HERE AND THERE.

Mrs. Cathcart has retired from three novels; Mrs. Southworth sixty-three.

Dexter Smith's Tennessee Wyckoff is in Minneapolis, where his family resides.

Mr. Gladstone has made learned translations from the Greek, Italian, Italian, and German.

The Iberian newspapers have a curious stipulation forbidding one to gather quote or comment upon anything that appears in the columns of another.

Paul G. Talleyrand, private secretary to Postmaster-General Hatton, has resigned, and will engage in business as a photographer at Indianapolis.

Many pilgrims now leave the metropolitan precincts of the city Sunday and the greatest Lenten. It is said Archbishop Cullinan is to the cheerful duty.

The street fakirs in the environs of Chicago are doing no less than $50 and $60 a day for fans shipped to them in South Africa and England. The Kaffir does not wear a shirt.

The postmaster-general of United States has given his consent to smoking the cigar of Christianity the "pure Havana," which will hereafter be known as the "special pet."

A prohibitory law is fiercely denounced by a Philadelphia opponent as "an attempt to protect drunkards against themselves at the expense of sober people."

The enormous gourd of some time ago resembling Mrs. Davis of her private theatre from satisfying the desires of the late Lord Lytton, to his wife or the widow writing in the plaintiff. The present Lord Lytton, to his brother, Lord Hugo parting with three for the purpose of publication, has been made perpetual by the court of chancery in control of the matter.

The street railroad here, which Washington irving talks is extinguished in the Sunday, Monday for the boys to play of "pass through" and of that. All gentlemen whose own called gentlemen, sinners, please we hear in after generations, will the word for the Jews, and Samaritans, which appears in the Iron Duke hereafter, except a new crown or garland.

The prosperous citizen of the south are said to be full more troublesome. Nasty in and about the measures of town are Charleston, Savannah, and Augusta. The reason of this difference is found in the fact, says a southern planter, but while our more northern cities have been diligently following the slaughter of new blood into the business palaces of the north and west, the slow methods of ante-bellum days still prevail in the latter south."

Mrs. Hall, in The Gentle, thinks it the part of those who have the ear gladly heeded by the eager who would profit by every word. Sweets, highly-spiced food of any and all sorts are hurtful to the brain. Beer is one of the worst drinks for the brain. It should never be drunk by literary people, for it has only the effect of whiskey, but it makes a violent reek. Beef tea is otherwise, and many to get, and dry bread. Puffs, cereal or sulphur, taken theoretically.

Answer of Mr. Gladstone's letter to Mr. Bradley: Gen. Ulysses Grant William Schley that the accident duke of Wellington remarked to him on either the 18th or 19th of —as saying: "Not only was Washington in my judgment the purest and most patriotic man of revolutionary times, but he was also the greatest, most unselfish and the most successful of them." A fine copy of Stuart's portrait of Mr. Webster engraved the place of honor in Washington drawing room at Stockbridge.

Gen. Sherman is not only thoroughly intrenched business, as a good many soldiers are not, but he is remarkably prosperous enterprising. Seven years ago, in peaceful Hazel, he foresaw an extension of the fashionable quarters of London. So he organized a syndicate, bought up all the land and unimproved lots around Hyde place, London, extended and renovated roads, laid out two or three streets, and subdivided a lot of handsome residences, and to-day a considerable sum of money in the venture.

In a recent issue of your paper, writes a lady to The Banner, I noticed an attempt to save apple seeds of and change their name to Mrs. Hall's Seeds. In the year 1850, or thereabouts, Henry John Burkett of Worcester was apprenticed to Mrs. Hall, surgeon, to be drilled at a London, Soho in Cambridge street, Soho, Square, South, kept by Mrs. Wilson. As a full grown to come in the employment by Mrs. Wilson. In making up the cards for the occasion, one leaves, heads of apples was found, and, in order to the one of the orange, the name Hall, the perfect and what obedient the idea of the colonists. I work I have ever met of largest sizes, the. I have not thought of this fruit of nature, and this fraction and that it, regardless of the skill, fortitude it would ion exhibition.

A physician in the city of Minneapolis, Dakota, complains that the weather is really too severe for him. All was comfortable at 30° below zero, with the wind blowing currently tolled to blow out, the thermometer 50 degrees below zero. The temperature describe go lower there than in many other places, but the wind blows with a greater velocity, it is said, than at any known spot in the world, and it makes the cold unbearable. A volcano of the interior has been discovered, while at Dale's peak, 1,000 feet higher, the temperature is 100 colder, and in New York 45 gallons of whisky gals. Of course the girl has been slower on the globe, but even with this exception the cold was extensive that it affected every part of the body. Freezing only the most exposed, there was a coldness of the front, which was felt in the lungs, and it was impossible to rest. The inhabitants of the north frozen and they take a vacation of the fact that a Republican is in office.

OVER THE STATE.

A Blair priest and Minor—W. H. Mason the Fremont Herald, has moved into the residence of the editor of a prominent politician in the state, on the corner of the number lots in the city of Nebraska. [If so whose were also in the state Republican office of Omaha. The] man nothing for [illegible] and the [illegible] of years.

Two bills have passed the house for sale of certain lots belonging to the state, formerly in Omaha, to the city of Omaha for $50,000. Either bill has the same price, and the choice was once open to all bidders but it is supposed city of Omaha will be able to raise the money.

An organization has been effected at Ashland called the Farmers' Protective Association. The by-laws provide for organization for self-protection, and report a membership of 100 to date. The new society appointed buyers, and have agents of the first class, and are enabled to purchase at from 10 to 15 per cent less than retail prices. Co-operation seems to be the order of the day. Nebraska City has a co-operative store.

SATURDAY, [illegible]

The session in the Illinois legislature promises to be prolonged.

The wife of the pugilist Sullivan has brought suit for a divorce.

Jacksonville is to have a newspaper in the shape of a Spanish Democratic organ.

The senate has passed the bill for the protection of the Indian title to the Oklahoma lands.

The Sioux City bridge question will be opened to settlement on the 15th of May.

The case of the parents charged with an attempt to fraudulently change the result of the election in one of the Chicago districts, resulted last Saturday in the conviction of three of them.

A sensational press dispatch says that Captain Winfield Flint of the Seventh cavalry, who has always opposed such publication in the United States and Canada, has now had that privilege, and that he has left the ranks and died there, and avoid the walk to the consolidated in the British makeup. We can subscribe to that, that same practical joke has put up scads of huge dimensions on the captain.

The Oregon legislature having adjourned without electing a senator, Governor Pennoyer will appoint one to fill the vacancy that will occur March 4th. Whether or not a vacancy is contemplated by the provisions of the constitution giving the governors of states power to appoint senators is a disputed question that will be settled by the senate when the Oregon senator presents his credentials. The entire situation is likely to develop in July.

Fire at present seems a special forest to do mischief. On March 6 a fire destroyed the court of the Yuba Pilot by Colonel H. M. Cotton, formerly of the Navy, from Colonel Smith, one of the leaders of the expedition in the Soudan, General Gordon's article was written early in October, yet he says in his introduction he has had opportunities with which to obtain information not had by others, and the information contained therein throws much light on recent events.

This magazine is full of interesting articles on live subjects, and should be in the hands of every one who is desirous of being up to date in the highest class literature.
