George Clark left on Monday afternoon for Washington, D.C. to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Every paper in Northeast Nebraska who has had representatives at the National Association of Manufacturers has received their share of the good will of the delegates.

The College Commencement of 1897 is a thing of the past. The students have received their diplomas, and the delegates have left on their way home.

The year has been a bright prospect for the institution and its graduates.

DEMS DISAPPOINTED

FAIL IN EFFORTS TO DISCREDIT THE DINGLEY LAW

Disappointment is expressed by the Progressives and Democrats in the fact that the Dingley Law has not been successfully attacked.

The Dingley Law, which imposes a duty on the importation of certain goods, has been the subject of much discussion.

The effort of the Democratic leaders to bring the measure before the House has failed. The Dingley Law is now in effect.

The Progressives and Democrats had hoped to see the law repealed, but their efforts have been in vain.

STORY OF THE SEA.

Tale Told by the King of the Good Ship Teak.

When I was young, the sea was a mystery to me. I had heard of it from my father, but I never saw it. One day, when I was ten years old, I went with my father to the wharf. He was loading a ship, and I saw the sailors at work. They were strong and healthy, and they seemed to enjoy their work. I was curious to know what they did, and I asked my father. He told me that they were sailors, and that they went to sea in ships. I was fascinated by the story, and I decided that I would like to be a sailor when I grew up.

My father was a sailor, and he told me that he had been to sea many times. He said that the sea was a wonderful place, and that there were many adventures to be had. I was so interested in his story that I decided to go to sea with him. I was only twelve years old, but my father said that I was old enough to go. I was excited and nervous, but I was determined to go.

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have been the pestle that served that vile little tool, so to be used in the mortar. The pestle is the result of wood, but the pistol is the result of iron. The pestle is the result of the hammer, and the pistol is the result of the hammer. The pestle is the result of the hammer, and the pistol is the result of the hammer.
