. The sorrowing parents have the sympathy of the community in their sad loss.

MORGAN—At the home of his brother-in-law, S. M. Owens in this city, A. B. Morgan passed from earth to the great beyond last Saturday morning, aged 21 years. Deceased had been afflicted with consumption for several months. He leaves to mourn his departure an aged mother who resides at Grand Island, besides a number of relatives living at this place. The funeral was held at the Owen home at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday, the services being conducted by Rev. Ringer, and the remains laid to rest in Greenwood cemetery.

Married.

KUHNS—CLAYBAUGH—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Claybaugh, on Second street, was the scene of a very pretty home wedding on Wednesday evening at which time their daughter, Mary, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. H. Kuhns, of this place. Mr. Kuhns has been employed by the C. St. P., M. & O. company for several months as operator at this station, a model young man and one who is highly esteemed by all who are fortunate enough to be numbered among his acquaintances. The bride needs no introduction to the people of this vicinity, having been a resident of this place since early childhood and for several years one of the county's prominent teachers. The happy couple departed Thursday morning for the home of the groom at Rossville, Indiana, amid a shower of rice and old shoes, and the well wishes of the party of friends who had congregated at the depot to witness their departure. The couple expect to spend two or three weeks at Rossville, Chicago and other points after which they will return to this city.
 The ceremony was performed by Rev. Peter Birrell of the First Presbyterian church. A beautiful arch of vines and flowers had been constructed in one corner of the parlor for the occasion and precisely at 8:30 o'clock, in the presence of a small party of relatives and invited guests, and amid the fragrance of the floral decorations, the bride and bridegroom took their places beneath the arch and the magic words were spoken which bind for life the fortunes of the principals in the happy transaction. This paper heartily joins their many friends in wishing them a joyous and prosperous matrimonial voyage.

Those from out of town who were in attendance at the event were: Ralph Claybaugh, of Albion, Nebraska; Ross Claybaugh, of North Platte, Nebraska; Misses Imogene and Bertha Neff and Blanche Paul, of Wakefield; Mrs. Green and daughter, of Hoskins, and Mr. and Mrs. Heck, of Belden.

SAVED FROM SUICIDE

In the case shown by above photographs, the sufferer, Mr. Henry Kensler of Pittsfield, Ill., was in a desperate state from eczema which had continued for over ten years, becoming steadily worse and worse each year in spite of all doctoring possible. Life seemed hopeless and suicide was often thought of. Seeing an account in a newspaper a short time ago of a remarkable case of eczema cured by D. D. D., Mr. Kensler tried it. He wrote in to the D. D. D. Company offering to be photographed and to permit publication of his photo if they would guarantee the remedy to cure him as completely as in the case he had read of. From the first use of it he states that all itching and distress disappeared. And in three weeks' time the skin healed over in every spot where affected. In a short time (it was a matter of only a few very days) the proper, white, natural, smooth state of skin was restored, and there has never since been any recurring sign of the disease anywhere on his body.

Started in Few Small Spots.

The persistent spreading and tenacity of this disease are seen in this case. First one and then another small spot showed. Nothing could drive them away. Slowly the limbs became covered and the neck and back. He fought hard to save the face, but that next was covered and told the story of his misery to the world. Then the hair became encrusted with it. Small beginnings were showing almost everywhere else on the body, hardly a square inch being free from it. In a few years more the man would undoubtedly have been one wretched, writhing scab-bad D. D. D. not conquered the disease. With his tortures already experienced and with this future staring him in the face, what wonder is it that suicide seemed inviting. A wonderful particular of this case (as seen in all cases more or less) is that the worst big sores were the first to give way to the treatment, while the disease lurking under the skin held on longest. Twenty-one days, however, cleared out the whole infection—every germ of it.

I Vouch For Above.

The fact in this case of Mr. Henry Kensler of Pittsfield, Ill., have been laid before me in details with proofs that are unmistakable. Every particular in the history of this remarkable cure more than bears out the above statement of the case. From the proofs I need, I feel that this announcement comes far from doing full justice to the remedy of a medicine which accomplishes results so important to humanity. Since I have had occasion in this city, a great number of people have used it for various ailments. The results have been invariably satisfactory. I am therefore willing to give my name as a vouch for the fact that in any case of skin affection, the use of this medicine will result in a cure.

Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn. Not Over-Wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scoured at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is every where recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

Card of Thanks.

To our many friends and neighbors of Wayne, accept our sincere thanks for your sympathy and kindness during the illness and death of our darling little one. Oh, the little white arms that encircled our neck in a tender embrace! Oh, his smiles that were halos of heaven shedding sunshine of love on our face! And now that they are gone we sit dreaming of its childhood, too lovely to be permanent; of love that our hearts will ever remember. He was the idol of our hearts and of our household; an angel of God in disguise. And we know now how Jesus could liken the Kingdom of God to a child. J. F. GREENSLADE, CELIA GREENSLADE.

Wakefield will have a big celebration September 7, Labor Day.

A terrible accident occurred at the home of Herman Heitzman down in Cleveland Township, Cuming county, this morning. Mr. Heitzman was grinding feed with a one-horse grinder, and in some way his little 9-year-old son, Royal, got caught in the grinder and his skull fractured and arm and hand badly out. He died immediately. —Pender Times.

Miss Anna Evans attended the commencement exercises at the Wayne college this week, she reports an unusually large attendance of students and visitors, the class exercises were excellent and the entire program was rendered in a most satisfactory manner. The managements certainly have cause to congratulate themselves on the termination of a very successful year of the college. Long may it prosper. —Norfolk Times.

Miss Rosella Cole and May Johnson went to Wayne yesterday to be present at the graduation at the normal of their friend, Miss Clea Bogle. The latter will return with them and visit among Norfolk friends until September. D. J. Koenigstein has returned from his trip to the Pacific coast, and was so well pleased with California that he will leave with his family for that state about September 1, locating at Los Angeles. —Norfolk Press.

Colin Valentine, expert accountant, who checked up the Zeigler and Sulig books in the county treasurer's office, has been engaged by the county commissioners to overhaul the books of ex-treasurer J. P. Jenal. The commissioners are bound to have the treasury cleaned up as far as the squaring of the books is concerned. Mr. Jenal also courted an investigation, and we hope there will be no more shortages unearthed. —Hartington Herald.

News from Lincoln states that Attorney General Prout, Architect Tyler and Superintendent Kerns have returned from the east where they went to investigate the cottage plan for hospitals for the insane, with a view to recommending the adoption of such system for the rehabilitation of the hospitable at this place. They are new enthusiastic supporters of the plan and it will be adopted by the board of public lands and buildings if their recommendations are effective. —Norfolk News.

It is customary for people to allude to windstorms indiscriminately as cyclones or tornadoes, without realizing that there is a distinction and a difference. A cyclone sometimes becomes a tornado, but there are cyclones and cyclones that never reach that development. Cyclone is wind moving in a circle, and as wind always moves in a circle, converging toward a central point of low barometer, every wind that blows is a cyclone and there are cyclones about all the time. A tornado is a cyclone covering a small area and owing to its being encompassed in a small area it is always violent and destructive, and the word applies to those funnel shaped storms so generally termed cyclones. The tornado is therefore the much worse storm of the two. —Ex.

A newspaper writer says that the world needs a religion today that will make a man's word as good as his note; that will make its possessor pay 100 cents on the dollar; sell sixteen ounces to the pound; thirty-six inches to the yard; four pecks to the bushels; 128 cubic feet to the cord; that will make a man do a full day's work for a full day's pay whether the eye of his employer is on him or not; that will make capital degorge the lion's share of the profits and divide them equally and justly with the laborer; that will cause the manufacturer to cease adulterating his goods; the clerk from robbing his employers; the official men from embezzling the funds committed to his trust; that will make men upright, honest, pure, trustworthy through all their worst of life, that not only keeps a man happy but righteous.

A Sioux City despatch to the Norfolk News of Monday says:—"Three more damage suits for alleged libel have been started, growing out of the hot congressional campaign in 1902, when J. J. McCarthy was elected over his democratic opponent, Judge Robinson, in the Third Nebraska congressional district. Suits asking in the aggregate for a large sum have now been filed. The plaintiff is Thomas A. Shelby of Ponca, father of Miss Anna Shelby, who is in the abstracting business. During the campaign certain documents were circulated concerning Congressman McCarthy, reflecting upon his character. Later an affidavit in denial was published, which the Shelys claim was libelous concerning themselves. The new suits commenced are in the sums of $6,000 each and the defendants are George L. Nelson of the Hartington Herald, W. N. Huse of the Norfolk News and Franklin D. Fales, of Ponca, chairman of the congressional campaign. The Ponca Journal has already been made the defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages."

PIANO CONTEST!

THE WAYNE REPUBLICAN will give a beautiful Concert Grand Piano made by Chickering Bros., Chicago, and listed by them at $325.00, to the most popular lady in Wayne county and vicinity absolutely free, this lady to be designated by ballots cast for her by subscribers to, and by readers of the WAYNE REPUBLICAN, according to the terms and conditions set forth as follows:

- 1—Any lady, married or single, may enter the contest.
 - 2—Any and every lady receiving one or more votes will be accredited with them at once and the result announced in these columns.
 - 3—In every paper printed from June 15, to December 24, 1903, will appear two coupons: one is a FREE VOTE and may be voted by any one, the other is a SUBSCRIBER'S BALLOT and is to be voted by subscribers for whom they choose. For each cent paid by the subscriber, new or renewal, or arrearages on account of subscription, one vote may be cast.
 - 4—Free votes must be cast within the time limit printed on each else they become void. Subscriber's ballots may be cast at any time before the contest closes, which will be at six o'clock p. m. December 24, 1903.
 - 5—A ballot box will be placed in the REPUBLICAN office in which the ballots may be placed by the person voting or by some one for him, ballots may also be sent by mail. As votes are received they will be deposited in the ballot box, which will be kept under lock, and once each week in the presence of some disinterested person the same will be opened and the votes counted for the purpose of ascertaining the standing of the candidates.
 - 6—The piano may be seen (or its counterpart) on exhibition at the M. S. Davies Book Store in Wayne at any time, and all interested may thus know it is no cheap affair, but that is a splendid instrument, beautiful in tone as well as in finish, and for reason of its high grade was selected especially for this contest to lend character and interest to it, for too often a cheap piano is selected to give away in a piano contest and the winner is wasting time in competing for it. But we are going to do this right—we are going to give the winner a piano equal to the best one in any home in the county, and to gain us the acquaintance we wish, to add to our subscription list as many new readers as possible, and to clean up the last dollar of a large amount of back subscription, we desire the interest to be genuine and make those who participate in the contest feel that they are doing something worth while and that their efforts are appreciated by this paper.
- Any lady contesting, or any one else, may act as agent to receive subscriptions for us, and a liberal commission will be paid them to do so. Blanks will be furnished them on application, also, they may extend to subscribers any and all clubbing combinations offered at any time.

Democratic County Convention.
Saturday, August 22; the democrats of Wayne county met in convention at the court house. The attendance of delegates was not large owing to the busy season, but every township was represented except Leslie, and that was owing to the absence of the committeeman, Chas. Killian, who is in California on a visit.

After reading the call, P. H. Kohl was selected temporary chairman and Walter Gaebler temporary secretary which organization was on motion made permanent and the nomination of county officers was declared in order.

For county treasurer Henry Kloppling and Jack Cherry were named and on ballot the former received 23 votes and the latter 30 votes and was declared the nominee. Mr. Cherry, not being present, was notified.

C. W. Reynolds was placed in nomination by acclamation for the office of county clerk and briefly thanked the convention for the favor conferred.

Judge E. H. Moses was made the nominee of the convention for county judge and spoke at some length upon economic conditions.

For sheriff James Hamilton was made the nominee by acclamation.

For county assessor Jake Ziegler, of Wayne; Theodore Barnhart, of Hoskins; and W. F. Assenheimer, of Altuna, were named and on ballot received 33, 16 and 2 votes respectively and Mr. Ziegler was declared the nominee.

For county superintendent Chas. Wilson, who is elected to teach the village school at Hoskins, was nominated by acclamation, but later a question arose as to his having a residence in Wayne county. This was not considered sufficient to defer or suspend the action of the convention and it was accepted. Mr. Wilson taught there the past year, but resides in Stanton county near Hoskins.

For surveyor no one was named. Several names were offered, but each one positively declined.

For clerk of the district court Ben Skiles, A. L. Houser and E. R. Surber were named and it took six ballots to decide the matter. The first two were 18, 19 and 19; the third 18, 17 and 18; the fourth 19, 17 and 17; the fifth 26, 16 and 11, and the sixth 30, 16 and 7, when Mr. Skiles having a majority was declared the nominee.

Dr. Phillips, of Carroll, was nominated by acclamation for coroner.

On motion the chair appointed P. A. Berry, Ed. Carroll, Robt. Skiles, Geo. H. Drevson and J. C. Conger as a committee to select the delegates to the state and judicial conventions. This committee reported as follows: State delegation—P. H. Kohl, Joe Dobbins, Robt. Skiles, Walt Goldie, Geo. Drevson, Jr., H. Kloppling, J. H. Mitchell and Theo. Barnhart. Judicial delegation—Wm. Buestow, Elmer Lundberg, P. A. Berry, Ben Skiles, E. R. Surber, Ed. Cullen, J. Reichert and Ben Baker. On motion this report was accepted.

The following were chosen as the central committee for the ensuing year:

- Bronna, E. Spiltgarber;
 - Chapin, P. Prior;

Prof. M. R. Soodgrass, of Wayne, was the guest of his old friends, Dr. Riley and family during his stay in town as instructor in the Institute—Winer Chronicle.

The Wayne Democrat is the first to focus its mud batteries on Judge Barnea. At best the Democrat is and ever has been a mud slinging sheet, and yet there are republicans who subscribe for it in preference to supporting a good clean republican paper such as the WAYNE REPUBLICAN. This is a free country and men are privileged to read what suits them best.—Stanton Picket.

Complaint was filed with the county attorney Monday charging one Albert Parsons, living near McLean, with abducting or enticing away the daughter of Jas. T. Buchanan, of the same neighborhood, the girl being under the age of 18, and the accused thereby being liable for child stealing. The girl that Parsons is said to have spirited away is a sister of Parsons' wife. Parsons claims that he had nothing to do with the girl's leaving, but that he knows where she is and can bring her back when wanted. He does not deny going away with her, however. Preliminary hearing was continued until September 8, Parsons in the meantime being released on bond.—Pierce Call.

While Norfolk can boast of many different styles and types of clubs and fraternal organizations, perhaps no more unique and jolly good fellowship is to be found than in one called the "Nighthawks," which is made up of a father and three of his genial sons, and which meets once out of every week for a social session. John Koenigslein, its one time mayor of Norfolk and an old settler of many years' standing, is the president of the club—or to speak the language of the fraternity, he is the Chief Nighthawk. The other three members of the club are his sons, Ludwig, Jack and Arthur, all well known business men, who are plain every day Nighthawks, as it were. On one night out of every seven the members of this club, who live in a little community of their own between Koenigslein and Nebraska avenues, get together at one of the homes of the membership and have a good time together. They pass the time at a game of whist, sing songs that they all know and while away an hour or so in the end with a cordial chat. It is an unpretentious affair, this flock of nighthawks, but it is well worth the copying in hundreds of other families throughout this country today.—Norfolk N. v.

RELIANCE IS WINNER

AMERICAN BOAT EASILY BEATS SHAMROCK III.

First Trial an Easy Victory—Race Was Exciting Enough in First Half—A Runaway on Last Stretch—Gloom in Great Britain.

Newport, R. I.: In a splendid 12 to 15 knot breeze, over a windward and leeward course of thirty miles, the gallant sloop Reliance Saturday beat Shamrock III. in commanding style by exactly 3 minutes actual time, or 7 minutes and 3 seconds after deducting the 1 minute and 37 seconds which the defender concedes to Sir Thomas Lipton's third challenger on account of Reliance's larger sailing plan as at present measured. It was a royal water fight for the ancient trophy, which carries with it the yachting supremacy of the world, and by a strange coincidence the first victory in the cup series of 1893 occurred on the fifty-second anniversary of the day on which the old schooner America captured it in her famous race around the Isle of Wight. Reliance beat the British boat 3 minutes and 24 seconds in the thrash to windward, and 4 minutes and 36 seconds in the run down the wind.

The nautical sharp, who had already made up their minds on Thursday that Reliance could take the measure of the challenger in any kind of weather, regard the test as conclusive, although they hardly anticipated so overwhelming a victory. The race even dampened the ardor of Sir Thomas Lipton, who insisted after Thursday's fluke that his confidence in the beautiful craft designed by Fife was greater than ever. Still, like a sportsman, he does not acknowledge defeat and hopes for better luck next time. The single criticism he and his friends make of the race is that the only shift of the wind occurred on the windward beat, even granting that it accounted for Reliance's lead at the turn, the time the defender gained on the run home was more than ample to have given her the race.

It must be conceded, however, that Shamrock III. showed herself a wonderful boat in beating to windward, perhaps the ablest craft in this respect ever sent across the ocean on a cup-hunting expedition. For twelve miles the great single stickers raced like a team of horses, and during that portion of the run the patriots made no attempt to conceal their nervousness.

SALISBURY IS DEAD.

British Statesman Passed Away Saturday Night. London: Lord Salisbury died at 9:05 p. m. Saturday. The end of the distinguished statesman was a peaceful one, without the slightest evidence of pain. When death became imminent the attending physicians summoned the waiting members of the family, who gathered at the bedside and took farewell of the dying man, who, however, was unconscious of their presence. Within a few minutes after the death a brief announcement was handed to the newspaper men, and simultaneously the tolling of the death knell from the tower of the church of which the Rev. Lord William Cecil, a nephew of Lord Salisbury, is pastor, told the people of the little village of Hatfield that the long struggle was over.

NORTHERN PACIFIC WRECK.

Rails Spread Near Chehalis, Washington. Chehalis, Wash.: An excursion train on the Northern Pacific, composed of the engine and seven coaches on route to the Elks' club bake at Olympia, was wrecked Saturday near here. Two persons were killed, four fatally injured and about thirty seriously hurt. The train was running at a good rate of speed when the rails spread, throwing the engine down an embankment forty feet deep. Three coaches piled on top of the engine, and to add horror to the scene, the boiler of the engine exploded, throwing scalding water and steam for many yards around.

GENTLEMAN BURGLAR CAUGHT

Capture in New York of a Faedulous Thief. New York: When a half dozen detectives were dodging bullets fired at them on the roof of a West Forti-seventh Street house the other night by George Robinson, alias "Harry" W. Brooks, they were ignorant of the importance of their capture. Robinson was shot through one leg and captured. More than $10,000 worth of furs, dresses, jewels and lace have been recovered, and the prisoner, lying on a hospital cot, told the police where to find his apartments in which they found evidence proving his statement that he is "gentleman George," a crook well known to the police.

BUSTLE KIDNAPING.

Olatche, Kan.: Mrs. Lucy Van Herkes, who recently lost her bustle containing $7,300 near St. Paul, Minn., was found dead in her home near Shawnee, Kan. Secured about the house $1,575 in gold was discovered, but the bustle containing the $7,800 is still missing, and search is being made for it.

Robbers Loot a Postoffice.

Janesville, Wis.: The postoffice at Clinton, Wis., was entered by burglars and robbed of $300 in cash and $1,000 in stamps. The postmaster has offered a reward of $250 in addition to the reward offered by the government for their capture.

Body Found in Lake.

Walloon Lake, Mich.: The body of Arthur Albert W. Barnum, son of ex-Judge W. H. Barnum of Chicago, who disappeared mysteriously several days ago, has been found in the water here.

Panic on a Steamboat.

McKeenport, Pa.: The Annie Robertson, an excursion boat carrying 1,300 passengers, sank at the foot of Market Street here, but fortunately no one was drowned. Although a panic prevailed among the women and children, the excursionists were all taken off without fatalities by means of skiffs and barges.

Hundreds Are Killed.

Salonica, European Turkey: The village of Bout, Raikovo, and Armesko, near Florina, have been bombarded and their inhabitants annihilated. At Bout alone 500 Bulgarians are reported to have been killed.

SHIP BURNED BY BOLT.

Passenger Steamer Massena Is Destroyed by Lightning. Onkashburg, N. Y.: At the height of an electrical storm here the steamer Massena was struck by lightning and took fire. The blaze spread rapidly, and from one end of the ship to the other. Holed in by fire some of the crew jumped for their lives into the water, several being rescued by glass as they layed through windows.

The Massena drifted from its pier soon after being struck, but not soon enough to avoid setting fire to a warehouse, which was almost destroyed. The hull of the Massena now lies on a bar in front of the harbor, burned to the water's edge. Capt. Dana, who was dazed by the lightning, owned the Massena, which was one of the fastest steamers on the St. Lawrence.

MIMIC WAR IS BEGUN.

Hostile Fleet to Attack the City of Portland, Me. Portland, Me.: Theoretically the hostile fleet sailed from the tropics Friday to attack Portland. Secret service agents notified the United States government of the fact. In this way began a mimic war in which detachments of the United States army and the combined fleet of the North Atlantic squadron are to take part during the next few days. The fleet which is supposed to be sailing towards Portland, really is at anchor off Rockland, where it will remain for two days, which would be consumed if it was actually approaching from the tropics. Then the vessels will appear in this harbor and commence operations. In the meantime the army of defense will assemble and prepare itself for the coming of the fleet. The fleet, under the command of Rear Admiral Barkley.

FLOUR MILLS CLOSED.

Shortage of Wheat Compels Two Companies to Cease Work. Minneapolis, Minn.: The Anchor and B mills of the Pillsbury-Washburn Flour Mills Company and mills C, D, E and G of the Northwestern Consolidated Milling Company, all of which have been running night and day, have closed. The closing has probably averted a strike, although the milling companies do not know it. The mills were closed because of the shortage of wheat. E. N. Fairchild of the Pillsbury company said that he did not think the Anchor and the B mills would be closed for any length of time. Everything depended on the wheat supply.

Through an Open Switch

Connellsville, Pa.: A Baltimore and Ohio passenger train in going through the Connellsville yards ran through an open switch and crashed into the middle of a moving freight train on the westbound track. Nine persons were hurt, three of them seriously.

Three Workmen Fall 95 Feet.

Pittsburg, Pa.: By the collapse of a scaffold 95 feet high in the annex to the Joseph Morne Company building, on Penn. avenue, one man was killed and two others so seriously hurt that they will probably die.

Salisbury at Death's Door.

SAY TURKS ACT LIKE FIENDS

Fugitive Families from Krushovo Gave Awful Accounts. Sofia: The Greek patriarch asked the Bulgarian exarch to address a circular note to the Bulgarian ministers and school teachers in Macedonia urging them to remain quiet, and not to fight against the Turks. The exarch replied that he was sorry that he was not in a position to serve the sultan. As all the Bulgarian ministers and teachers had been cast into prison and the churches and schools were closed his voice could not be heard there—only the sound of guns was audible.

Fugitive families from Krushovo who have arrived at Monastir give terrible details of the situation which prevailed in the town of Krushovo after its capture by the Turks. The latter, they say, acted like fiends, running from house to house and through the streets, slaughtering everybody they met. The town is now a heap of ruins.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

Blow with Fist Kills—As the Result of a Drunken Spree Near St. Helena Charles Balliet Was Killed and Alex. Blair Is in Jail.

As the culmination of a drunken family spree near St. Helena, Charles Balliet is dead and his stepson, Alex. Blair, is in jail, charged with the killing.

Coroner Reifort of Hartington was notified of the deed and went to the scene of the crime and held an inquest over the remains.

It developed at the inquest that there had been a family jollification at the Balliet home, about five miles above St. Helena, in which five boys, five years of age or less, were killed.

Blair made no attempt to get away and Coroner Reifort arrested him and brought him to Hartington, where he was placed in the county jail.

Blair acknowledges that he committed the deed, but alleges that the old man struck him first and he was merely defending himself, and that the second time he struck Balliet the old man fell, striking the floor face downward, and never moved.

Balliet was about 55 years of age and was the second husband of Blair's mother, who survives him. Blair is a single man under 30.

Without warning the earth caved in, completely burying Wright and Braun and partially burying Engle and Richter.

The two latter extricated themselves in time to save Braun, but Wright was dead when he was unearthed. Braun was taken to the hospital. An inquest will be held.

One of the horses fell with its face in the water and Mr. Van Osdel managed to get near enough to hold its head out of the water until help came, thereby saving the beast from drowning.

He was near the top of the elevator and was assisting in pushing the wheat to a spot in the elevator into a large wheat bin when in some unaccountable manner he came into a large bin of wheat, which was at that time running through the spout into a car on the side track, and in a short time his body was sucked toward the spout and completely covered with wheat, shutting off the wheat running into the car.

It was discovered by the workmen, who at once went to the top of the elevator to learn the cause, where they missed Young Koons. Axes and saws were immediately used to cut a hole in the side of the elevator to let the wheat run out, but when the body of the boy was reached life was extinct.

STATE HOSPITAL

State Game Warden Carter has just returned from a tour of the counties in the extreme western part of the state, looking for offenders against the game laws and appointing a number of deputies, whose duty it will be to keep a lookout for poachers. Mr. Carter during his journey found that there was a popular misconception among hunters as to the open season this year when quail and prairie chickens may be killed. The legislature of two years ago passed a law prohibiting the killing of quail until the fall of 1902, when the opening season of these birds begins on November 1 and continues for one month only. The chicken season begins October 1 and continues until the end of November, whereas the old law permitted the shooting of chickens beginning with September 1 and lasting three months. Many of the hunters figure the change because the law seems to be that the law as to the chicken season was also amended as to allow chicken shooting during September; but this notion, states the chief game warden, is a serious mistake. Mr. Carter has instructed his corps of deputies to rigidly enforce the law against chicken shooting on the grounds and all offenders will be carrying a stiff sentence. The law was reported to be numerous in the western counties and Game Warden Carter predicts some fine sport for the mildreds who are content to abide by the law.

They Hunt, who was recently released from the penitentiary at Lincoln, where he had served an eight-year sentence for burglary in Omaha, has been arrested for the charge of having passed in opium money to the convicts. The warden found two bottles in a freight car. His attention was directed to the matter by finding in a letter to one of the convicts from Hunt a number. He happened to raise his eyes, while perusing the letter, and just outside on the sidetrack, was a freight car bearing the same number. He investigated and found the hope in the drawhead. The letter was addressed to a convict in a short time thereafter the convict, a trust was discovered taking indelicately for the car. Hunt was released after being warned. The warden found that there was no law which prevents the furnishing of opium by a citizen to prisoners. The only inhibition is against prisoners giving it to one another.

Labor Commissioner Bert Bush journeyed to the interior of the state to investigate charges that certain steam laundry companies have been violating the statute forbidding the employment of female labor for a period greater than ten hours daily. The labor bureau during the last week has compiled one of the large steam laundries in Lincoln to respect the ten hour law, although the proprietors at first protested that the law had not been stated. Agents of the labor bureau kept watch on the stevedore laundry and discovered that on frequent occasions the laundry girls were kept at work until after 11 at night, while the law specifically forbids employment beyond the hour of 10. A threat of immediate prosecution brought the laundry operators to time, who now have posted copies of the labor statutes in the premises and consented to the inspection of the employees may know their rights.

Up at the state insurance department it is stated that while the big bill of the last month have made it impossible for the bail companies to pay all losses in full, it will not necessarily mean that they will be put out of business. These companies are mutual affairs. At the end of a season the aggregate amount of loss is ascertained and an assessment levied on each company to pay their share of the losses of the company. For the safety of policyholders liability is limited to 4 or 5 per cent of the amount of the policy in any one year. If the losses are greater than this assessment will pay, then they will be pro-rated. This leaves the companies free to do business again the next year. There is thought to be a strong probability that most of the companies will not be able to pay in full.

Adj. Gen. Culver has received notice that something over 1,200 improved King-Jorgenson rifles will reach Lincoln State. The number sent by the government is based upon Wayne County Politics.

The contest for the offices in Wayne county may be considered on in earnest now, since the nominations are all made. Who will win? and why? This question is easily asked, but to answer it well is another thing. Our opinions are sometimes warped by our desires and we see victory for a party or an individual, when, if honest with ourselves we would take into consideration all the things that go to make up a campaign and a political victory, and can see clearly in advance what always appears clear enough afterwards.

Let us not consider for a minute the motive of the contending parties along party lines, and for the sake of argument we will consider that the spot cash value of the office is the sole and only incentive prompting alike the republicans and the fusionist opponent. For the sake of argument, too, we will consider the fusionist equally as sincere in his allegiance to party (which he hopes to discover and evolve, under some leader and on some platform, not yet knowing whether it will be Bryanlike or Clevelandlike) as is the republican adversary who is pledging undivided allegiance to the Roosevelt administration and the conservative political and business policy under which the nation has prospered and is contented. It is strange why some people are so, but that is their business and we must respect their opinions and accord them the same right to hold office (if they can hustle the votes) whether they think as we do or not. So much of generalities.

To be quite specific, it is apparent to fusionists and republicans alike that it takes republican votes to elect any fusionist to office in this county as it is well known that the republican majority is about 250 in the county. A person in taking a fusion nomination expects to break in on the republican party for votes enough to win his election. In the campaign this fall the fusionists hope to elect one or two of the men they have named, supposing that they have the dope on the rabbit's foot, or both, to land by plain purchase or trade, or by cajolery, magic or hot air the 150 more or less republican votes. To be real plain and explicit Charles Reynolds was nominated for county clerk and Jake Zeigler for county assessor to win out if possible, the balance of the ticket was nominated because they couldn't help it. It wouldn't look well to not nominate a full ticket and two places might be landed, more would be a sure failure of the plans inside the "ring." We will not question the personal integrity of a single man on either ticket. Each party nominated its best men and personally little choice could be made, but politically each party may make its own deductions and claim for its own nominees all that is justifiable. The writer claims nothing for the republican nominees except that they are as strong in general qualification as can be selected from any party at anytime, and not one voter of this county is justified in giving his support to one of their opponents. "Comparisons are odious" and it would be very poor policy to compare man with man from one end of the ticket to the other, in some places an eminent fitness of one man is seen for the place he seeks, to others his opponent seems best fitted. Then, after all we would not be convinced, all of us. We can recognize in politics something in common sense claims, but nothing in blind argument. If a man is doing his duty in an office it is a mistake to turn him out just because some other fellow wants, or thinks he wants the job, and in a part of the county offices are men who have won the esteem of the public and no contest is at all likely to occur. For treasurer Joe Jones, the republican nominee is entitled to and will carry the solid republican vote of the county and the sly ones of the fusionists did not run their heads into the noose, but "put the other fellows up against it." Jack Cherry is no doubt able to hold the fusion vote of the county, but he is not fool enough to lose a hundred dollars personal expenses, two hundred dollars of his time for the canvass, and then attempt to buy for cash the 150, more or less, votes necessary to win. The time was when the banks were more interested in the county treasurer than they are now. Under the new law the county money will be divided among all the banks of the county, prorated according to the capital stock of the banks. Banks cannot gain anything hereafter by naming a county treasurer and it is safe to say they will not touch the matter in the county this fall. Joe Jones has the assurance of the party vote in Wayne this fall and that is why Jack Cherry disliked to be a candidate for he did not know where to go for republican votes if Wayne was not his disposal. And why the nomination was so suddenly tendered to Cherry and the scheming politicians refused to accept it has but one answer—Cherry was put up to slaughter.

In what way Jake Zeigler expects

Repairing A Specialty.

to hold trump cards over August Witter is hard to tell, it is putting giant against giant with that stone wall of republican votes that must be bagged somehow, a hopeless task, but the political importance of the office is such that the fusionists could not avoid including it with the one other, the county clerkship, upon which they builded all their hopes.

As between Chas. Beebe, the republican nominee, and Chas. Reynolds, the fusion nominee, few have a personal choice, the choice must be political. The writer has had several confidential chats with both gentlemen and cannot say one word that would enhance the chances of one at the expense of the other. This contest is unique in several ways. Mr. Beebe and Mr. Reynolds are brothers-in-law, both are young men and seek a advancement worthily. Mr. Beebe is qualified for the clerkship by four years as deputy in that office. Mr. Reynolds has had four years of the clerkship of the district court and both have the esteem of everyone. The result of this contest being of the greatest interest to the people of the county we are disposed to set forth the claims advanced by the friends of each candidate and leave the matter uncolored by personal opinion, except that: We cannot see why a republican should vote for Mr. Reynolds when so worthy a man has been nominated by his own party, and Mr. Reynolds recognizes, no doubt, the necessity of getting some 150 republican votes in order to win.

Fusionists say that Mr. Reynolds is the strongest man of that party for that office, having held the district court clerkship with such satisfaction and it becomes a duty which he cannot shift to stand up and battle for the party success. That he is capable of getting the same votes this fall that he did four years ago, that he deserves the office if any man does, and that these things are enough said. They contend a fight will be made upon Mr. Beebe by members of the republican party for personal reasons and that Mr. Reynolds might just as well as anyone else reap the benefit of the disaffection that will come out, and that Mr. Reynolds owes nothing to his brother-in-law because he (Beebe) was nominated first.

Republicans say that their party owes Mr. Reynolds nothing. That they gave him the office of clerk of the district court four years ago because he was a worthy Wayne boy, that if he wished to hold the same office longer there would be little disposition to dislodge him—in fact they would probably give it to him again. They say that Mr. Reynolds recognizes this, but seeks to impose upon the staunch republican friends who were so liberal with him before, the painful duty of refusing him now or turning down Mr. Beebe, one of the most worthy of Wayne county's young men, and that while the salary of the district court clerkship may be only $500 or $600, it is more than some of the bright young men in Wayne county get as book-keepers and clerks who put in several hours a day more time than is required in the district court clerk's office. They say, if, as Mr. Reynolds asserted, he "could not afford to take it longer," and would not accept the nomination again for the reason that he could "do better" (having a better position, awaiting him if he cares to take it and will take it if defeated, for county clerk, they say) then they no longer consider it a demand upon their friendship to give Mr. Reynolds anything, but instead it is a pleasure as well as a duty to support their own nominee, Mr. Beebe. They say disaffection of republican voters is magnified by the office, hungry democrats and there will be practically none of it. The party is united and will act as a unit. They say some member of the Reynolds family has held office in Wayne county steadily for ten years; that if Chas. Reynolds is elected he will remain here,—if defeated he will go away at once, as did his father, Ed Reynolds, but if Mr. Beebe is elected he is encouraged in his worthy ambition to maintain his family here and complete the improvements of the modest home he has sought to build in this city, which, however, would be maintained even if he were defeated, as his home ties are all in Wayne.

It is a matter of importance to the republican party to look at these things in a way a jury impartially finds a verdict when each side presents a strong case. This party is the judge and voters in this case and it is a competent argument to say republican voters will maintain their dignity and decide fairly.

Not Over-Wise. There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is every where recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by Raymond's Pharmacy.

The Menace of the Forest. The climatic history of the Old World will repeat itself in America. If forest destruction, at its present rate of recklessness, should continue much longer, our continent will have to dry up. So will an orator who should venture to urge that fact upon a bodiless legislature, in this era of lumber trusts. But the fact remains, and its significance may be inferred from the experience of the Mediterranean coast lands, where thousands of god-gardens have been turned into Gehennas of wretchedness and desolation. By tree destruction alone a territory of 4,500,000 square miles has been withdrawn from the habitable area of our planet. The physical history of the eastern hemisphere is the history of a desert that originated somewhere near the cradle of the Caucasian race,—in Bactria, perhaps, and spreading westward and southward, has blighted the Edens of three continents like a devouring fire and is now scorching the West Coast of Africa, and lending its warning sand clouds far out to seaward. From "Climatic Prospects," by Dr. Felix L. Oswald, in September National Magazine.

Going to Quit. Since the matter is under discussion, THE REPUBLICAN will venture this much more "free advertising," as Wilson Bros. call it, upon the same subject we touched upon two weeks ago, not as a reply, never! just as qualifying what was then said. What was then said by THE REPUBLICAN was either true or untrue. If untrue it was original libel and Wilson Bros. were justified in asking the courts to enjoin THE REPUBLICAN from further comment of a libelous nature, even if a damage suit would avail nothing but a paper judgement. No man or business firm is justified in keeping still under unjust charges against personal integrity or its sincerity of purpose in its dealings with the public. If the charges were true they were and are hard doses to take and would not avail the average business firm any value as advertising of the kind we usually relish. Wilson Bros. are either hit hard by the facts we asserted and sneer at and ridicule aside those facts, or they are injured unjustly and proceedings at law would add to their purpose at small expense to themselves and avail them much free advertising of a kind better than they now enjoy.

THE REPUBLICAN does not propose to see the Wilson Bros. "play horse" with the people of "Wayne county" in this matter of "cloaking out." We all know they will not, cannot, close out their stock in sixty days by the methods they employ. At Ponca they employed the same methods and created no great commotion among those who knew them. They shipped away what was not sold—the greater part. The will ship away from Wayne the greater part of their stock, selling, of course, odds and ends such as grace the show windows and sidewalk—old stuff, cheap stuff, out of style and out of proportion in value by long odds to the up-to-date goods people of average means and good sense usually buy. You can't buy anything of standard value of Wilson Bros. for less than it will cost them to replace it. Stick a pin here. If it is off in value you may buy it cheap (if you are a judge of values.) If not, look out. The whole proposition is contained in their sincerity or non-sincerity in doing as they offer to do. Those who know them can recall that they have never departed from a form of advertising modeled after city stores as much as possible, a sensational kind, offering certain discounts, making claims to do so and so, but who can say they kept faith with the public and that they did not strike a very slow gait in a mighty good town. You can't astonish the average farmer or townsman with trumped up claims of cheap selling, you can't fool them year in and year out about the "wonderful bargains," "extraordinary discounts," etc., and have folks believe a word of it when facts deny what they claim now. Those who have visited Wilson Bros. store during the past few days say they cannot buy anything cheap that is old anything like standard value, it is old stuff that has little value that is on the cheap list, and after 60 days of selling of the old stuff the good goods will be shipped to some place where Wilson Bros. are not so well known as at Ponca and Wayne.

They Come for Hundreds of Miles to See Her.

Nothing So Wonderful in the Days of Specialism.

Dr. Caldwell

The success of Dr. Caldwell is attributed to her special study of specialism. Dr. Caldwell, student, philanthropist, and physician of wide reputation, having given her entire time and practice to a line of special diseases, which enables her from long experience in handling these troubles to come forward as a master specialist. Her facility for mastering disease, her ability to diagnose, and her plan of treatment is excelled by few physicians. Dr. Caldwell although a young woman in life, a plain woman, and one who is used to the ups and downs of life, puts herself on a level with her patients, and does not pretend to treat who are not able to follow, which is to look wise and say nothing. She knows disease, she knows how to explain the symptoms of disease and the spot where located, and most of all she knows from experience, and what she has done in the past, she can certainly do for others in the future. It is said by Dr. Caldwell's friends that she can diagnose a disease of any patient without asking them a single question, that being the case, she is not likely to doctor them for the wrong ailment; she will not take an incurable disease and lead the patient to believe that she can cure them when there is really no hope for them. Her business is large and she has plenty to do, even at times, more than she can do, without taking incurable diseases and deceiving her patients. Dr. Caldwell is a graduate of one of the best schools in America. She has practiced her profession in some of the principal hospitals in this country. Her specialty comprises that class of diseases which the ordinary home doctor fails to cure, such as female diseases, heart diseases, diseases of children, and the many special diseases of hidden nature. Her practice is mostly among the plain, hard-working people, who are unable to come to her in the city office for treatment; she is reasonable in her charges and very patient with those who are not able to pay. She is charitable, and it is said has never been known to refuse a patient treatment who is worthy and in need. A number of important cases we herewith take the liberty to publish, which might be of interest to some who wish to know more of Dr. Caldwell's great work:

Mrs. Sophia K. Ryan, Nebraska, cured of a bad skin disease.
Mrs. Lulu Towley, David City, Nebraska, cured of female trouble and female weakness.
Mrs. E. A. Studer, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of female and nervous troubles.
Mr. C. T. Muffy, Meadow Grove, Nebraska, cured of heart trouble and bronchial and nervous troubles.
Mrs. C. Linn, Hoskins, Nebraska, cured of ovarian and bladder troubles.
F. J. Rob, Abia, Nebraska, cured of bronchial trouble, enlarged liver and dropsy.
Mrs. Minnie Rudat, Columbus, Nebraska, cured of skin disease and bladder trouble.
Mrs. D. W. Burr, David City, Nebraska, cured of skin disease, nervousness and loss of appetite.
Mrs. Chas. Miller, Wayne, Nebraska, cured of dropsy, kidney and liver troubles and nervousness. She had been troubled for years.
Mrs. C. W. Anderson, Norfolk, Nebraska, cured of general debility, enlarged liver and pain in chest.
Mrs. John Auman, Benton, Nebraska, cured of bladder trouble and constipation.
Mrs. S. P. A. Mink, T. Kemah, Nebraska, cured of a more or less trouble, loss of appetite and constipation.

Dr. Caldwell will be at Boyd Hotel in WAYNE, September 2, '08

about our methods of selling. We mark such low prices on high-grade HARNESS AND HORSE GOODS that it makes owners feel that it pays better to replace old things than to spend time and money toggling them up. The very atmosphere of this shop tells of good quality leather. There is genuine stuff in our harness and it has all the features that distinguish it from the imitation and inferior grades.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902. Right months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could eat nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she brought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

WINE-CARDUI

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was about all gray. But now it is a rich black, and as thick as I could wish. Mrs. SWAN KLOFFERTY, Tusconia, Ala.

He was here Wednesday and leased the McNeal residence property of Mr. Nangle and concluded some other preliminary work prior to his moving to Wayne. Mr. Lane has a splendid reputation as a druggist which has preceded him here from Howells and we welcome him to our city. Mr. Orth informed the writer he expected to remain in Wayne for the present at least but would take a rest from business rather than engage in anything confining for the present.

Rev. E. E. Duley, of St. Paul, Minnesota, preached last Sunday in the Baptist church and his sermons were so well received the Church Board extended a call to him to accept the pastorate of this church. He went back on Monday and after consulting Mrs. Duley wrote the Board they would accept the call and that he would be here Saturday and hold services on Sunday at the usual hours. Their household goods will probably follow at once and the new pastor will install his family in their new home in a few days. Rev. Duley told us before his departure that the Wayne schools the character of the city and other favorable environments were quite to his liking and we feel that they will all like it here. Rev. Duley is one of those pleasant gentlemen whom we easily become acquainted with, he is most earnestly devoted to his work and it is very fortunate for the Baptist church that they have found so one one to take up the work in this pastorate.

The flood that came down our streets two weeks ago, filling the basements more or less of the business houses on lower Main street was something that may be expected at any time and Wayne should in the not distant future provide against this damage to the occupants and owners of these valuable properties. A sewer extending from the Baptist church to the Logan creek, three or four feet in diameter, with extensions west at every corner, would carry off this flood water and would be a good investment, we think.

We attended the Carroll picnic last Wednesday which was rather above the average of such affairs. We found Carroll a strictly temperance town as most of its people were more or less down on even the empty beer kegs. We found that Carroll can play ball and also Winside can play basket ball. The ladies of the camp of R. M. A. and Degree of Honor gave fine drills. Thursday we went to Randolph and found that town can get a crowd, rain or shine, mud or no mud, and that ball games, races, mid-air performing by a man, also a trained dog, Bosco the snake eater, dancing, a boxing match and drills by the degree teams of the two ladies lodges were the amusements of the day and evening. Probably a thousand visitors were present. The boxing match drew a big crowd of men and women, when as we heard of no picnics we came home.

The trembling hand of the gray-haired mother fluttered down like a blessing on the burning brow of her eldest-born—the son who had always been a blessing to her from the hour when his baby lips stirred the mother-love into life within her breast until now when the hand that had smoothed her widowed path so gently, lay still and wasted on the counterpane, never to take up life's burden again.

"Always unselfish," she answered, in faltering tones. "No, Willie, dear boy, I cannot delegate to others the dear task of soothing your hours of pain. Do you 'Nora can I?' supplemented Grace, laying an impulsive, clasping hand on the thin one that rested outside the counterpane. "I have put myself in Lulu's place, and it is as a sister that I claim the privilege of waiting on you."

"Thanks," she answered, deeply moved. Mrs. Clendonon, with an irrefragable sob, went gliding from the room.
"Oh, about Lulu," she says, with assumed carelessness to hide her real feelings. "Why is it you won't consent to have your mother send for her to come on while you are so sick? Don't you want to see her?"
"Don't you?" she says, with a look of grief. "Dear little sister Lulu, how I long to see her! I cannot tell you. But why hasten her? She is coming shortly anyhow. She may be in time to see me; if not, we still shall meet again some time. She will come to me."

"Don't talk that way," she says, in a low, sad voice. "You will get better as soon as this fever breaks."
"Or worse," she answers. "You know a crisis must come then, Mrs. Winans, whether for better or worse, we cannot now tell. But we all know—your mother and the doctor, though you try to hide it from me—that the indications point to the worst."

"I can say any of us—the doctor, even—[What] what will be the result of that crisis? We hope for the best. Do you not remember how ill I was in Washington with brain fever, and how Lulu would not let them shave off my long curls? No one thought I would recover, yet I did. 'So, I trust, will you.'"
"Yes, if so please God; but I think, Mrs. Winans, that He is going to be very merciful and let me live."
"Going to be very merciful," she repeats, with a grave wonder in her large eyes, as at something new and strange. She cannot at all understand how this quiet heart that has always seemed to her so untouched by any great joy or grief, can be so eagerly content in going to meet the result of that crisis. "Why, you do not want to die so young. The world needs good men like you. Why, what can you mean?"
"Just this, Mrs. Winans," he lifts his honest gray eyes to her fair face—his fever is falling, and he seems quite cool though earnest—"that God, when he puts a lifelong sorrow on our hearts, usually spurs us in which to endure it. So you, Mrs. Winans, let us live to bear. Crosses like mine, that may be blessing, but never joy. He lets one lay down early at the foot of the Great White Throne."

"Sweeping lashes shade her cheeks to hide her great surprise. She asks nothing of Captain Clendonon's cross, though she knows she has never dreamed of its existence.
"Some lost love," she guesses, with ready sympathy in her heart, and answers, sadly:
"Sorrow like mine can never turn into joy."
"They can, they will," he cries, in glad excitement. "I know, I feel, that one of your lost ones, at least, will be restored to you."
"Oh! what can you mean?"
In eager hope she rises, looking down at him with eyes that would fain read the secret he had almost betrayed.

"Sit down," he answers, in calmer tones. "and forgive me for startling you so. I really mean that I feel like this, my dear friend; and I do feel as good as dead, that ere long, all will be well with you. It is given sometimes, you know, to dying eyes to see very clearly."
A flashing drop from her blue eyes falls down upon the hand that still lies upon the soft clasp of hers, and in low tones she answers:
"Lulu, now, you had better not talk any more. I fear you will overtake your strength. I am going to read some for you."

And closing his eyes, he listens peacefully to the sweet, tremulous voice that reads the fourteenth chapter of St. John, beginning: "Let not your heart be troubled."
And thus the days pass by, each one stealing a hope from the watcher's heart, and so many hours from Willard's life. Their patience does not waver, nor does his quiet courage. He knows that the world is fair outside, that the Southern sky is blue and bright—that flowers are in bloom, that birds are singing—knows, too, that all "Creation's" deep musical chorus, unintermitting, goes up into heaven, and is fain to go with it. Very bravely and contentedly he breathes the dark waters, knowing that a strong arm upholds him.

Mrs. Clendonon has written to Lulu that he is ill, but ere that long delayed letter reaches her his wretched frame may be reaching the "out of pain" he now endures, or of prison, for it is the last of March now, and Dr. Constant and his consulting physicians think that the fever is almost broken, and the crisis near at hand. What the result will be they almost certainly know, but still whisper feeble hope to the mother, whose heart is so full of grief, whose yearning prayer goes up to God that He will spare her first-born.

He does not always answer such prayers in the way that seems good to us. But all the same, He who is Maker of all things, Judge of all things, judges best for us poor finite reasoners. Why, then, the answer to such queries shall we find written in letters of light, perchance, within the pearly gates of the new Jerusalem.

Closer and closer yet grew the bond between mother and son as the long days waned to the lovely Southern twilight. Many gentle conversations blessed the about sister from whom another letter came on the third of April, to say that no letters from home had reached her for a month; she was still ignorant of that fatal illness her tender heart had foreboded months before. One portion of the letter which she specially desired her brother to read, he was too ill to see for several days after its reception. Not until after that night at whose at the other side of the bed the anguish of another lifetime to the tender message to the absent sister, the soft words of comfort, the low farewell. With the last kiss of her son on her lips she buries her face speechlessly in his pillow.

"Grace, will you raise me a little?"
She bends with one arm under his shoulder, the other across his breast, and lifts him so that his head rests comfortably against her shoulder—an easy task, fragile and wearied as she is, for he has wasted in the grasp of that destroying fever until he is scarcely more than a wan shadow himself. Bending to look into his face, she asks, softly:
"Willard, are you easy now?"
"Quite easy," he answers in a strangely contented tone, with such a tender caress in it that Grace starts; and as he falters "good-by," she bends with a sudden impulse and just touches her lips to his in a pure thrill of sisterly affection and grief; his glance lifts to hers an instant and remains fixed; a quivering sigh, a scarcely perceptible shudder, and Willard Clendonon's spirit has flown out of the earthly heaven of her arms to the higher heaven of his soul.

Andrew Jackson Assisted a Boarding-House Keeper in a Novel Manner.
An old employee of one of the departments tells how President Jackson stopped long enough in his flight on Nicholas Biddle and the United States bank to help a landlady collect a board bill from a long delinquent debtor. He occupied a position of responsibility in the navy department, where the man who tells the story is now employed. He was a person of fine address and a smooth talker and he had no difficulty in running a heavy bill with the landlady. In her despair she finally went to the White House, where she was ushered into the presence of the President. She told her story to him and the old hero of the battle of New Orleans listened attentively. When she had completed her tale of woe he said:

"Have Mr. Blank give you his note at sixty days for the entire amount of his indebtedness to you and when that is done bring it to me."
The landlady followed the President's instructions. Mr. Blank promptly signed the note, though wondering what she wanted with it, for he knew no bank or note shaver would discount his paper. She took the note to the President, who read it carefully, expressed his satisfaction, and then took up his good gray goose quill pen and indorsed it. In those days the banks did not send out notices to the makers of notes of the date those interesting documents fell due. They waited until the day of doom, as it were, and then sent their collector out to hunt up the victim and get the money. So when Mr. Blank's note fell due the bank collector called on him and jogged his memory. Mr. Blank received him affably and smilingly said:

"My dear sir, I am not prepared to take that note up today; the best I can do is to renew it."
"I don't think that would suit your indorser," blandly remarked the collector.
"My indorser?" exclaimed Mr. Blank in surprise. "Why, man, there is no indorser on that note."
"Oh, yes, there is," replied the collector. "Here's your note, look at it and see for yourself."
Mr. Blank took the note and as he saw A. Jackson scrawled across it in old Hickory's well-known rugged hand he nearly fell out of his official chair. Recovering himself with an effort he said:

"I think you are right. I will pay the amount before the three days of grace expire."
"And he did. So much for the right kind of an indorser.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Two Mr. Reeds.
When the late Mr. Reed was Speaker of the House, a lady of Washington—a personal friend of his—named a favorite cat for him. It happened that the Speaker and his namesake met on one occasion, and the outcome of the interview has been told by the owner of the cat.

When, one day, the two Mr. Reeds accidentally met in her reception-room, and the more illustrious of them, attracted by the beauty of his furry namesake, stooped to stroke him and ask, "What do you call him?" the hostess had a bad quarter of a minute.
"She did not know just how the star of the House of Representatives would like the idea that a cat had been named for him. So she stammered out a hastily invented fictitious name, and the conversation passed to other topics, when suddenly a peremptory voice sounded on the stairway: "Mr. Reed!"
"Mr. Reed!" the voice continued. "Are you in the parlor? What are you doing in that parlor?"
Before any explanations could be made a white-capped head was thrust in the doorway and an angry-looking maid servant cried, "Come out of that parlor, I tell you, Mr. Reed!"
It is not on record that the cat seemed embarrassed.

Cruel Custom.
Jim—Mr. Fromage has a very artistic name.
Jim—Well, I should say so. He's been complaining because the theaters don't keep open all summer.
"Wants to go to the show?"
"Oh, no; but he's used to seeing a complete change of lithographs on the billboards every week and he thinks that it's positively cruel to foster a love for art and then refuse to satisfy it by new posters every week.—Baltimore Herald.

Agreed.
Two souls with but a single thought may yet be out of harmony. A traveler in Scotland, says the London Globe, observed an old couple arguing in the road, and asked the cause of the dispute.
"We're no deepputin' at all," answered the man; "we're bairn of a same mind. I hae got a half-crown in my pouch, an' she thinks she's no gunn to get it—an' I think the same."

POLITICAL COMMENT.

Extra Session Nov. 9.
It is authoritatively announced by Senator Lodge, as the result of a recent visit to Oyster Bay, that the President has fixed upon Nov. 9 as the day on which Congress will assemble in an extra session, called primarily for the approval of the Cuban treaty, which was ratified by the Senate last March, and incidentally to act upon currency legislation along the lines indicated in the views and declarations set forth in various speeches by the President. Opinion varies alike as to the wisdom of summoning Congress into extra session for these purposes, and also as to the length of time that will be required to enact the legislation that shall carry into effect the President's wishes both as to the Cuban treaty and the improvement of our currency system. The New York Tribune thinks the session should be a short one. It says:

The Cuban legislation indeed should take no time at all, for all that is needed is a simple act modifying the tariff law in conformity with the treaty already ratified by the Senate. No question of detail calls for discussion. The simple issue is carrying out the treaty or not carrying it out. Practically every member now knows what he thinks, and the bill could properly be brought to a vote in each house at once. Any delay on the pretense of discussion merely means that persons who want the treaty to fail, but do not dare to face public opinion in favor of concessions to Cuba, are taking an indirect method to kill it. As the Senate has already ratified the treaty, it may be expected that it will vote without question to put its own measure in operation. The difficulty, if any is to be encountered, will doubtless be in the House, where a determined element is opposed to any closer relations with Cuba from perfectly well understood selfish motives.

Without stopping to inquire why it is thought necessary to ascribe selfish motives to those who do no more than to ask that the government and the Republican party keep faith with them in the matter of the tariff protection guaranteed to them by the Dingley law, while motives of the highest patriotism are ascribed to those who seek to set up the new and strange doctrine that it is always proper to sacrifice one industry for the benefit of another industry, provided you can influence enough votes in Congress to carry out the deal—without going more deeply into this peculiar phase of a peculiar question, let us proceed to consider whether it is true, as the Tribune asserts, that "The Cuban legislation indeed should take no time at all," etc. We are inclined to think that the legislation necessary to consummate the reciprocity arrangement with Cuba will and ought to take very much more time than "no time at all." The treaty has been ratified by the Senate and now awaits the sanction of the House. Before the House can reach a final vote on the question of approval it would seem to be natural that the Republican majority in the House should very seriously consider and thoroughly debate the following questions, among others:

1. Is the proposed treaty constitutional? Does not the Constitution specifically require that all legislation affecting the revenue shall originate in the House? Is there a case on record where legislation affecting the revenue has originated in the Senate and has subsequently been approved by the House?

2. Does it not involve the violation by the government of a contract of agreement with certain producing interests of the United States—namely, the Dingley tariff law?

3. Is it equitable, fair or politically expedient that the American farmers who grow sugar and tobacco and the American capital and labor engaged in the manufacture of cigars should alone be selected to bear all the burdens of reciprocity with Cuba?

4. Is it economically wise to discourage American sugar production, when with the Dingley tariff duties retained for a period of less than ten years that rapidly growing industry would completely supply the domestic demand and retain in this country the $100,000,000 a year now sent abroad to pay for sugar imported from foreign countries?

5. Does not the United States run the risk of provoking retaliation and commercial warfare when it discriminates against the sugar producers of Germany, France, Russia, Belgium, etc., and in favor of the sugar growers of Cuba?

6. Are we not subjecting Cuba to the risk of provoking retaliation when we compel her to discriminate in favor of manufactured products from the United States and against the competing products of all other countries?

7. If the policy of protection to all domestic labor and industry is to be abrogated or relaxed in favor of Cu-

AN OPTIMIST.
"O aged man, pray, if you know, Now, answer me the truth!— Which of the gifts that the gods bestow Is the greatest gift of youth?"
"O aged man, I have far to fare By the divers paths of Earth. Say which of the gifts that with me I bear Is the gift of the greatest worth?"
"Is it the might of the good right arm, Whereby I shall make my way Where dangers threaten and evils harm, Holding them still at bay?"
"Is it the strength wherewith I shall climb Where few before have trod— To the mountain tops, the peaks sublime That glow in the smile of the god?"
"Is it the never-failing will, Invincible in might, Which, armed against oppression still, Shall vanquish for the right?"
"Or is it the heart, though aged man— The heart, impassioned, strong— Which shall be blest, as naught else can, In perfect love ere long?"

The old man smiled; the listening breeze Grey whist on the sun-lit slope. The old man sighed; Ah, none of these! Youth's greatest gift is hope.

Twenty-five Cents
JOHN MURRAY, author, lawyer, and popular young club man, stood under an unsheltered gas jet in the back aisle of a famous New York bookshop, his hat and coat discarded, all sense of his surroundings gone, the time for dressing for a formal dinner creeping perilously near, while his eyes remained fixed on the pages of a book.

"Will you kindly attend to me?" There was asperity in the drawing voice.
John came out of his unreal world and found himself between the shelves of books, a young woman of brilliant blonde beauty standing before him, her eyebrows met in a small, triangular frown.
"I bought this book only an hour ago," and she placed a package before him while glancing around the shelves: "I bought it for a friend to read on a journey. At luncheon I glanced through it. It's simply deadly. I want it exchanged."

John's expression would have betrayed him, but the pretty customer was not looking at him. It never occurred to her that "people who sold things," conductors, elevator boys, or waiters, had faces to be looked at and were to themselves quite as conspicuous in the scheme of things as she was.

She moved about, pulling down books and not putting them back, while addressing the air.
"There's no objection to exchanging it, I suppose?"
"No—certainly not."
Once the words had passed his lips he felt himself committed to the situation. Besides, it might be interesting to study a society girl from the standpoint of a poor clerk who sold books in a gaslit shop while the world of fashion walked and drove in the winter sun.

"I'm in something of a hurry," she said over her shoulder, an ingredient in her voice which made him feel altogether a clerk and nothing of an individual.
"If you will kindly make a selection—," he said, entering with secret delight and some fear into the new role.
She did not seem to hear him, but moved about, her pale gray velvet skirt making marks in the dust on the floor.

"Very wealthy, I imagine," mused John. "A beauty, and horribly aware of it. She has a manner that would be called insolent if she were plain. I don't believe she was always rich—It's like wine in her blood. Has she brains? Not enough to make her uncomfortable. I'll look at this book she's brought back. That will tell me something of her mental equipment."
He removed the wrapping and glanced at the title. "The Fates Are Three." He drew a quick breath and his ears grew red. He was angry, then humbled. The abused volume was his own work, his latest novel, the "hit" of the season, which had opened wide the domains of reputation and money to him. The literary fatherhood within him was hurt, but he decided to push the steel farther.

"We see a great many of 'The Fates Are Three,'" she said, whirling the pages of a book. "Why don't you like it? We see—we value an expression of opinion from our customers," and he felt all decent.
"Oh, it's one of those deep things—no swing to it. It's stupid, that's all," said Mr. Murray as the critics on his side.
She lifted her brows, but did not trouble to answer.
"I'll take this!"—laying a pearl colored volume before him with sprays of orange blossoms as decoration. "Is there any difference in the price?"
John's amour propre came out of its corner and mounted on a dais when he saw the mental meringue which replaced him: "Wedded but Not Mated," by Angelina Dalrymple. "Twenty-five cents," he said, briskly wrapping the book up. "Shall I send it for you?"
"Yes—to Miss Glendinning; No.—Fifth avenue."
While he wrote the address, she swept away, leaving a violet fragrance in the dusty corner. John looked after her with a bit of malicious humor.

"Miss Glendinning—Margaret's idol, who raves over 'The Fates Are Three,' and is so anxious to meet me because I'm the author of it." It'll get even with her for this."
He put the twenty-five cents carefully in a wallet, substituted another, and left it on top of the book for one of the clerks to hand later and speculate over. Then he sent "Wedded but Not Mated" to Miss Glendinning from a messenger office.
A few days later a note from his cousin Margaret awaited him with his coffee:

Dear Jack:
"I'm off in a rush for golf and a dance at Ardsley's, but there's something you can do for me while I'm gone. Will you go to Hester Glendinning's, No. — Fifth avenue, and introduce yourself? We are getting up tableaux for my kindergarten, and are taking bits from the latest novels. Miss Glendinning is managing the staging, and is not quite sure of some details in the costuming of the medieval period, in which 'The Fates Are Three' is laid.
"Nor any other period but the present, I imagine," he snorted.
"You will like her. She is a most enthusiastic admirer of your book 'Jack,' and this ought to please you. Go, like a good boy."
MARGARET
"I don't care in the least to know her," he announced to the toast rack. Later in the day he wrote:
Dear Miss Glendinning:
"The enclosed letter from my cousin explains why I wrote you.
"I keenly appreciate the honor you do me in wishing to stage some scenes from my book—but why not take 'Wedded but Not Mated' instead? You like this so much better—you remember you paid twenty-five cents more for it—and there are such fearful love scenes, ruined abbey, secret chambers, stiles in moonlight, unbound golden hair, and the part of the heroine into which she rushes madly to escape from the villain—and without a hat, of course. I haven't read it myself, but I feel positive all these are in it."
"My dear Miss Glendinning, you did not know the service you were doing me when you paid out that twenty-five cents. It will keep me humble when relatives are too encouraging. I am sincerely and humbly your debtor, JOHN MURRAY.
"I don't think my customer will look quite so insolently self-satisfied when she reads that," he said, and stamped it with a jubilant fist.
On a snowy night a week later, John dropped in unannounced at his cousin's to dine there en famille.
"I'm so glad," said Margaret, as he warmed himself by the sitting room fire. "Now you'll have a chance to meet Hester Glendinning. She's in the library with Tom."
"Hester?" asked John flatly. "Him?" he added, and looked at the rug. "I don't think I'll stay after all, Margaret."
"Not stay? Why, Jack! Why do you always fight shy of Hester? What's the matter?"
"Between ourselves, I don't imagine I'll like her."
Margaret looked him over in cousinly scorn.
"You'll be hard to please if you don't. I hope you're not getting an awfully big opinion of yourself, Jack. Oh, here they are!"
"A moment after it seemed to John that the room swung before his eyes and the rug went up to meet the ceiling. Margaret was introducing him to some one he had never seen before—a tall, graceful girl in simple black, with dark hair, a pale, rather thin face, lighted with wonderful, comprehensive, hazed eyes; with a manner that was almost boyishly frank and unaffected, and a voice so soft and beautiful it awakened all the poetry in him.
"Only once during that comfortable dinner did she touch upon the secret thought that troubled him—when Margaret spoke of the coming tableaux. There was half hidden laughter in her gaze as it met his in the shaded candle light.
"I was sorry you could not help us, Mr. Murray. Your suggestions about the other book I will never forget, however. But I couldn't follow them. We found the model didn't work, and Mr. Brierley, the treasurer, said snow-storms were too expensive."
John remained cautiously silent. He wanted a tete-a-tete explanation, and the chance for this did not come till coffee was served in the library. She went to the corner where Miss Glendinning sat hunched up by pillows. She made room for him beside her.
"You must think me a fool," he said.
"The madness attributed to genius would explain everything," she suggested. "After that letter I feel sure you have a tremendous future."
"Please don't chaff. I am suffering horribly. I want to ask pardon for that letter."
"Well, I give it, though it certainly was startling, and so unkind. I asked for bread and you dug macarons at me. Tell me why and all about it. I'm consumed with curiosity."
She nestled comfortably among the pillows while John told the story, and showed the twenty-five cent piece. Her eyes, wondering, then comprehending and laughing, kept pace with the recital.
"Little Dora Coteau!" she said at last. "You must have wanted to shake her—almost as much as I did when I got the book. You see, I meant to go to Bermuda before this, and she wanted to be nice and entertain me. She has—far more than she dreams of."
"I might have known," said John with impatience. "but, curiously enough, that key to the puzzle did not occur to me once during this most uncomfortable evening."
"So you thought Dora was I?" she said with delight. "Oh, I hope she went in her brougham, and did she wear her sables? They're the finest in New York. I don't want you to have missed anything. You must have thought me very beautiful and very rich."
"Shall I tell you really what I thought?" asked John, leaning nearer, his smile meeting hers confidently. "I thought you an awful little fool."
The big ruby which graced the fourth finger of Hester's hand by the end of that winter was a dear and proud possession, but there was something else prized more—the twenty-five cent piece riveted to her little job. Only she and John knew why.—New York News.

 is used by the greatest skin specialists in the country. It is used in the Cook County Hospital, Chicago. It will clear away any parasitic break in the skin in from 5 to 60 days time. It is a medical triumph. In Eczema, Salt Rheum, Barber's Itch, Itching Piles and all skin affections, in the invariable success this local treatment proves it is a skin parasitic that causes the trouble and that it is not the blood that is to blame.
 D. D. D. clears it all away—absolutely and quickly, too.

Will Mark the Boundary.
 Six men, composing the Nebraska-
 pointed by the governors of those states, met at the Mandamin hotel last evening, organized themselves into a working body and talked over the task which they are expected to perform.
 The commission is composed of three members from each state. The commissioners from South Dakota are E.
 C. Ericson, of Elk Point; John H. Jolly, of Vermillion, and S. H. Dixon, of Sioux Falls. The Nebraska members of the commission are C. J. Swanson, of Oakland; F. O. Robinson, of Hartington, and E. A. Lundburg, of Wayne.
 The ever changing course of the Big Muddy is the cause of the appointment of the commission. In its cutting here and there along its course it has paid no heed to the lines of the survey made at the time the river was established as the legal boundary between the two states, but has everged back and forth with such disregard for all laws of man that the original boundary line has been practically obliterated.
 The territory in which the commission will do its work extends from the junction of the Sioux and Missouri just
 Above Fort Randall the river runs between hills coming close to its banks and so has no chance to vasillate in its course.
 So much trouble has resulted in both states from the uncertain boundary in the matter of ownership of lands, provision of school privileges in disputed territory and the capture of criminals on sandbars or islands, that the legislatures thought it time to determine, if possible, a suitable boundary.
 While the middle of the river is supposed to be the line between the two states, as a matter of fact the real boundary line is the line that marked the middle of the river at the time the original survey was made. Since that survey was made the river has so changed in its course that it now coincides with the original channel in but few places. The commission will spend about thirty days in looking up old surveys and the present condition of the river. Its report, when made, will have to be ratified by both the state and national legislatures.
 Last evening the commission elected
 E. C. Ericson chairman and E. A.
 Lundburg secretary. The commission will drive today into South Dakota as far as Elk Point, looking over the river on the way. The county surveyor of union county has been engaged to add the body in its work and will join the body at Elk Point. This surveyor is well acquainted with the river from Sioux City to Yankton and will be of great help to the commission. He has a copy of the original survey of the river besides numerous surveys which he has made in the past twenty years.
 The headquarters of the boundary commission will be in Sioux City.

Pioneers and Old Settlers.
 August 20 the third annual picnic of the Pioneers and Old Settlers Association was held in Bressler's grove, near town. It was a perfect day and the crowd was large, in fact larger than last year or two years ago and shows a growing interest in the movement.
 Prior to the grand picnic dinner the assembly was called to order and Rev.
 Binger made an invocation, Dr. Crawford read to the assembly sketches of his forthcoming history of Wayne county, selections were given by Reed's band, and the officers for the ensuing year were elected: H. H. Moses, president; O. F. Crane, vice president;
 B. F. Feather, secretary, and John T.
 Bressler, treasurer; and the register was opened to those who were eligible to sign as "pioneers," if in the county since 1880, and "old settlers," if in the county ten years past. At present there are about 75 pioneers registered and about 275 old settlers registered.
 The books are open in Mr. Feather's office in Wayne and the society extends an invitation to all who may wish to register as early as possible. The afternoon was filled with concert pieces by Reed's band, vocal numbers by Jules Lundbard and addresses by Rev. C. N. Dawson, Judge J. B. Barnes, Frank Crane and
 D. C. Patterson, all filled with good humor, stories and reminiscences. In the evening the concert at the opera house was the feature of the year musically.
 Director M. E. Reed was not well during the day, but under the appreciation of such an audience he was all animation in the evening and fellowery note that was expressed under his masterly direction. In Jules Lunbard we heard a national character, one whom we hope to meet again. The management may be congratulated up on securing these splendid attractions and that every dollar of expense was met by the sale of tickets and privileges. The Old Settlers Association is one that will grow in interest as it is a popular and a worthy organization.
 Dr. R. B. Crawford, the historian of Wayne county, has already written and prepared for publication 48 chapters of which 17 are descriptive and historical, 13 chapters biographical and 18 chapters accidents and incidents. If the further data which he is now seeking can be obtained he hopes to have the whole matter ready to put in book form within a year. We hope that as the foundation laid by the pioneers has been used by the later settlers on which to build one of the foremost sources of its age in the state, Dr.
 Crawford will make his History of Wayne County the best, and this he proposes to do. He urgently requests all pioneers and old settlers to aid him by sending in data of incidents connected with the settlement, and their biographical and historical sketches, that they may become part of the History.
