Hanse has a real thrower in that machine that seems to have an insatiable thirst to smash plate glass fronts out of the Leader store and such a second mishap through one of them about a week ago. This is the second occurrence of the kind within a month and no clue to the perpetrator.

Fort Pearson, lying in the Welsh settlement south of Randolph, met with a very severe accident Monday night. While attending to his horses one of the animals fell on him, breaking his leg below the knee in two places. Both of the local physicians was called and he is now doing nicely.—Randolph Enterprise

Quite a great many persons that a short time ago looked at the idea of the prices of horses ever advancing again, even to a very moderate degree, are now advising and beginning to realize that they made a mistake and that we are now at the commencement of a horse famine that will increase in severity for the next five years.

We desire to call your attention to the advertisement of the public sale of Geo. Hoelgel as it appears elsewhere in this issue. Mr. Hoelgel has rented his farm and is going to dispose of his personal effects. It will probably be almost the last sale of the season and the last opportunity to get bargains, as he has good and valuable stock.

While Henry Albers living north of town in Wayne county was celebrating with one day this week, he made a discovery that was very painful for his friend and John Nahor, who was celebrating both at the same time. In some way Albers caught Nahor's thumb instead of the hand which they intended to shake and the celebrating Albers promptly set the subject to thought as smartly as a rattlesnake and would have done the job with the same advantage.

While among the best paper factory in the country with your gentle reader, we spent some time with about it and we have almost concluded that there is a decided set of humans that pretend to know as much if not one to certainly one good enough for us. It is no less conclusive to rapidly as could be desired but the boys are pegging away and assuredly they will be able to get a thought at home that is what those of us who are but just on here to be taught, but there you know great occasions give great notions are not performed in a day. We know that our country can grow the beets and that good people are asking to do so and we believe that if persons who understand the culture the manufacture of sugar from beets, when plenty of capital back of them, should come into our midst and show they could produce their sweetness and sell that the business could be made a profitable one.

The commissioners were all in the city last Friday in consultation with the gentlemen of S. H. Hiscell and it is to be hoped that an understanding can be arrived at and the matter be adjusted satisfactorily to all concerned and useless expense be avoided. The bondsmen are the unfortunate parties that respect to be sued and now have to foot the bills and we believe all will be glad to see them let out of the matter as early as possible not inconsistent with the interest of the county, because it is the duty of the commissioners to see that its interest are protected

The Winside Tribune is quite ably presenting to its readers reasons why the county should have a new court house and to its last issue takes a most sensible and the only correct view of the matter and that is, that the whole county is the interested in having a good substantial building for that purpose and that the burden should fall alike on all for the same. It most holds that if the people of the city of Wayne desire to make of the building one that will be highly ornamental and attractive, that they should pay for that portion themselves and to this we believe scarcely a dissenter will be found in the city. However we do not believe that the people of the city of Wayne desire a highly ornamental building but all they desire is a substantial, modern structure costing not to exceed $50,000 and if such a building as will meet the needs of the county can be erected for a less sum they will be satisfied. There may be a few who pay very small taxes desirous of putting up a $50,000 structure but these are surely in the minority and they talk should not be given very much consideration. Why a county needs a court house and a jail is badly and the time will never be when she can build one more cheaply than today, and we believe the people are ready to vote sufficient to carry on the work

The Wayne Democrat says Judge Norris' new lecture is on "Material Man," and the Randolph paper says it is "Immortal Man." But we shall have to take the Randolph papers for it rather than the one which has not yet heard Charles A. Dana is dead.—Wakefield Republican. The Randolph paper is eminently correct.

For the first time in our history the banks now buy auction sale notes at par, the same drawing ten per cent per annum. They used to be discounted as high as 6 per cent.—Dr. E. S. Blair, of Wayne, assisted Dr. Desmore in a surgical operation at the latter's hospital in Randolph last Monday.—Wakefield Republican.

Casper E. Yost, president of the Nebraska Telephone company has also been elected to the same position in the Iowa Telephone company and will hereafter have jurisdiction over the principal telephone companies of both Iowa and Nebraska. The announcement is made in a dispatch to the Sioux City Tribune that among the extensions which are outlined for this year is another new line to be built from Norfolk to Hoskins, Wisner, Wayne, Wakefield, Emerson, Hubbard, Dakota City and Sioux City.—Norfolk News.

There is considerable interest being manifested in the electric light scheme for the city and on the voting of bonds for the same and it is not all in favor of bonds and municipal ownership either. Quite a good many are of the opinion that the city cannot afford and be sufficient to build and operate the plant and believe that it will not be self sustaining and also that the bonds cannot be sold at par and fear that the only way they can be utilized will be to trade them to some parties for building the plant and they knowing they will have to discount them in order to realize cash will place the price of what they sell at such high figures as will exhaust them and leave the city with a plant not fully completed or one inadequate to do the service expected of it. They also point to the fact that the taxes of the property in the city is now over 7 per cent of the assessed value of the property and that here would be another bit of expense put on the taxpayer that would have a tendency to drive foreigners away instead of attracting them to us. Of course the advocates of bonds and city ownership do not concede that there is grounds for these fears and seek to show that instead of the plant being a burden it will lighten the taxes in that it will not only be self sustaining but will turn into the city treasury a nice little balance each year. The question is one on which every voter ought to seek all the information it is possible to get and then vote as he believes to be for the best interest of the city.

Wayne entertained five tourists on the Allendale on Friday. The were Raymond Tracy, Ed Chessun, Ole Arrel, T. H. Woods and — Flynn. Messrs McEwin, Fair and Middleton of Bloomfield also joined them and Pender and Oakland each furnished two members while the different towns on the Elkhorn east of Norfolk furnished enough to raise the number to forty persons, all told, that left over the Union Pacific on that night for Seattle and thence to the land of the gold and gold.

The original Tennesseans that are billed for this place on next Tuesday evening March 15, need no word of praise from anyone where they are known as they are without exception one of the very best companies before the public. We trust our readers will show their appreciation of the Monday Club ladies in their endeavor to give them a really first class entertainment. The profits of the entertainment go toward buying new books for the public library. This is the first time in six years the ladies have had to ask the library part of their entertainment and asked the public for assistance toward it—it is one of the essentials of the town—and the Monday Club hope the public will show their appreciation of it by liberal out. The club wants to put in about 100 new books and some money is needed to do it, and they have procured the best colored company to visit ever heard in the state. Every one who comes will be highly pleased and while the most fastidious cannot be satisfied yet, the fun loving will be more than made happy!

ASKS LEE'S RECALL

SPAIN'S REQUEST IS PROMPTLY REFUSED.

Others Suggest Also Lodge Must Be Sent the Spanish Cabinet to United States Warships, Which Also Receives a Negative Reply

Spain Makes Two Requests.

Washington, March 7: The Spanish situation developed two new phases today. When it became known that the Spanish government had formally requested the recall of General Gathral Lee at his post at Havana, with which request the United States had continuously per demptorily refused to comply. Also the Spanish government had suggested the impropriety of sending relief supplies to the Cuban reconcentrados on the cruiser Montgomery and gunboat Nanshville, to which suggestion the United States has given a like answer in the negative.

The first indication of these steps came in a brief and explicit cable dispatch from Madrid. Prior to its receipt, however, the situation had been practically canvassed with the details, although its intimations had been allowed to get to the public on either subject. The disclosures from Madrid left no further room for speculation in Washington and started public notice at the White House talking. The president with Secretary Day at his side in executive session, and Secretary Long of the navy department, the following day, shortly after the latter's arrival from Key West of one of the naval vessels, deliberated upon the situation. Their conclusion was announced by Judge Day, as corresponding exactly with that was to be said by the administration on the subject.

The president will not consider the call of Gen. Lee. He has borne himself throughout this crisis with judgment, dignity and courage, to the president's advantage.

As to the supplies for the relief of the Cuban sufferers, all arrangements have been made for the sailing this week from Key West of one of the naval vessels. Substitutes may be best adopted and most available for the purpose, to Mitanzas and Sagua."

Beyond the foregoing there was had promulgated in the conference at the White House at the close of the session, which it was stated positively that the authorized statement comprised everything that would be given to anyone.

TAKEN TO JOLIET.

Engineer Eugene Hie 15th Montanan in the Illinois Penitentiary.

Alpheus L. Lentgert was taken to the penitentiary at Joliet, Saturday, to which he was sentenced nine days ago for the term of his natural life. Lentgert received with a smile the command to prepare for the trip to Joliet and left Chicago in apparently excellent spirits. He was followed by the shouts of many of the jail prisoners, who shouted their good wishes to the departing man. The latter responded by Julius Whitmark alone. He seemed at first to be glad of the release from jail and laughed and joked at his way to the train. He was quiet, however, when Joliet was reached, and broke down when the prison gates closed upon him. He sat in the prison office with tears rolling down his face, unable to say a word.

FATAL PITTSBURG FIRE.

One Woman Perishes and Three Others Perhaps May Die.

One of the most exciting fires the Pittsburg (Pa.) department has ever been called upon to fight occurred Sunday night, when one woman was suffocated and five other persons so badly burned that three may die. Three families were housed in a two-story building, the flames being eaten away by flames while they slept. The building is a three-story brick tenement old and shaky. The fire started in Harry Brady's sleeping room, in the rear of the first floor. It burned through the floor and up the stairway, and in a very short time the building was in flames. Only lightning like work of the incoming firemen prevented a tenement house fire.

TO MOBILIZE AN ARMY.

Plans Mapped Out for Transportation of 100,000 Soldiers.

A Washington special to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat on March 2 says: Notwithstanding the secret label in peace millinery, the quartermaster general has managed to obtain the plans for the mobilization and transportation of 100,000 soldiers, with arms, equipments and supplies. The quartermaster general's office of the war department is known to have projected plans and contracts for transportation of troops by rail. Various officials of the railroads that may be called upon for the furnishing of cars, engines and freight carriage have been consulted and have made their reports.

The plan of operation assumes two features. One is the defense of the harbors and coast cities. For this about 15,000 of the regular army will be removed. These will be supplemented by such of the militia volunteers as may be available. In addition, a competent reserve of militia and volunteers will be held as supposed. This is the mode of defense.

The offensive plan contemplates the immediate mobilization and shipment of 100,000 men to some southern point, Atlanta, Ga., is the focus. From thence troops will be shipped to New Orleans and Mobile. No more than 10,000 regulars will go with this army.

That railroad official says that with two weeks' notice the railroads would be able to transport 500,000 men to any point desired as a base by the government.

TRADE IGNORES WAR TALK.

Has No Perceptible Effect on the Business of the Country.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Matter of the most recent past, the subservient economic power of these days is only worth full, affected speculation if shorter trade week before last and 4½ cities last week, but they have not weathered the industries and the trade of the country at all. There is confidence that the situation are doing wage at present prices for public defense and business is moving on with the assurance that it will not be seriously disturbed. Iron, grain, cotton, meat products and petroleum markets have been dizzy with gradual increase in the demand for high-advanced products. Failures in February have been smaller than in any of the six months, except three of the previous five months, with a remarkable decrease in the liabilities of $400,000 or over, though it is now and almost the smaller failures show less change than might have been expected, indicating that in good times or in bad a large proportion is due to causes apart from the general condition of business. Wheat has grown stronger, exports continuing at a rate which threatens exhaustion of supply, if trade reports of farmers' sales are correct. Failures for the week have been 224 in the United States against 208 last year, and 42 in Canada against 31 last year.

LED TWENTY YEARS' POPL

Occasion Celebrated at the Fastest Family Table in Pontiac.

The twentieth anniversary of the coronation of Pope Leo XIII. was celebrated Wednesday at the Vatican. His holiness, who is in excellent health, received the congratulations of the high prelates in the throne room, replying in a strong voice. He received the communications upon the occasion of his ascension and pontifical anniversaries and proclaimed against the outrages which have allowed to be committed on those occasions, adding that it was pitiable that the exploitations of the faithful towards Rome, the sacrilegious meetings and the attempts of divine outrages, should be virtually encouraged. But, continued his holiness, in order to recompense the piety of the devout people, God has increased the love of the pontificate for the people in Rome and throughout the entire world.

Dread Malady Is Due to the Variable Character of the Alaskan Climate—Fifteen Succumb to the Disease in One Day.

Advices from Alaska bring further details of a fearful epidemic of cerebro-spinal meningitis now raging in Skaguay. The disease is caused by cold winds from the mountains coming in contact with the sea breeze which is reported to have very little pain. They are taken down one day with slight pains in the head and through the body, becoming unconscious that night, and dying the next day. In most instances they are buried in Skaguay cemetery. A number of victims of meningitis died on the train after leaving their cabins and up toward the summit. ### BARTLEY'S BONDSMEN WIN.

State Will Appeal the Case to the Supreme Court.

After a long, tiresome and dusty case at Omaha, the jury in the case of the state against the bondsmen of ex State Treasurer Joseph Bartley returned a verdict for the defendants. The amount of the shortage for which Bartley was convicted is the penitentiary for twenty-one years was $361,000. The jury was out three days. The contention of the defense was that the money was never lost to the state, as it stood on deposit in small state banks which would fail if the funds were withdrawn, hence it is impossible to attempt to recover. The opposition holds that Bartley squandered the money in various living and speculations.

Both Cases Stacked Wrong.

The supreme court of Colorado recently handed down a decision favorable to a set of resolutions brought to compel the Nebraska City Stone & Lime Co. to pay the Fitzsimons & Connell Dredge Co. for the stone used in the construction of the state capitol building. The decision was rendered on the ground that the contract was let by the state board of public lands and buildings and the board of purchase and supplies to pay over the money appropriated for the purpose to the respective parties entitled to it. In both cases the court decided that the wrong kind of an action had been brought. The law in the premises leaves the money in possession of the state, but does not give their any state money for its support.

A large, broken pistol, probably weapon used by the burglars, was found on the floor and nothing was missing from the office except a few loose stamps and pennies. Two unopened packages of registered mail were also left in the safe. The stamps and pennies were found in their possession, but they stoutly deny their guilt.

The State University exhibit at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition will occupy a space of 1,220 square feet. It will represent the work of twenty-two departments. # QUIET ON THE SURFACE.

Warlike Spirit of the People Has Somewhat Subsided.

TALK IS NOW LESS HOSTILE.

Verdict of the Naval Board Is Patiently Awaited.

Two Weeks May Elapse Before Official Reports Are Made on the Maine Disaster. Belligerent Congressmen Claim the Silence Is Ominous—Meantime Uncle Sam Will Be Prepared for War.

The naval court of inquiry in the case of the ill-fated battleship Maine is proceeding as a court martial and is keeping its proceedings to itself. The Secretary of the Navy says that he has no information to give to the public, that he knows nothing of the character of the evidence taken, or the opinions or conclusions of the board of inquiry. What is more to the point, Secretary Long indicates that he does not expect to know anything about how the Maine was destroyed until the board of enquiry makes its report, which may be not for two or three weeks. With such positive assertions from Secretary Long, there can be nothing but speculation in Washington as to what the verdict will be. There is plenty of speculation and little of it runs in line with the warlike theory.

In the absence of anything news from Havana over has been a noticeable cessation of the war talk in Washington. The conservative attitude of the President has reflected in Congress, and members who first would listen to nothing but war are now disposed to wait patiently for the arrival decision by the court of inquiry. Members of Congress say a Washington correspondent, are gradually coming to see that there is no course open but to wait without any assurance on their part, and that if an outside explosion is proved and no indemnity demanded Spain would doubtless certainly refuse it and thus justify the President in interfering actively to preserve peace in Cuba. It is said at both the State and Navy Departments that there is no disposition to delay the publication of the finding of the board, but it is more than likely that it will probably the board will merely present the facts and say that they are too vague to make a positive declaration one way or the other.

The contingency will produce some complications, but it is probably this which has led the President to say positively that there is no immediate prospect of any war between this country and Spain, for if the board of inquiry is not able to reach a positive finding it will be correct large officials for the State Department to foreshadow any kind of a demand upon Spain. The President will not precipitate the country in a war unless the facts are such as to justify him in the eyes of an overwhelming majority of the people, as fully realized, however, the strained relations between the two countries and the fact—is possibly if not probability of a dangerous feeling which could only be settled by a show of force on the part of this country.

The President's course and belief is proper to be understood in any way with the understanding in the army and navy to put the armed forces of the country into a condition for active service. It is also authoritatively announced that this is the source of preparation rather than the prevention of war and that the preparations will continue until all possibility of actual war has been dispersed.

So far as the general public is concerned the war scare has subsided, for the present at least. There may be more excitement after the report of the court of inquiry on the Maine disaster is received, but it may not be easy to stir the country up again. Besides it is now pretty well understood that it is going to take a long time to get at the facts. Secretary Long foreshadowed as much when the schooner at Havana, in which the statement was made that as the result of the investigations inside by the divers within the wreck it has been evident deliberately. The writer explained that the vessels of Havana harbor is so foul the divers cannot see their way about and have to depend upon the sense of touch. It is understood that some of the better men are pessimistic as to the outlook for getting at the actual facts.

At least it is going to take time to overcome the truth, and the country will have need of all the much of patience. The court of inquiry will return to Havana to be present after the wrecking operations have been started. Although no official news concerning the movements of the court has been received, the authorities think the court will need at least two weeks, and perhaps a much longer time, for completion of its work. This inquiry, the naval observers say is too important to be pushed through. Too much depends upon its verdict. Most serious is the responsibility which the members of this court have assumed. As high-minded officers they are naturally eager to acquit themselves with credit. The basis of war for or more between nations may depend upon their verdict, and this is no trifling matter to be reached through haste. All the investigation the court has so far been able to make in Havana was of a purely preliminary character. The members will now have to carefully and patiently watch the wrecking operations for further evidence.

Secretary Long does not profess to believe in the accident theory as he did for several days after the Maine was blown up. Other members of the cabinet believe, as does Secretary Long, that the ship was blown up by design. The experts in the navy also believe this, or now profess to believe it, but they will await facts before expressing positive opinions.

Retained in the Service.

It may be confidently asserted, however, says a well-informed Washington correspondent, that nine out of every ten members of Congress believe there is a deep significance in the seemingly distant motion of the administration in regard to the disaster. They believe that President McKinley and the members of his cabinet are not so much in the dark regarding the information secured by the court of inquiry as is believed by the officials at the time, and that there is method in their silence. Many of the members are startled at the idea that the President is acting so fast, and that every effort is being put forward to make preparations for war. Other members believe that the President has received word from the court of inquiry that the explosion was an accident and that he is taking measures to both to appease that the court is making a rigid examination and deliberate investigation in order that no one may be relieved that a snap verdict was returned.

It is believed by some that Spain is preparing the way to counteract any finding that the battleship was blown up by accident. With the wreck sinking deeper and deeper into the mud of the harbor, it may be difficult to prove any assertion to the contrary. It has been asserted by Spanish lawyers that there were mines in the harbor.

COULDN'T FIGHT US.

SPANIARDS WOULDN'T HAVE A GHOST OF A SHOW.

What Uncle Sam Could Do in Event of War—Ready to Fight or Shed Nation Would Swoop Cuba and Speedily End the Struggle.

Military Campaign Outlined. Washington correspondence:

WHATEVER the Spanish populace may think the Spanish rulers know that Spain would be powerless to endure a successful war with the United States. This country has "got the men, got the ships and got the money too." Spain hasn't. The United States has a population of 70,000,000 and Spain has a population of 13,000,000. The United States is one of the richest countries on earth, Spain is practically bankrupt. Our squadron of the United States navy (the North Atlantic) is as perfect in strength to the entire navy of Spain.

By the Spanish system of naval organization what is reckoned by the Americans and English system as a first class cruiser is called a battleship. Thus the Vizcaya and the other ships of the class are known to the Spaniards as battleships, but by the British and American standard are only first class cruisers. Spain has only six ship which would be reckoned as battleships by the standard as a battleship regarding calibre, British and American standards. That is the antiquated Pelayo, rating as a first class vessel. In comparing the naval forces of the two countries this difference in classification should be borne in mind. According to the Spanish system Spain has eight battleships to our five, while according to our higher standard we have six battleships to her one, and that one "too good."

With its regular army and organized militia the United States could put into the field immediately an army of 150,000 men, and the full fighting strength of the "reached" militia which might be called upon in case of need, would be over 10,000,000 men. The army of Spain on a war footing is about 200,000 men.

In order to send to Cuba the 200,000 men with which she has been threatening for unanswerable war there she has been obliged to resort to conscription and has sent out regiments composed of mere boys. Her legitimate military resources are established and in the event of a big war a large "on account" of all that is left her. This, she realizes, would give her 1,000,000 men. But even if there were but 200,000 comparatively between the powers of the two nations Spain would still be at tremendous disadvantage in trying to carry on war across 3,000 miles of ocean against an enemy within easy distance of its base of supplies.

The transportation and maintenance of troops in large numbers in a distant country is an undertaking fraught with difficulty and involving a large drain on resources. To maintain a peaceful force of available 2,000 miles from home in close operations equivalent to double even a small force.

The supplying of food, medicines and military stores for the Spanish army in Cuba has been found so difficult and expensive that Spain has been obliged to buy a considerable extent by purchase in the country. In case war with the United States no further supplies could be from this country to the Spanish army and in case of war Spain would be obliged, if it is difficult in times of peace, what would it be with armed merchant men and swift cruisers prepared to head off the steamers of the United States. Spain's navy could never catch on a great and powerful sufficient cruisers for convoy duty at the same time. The United States could easily land an expeditionary force in Cuba. The one way which Gomez-ring's republic fatal there is ground of by a strong expeditionary force joined with the army of Maximo Gomez would soon win the island.

Therefore the backbone of the United States are fairly well protected with modern ports armed with modern ordnance, and there if Spain should elect to make trouble for us. The Spanish old, at some undefended point, succeed in effecting a landing, any force which they could send from a fleet would be speedily overwhelmed. Then there is the United States fleet, which could both help to the defense of the coast and operate against the Spanish possessions in the West Indies.

If the Spanish fleet came to the coast the American fleet would meet it off the point it aimed at and in all probability annihilate it. If the Spanish fleet concentrated in the West Indies, the North Atlantic squadron could meet it there and try the enforcement of battle in those waters. If the Spanish fleet split part coming to the coast and part going to the West Indies, the American navy would be able to move rapidly enough to assist the force and the land forces in the protection of the seaboard, and could concentrate superior fighting force against the part of the Spanish navy left in the West Indian waters.

Here it is that our available vessels in the Atlantic. The battleships Indiana, Iowa and Massachusetts; armored cruisers New York and Brooklyn; second class battleship Texas; the cruisers Detroit, Marblehead, Montgomery, Essex, Atlanta, Cincinnati, San Francisco, Columbia and Minneapolis; gunboats Newark, Vesuvius, torpedo boats Porter, Foote, Dupont, Cushing, Ericsson and Winslow, and the monitors Amphitrite, Terror and Puritan.

Meantime, in the Pacific ocean the United States has the battleship Oregon, and the cruisers Olympia, Boston, Raleigh, Petrel, Baltimore and Bennington, the coast defense vessel Monterey and some old vessels. A portion of this force only would be necessary for a descent upon the Spanish possessions in the Philippines, where the insurgents are still in the field.

All this is giving Spain the benefit of every doubt as to her ability to make a fight. The probability is that there would be only one naval fight, and that a short one, off the harbor of Havana. Then it would be all over.

The most effective force that Spain could send over would consist of the armored cruiser Emperador Carlos V, Infanta Maria Theresa, Vizcaya, Almirante Oquendo, Carolina, General Concha and Princesa de Asturias. It takes 8,400 tons of coal to give these seven ships their normal coal supply. The fleet would run up to about 8,400 tons in getting across the Atlantic. To coal three times while operating on this side of the water would take 25,200 tons. Where is Spain going to get that amount of coal?

The coal with which the supplies for blockading fleet now in Cuban waters comes from Philadelphia and New York. She has little coal stored in Havana and has never had enough to the cover all and in Cuban ports. Spain herself gets her coal from England. She could not supply it to her transatlantic fleet. In case of war with the United States the coal to maintain her fleet on this side of the water would have to come from Scotland. How? coal is a necessity of war, and a British ship carrying coal to the Spanish fleet would be liable to capture. That same coal would get by the fleet from England is undoubted, for there are now a blockade yet. On the contrary which was capture is effective. But it is also a fact that enough could not escape the vigilance of American cruisers to keep the Spanish fleet supplied, and when it did get through would cover the Spanish Government enormously.

If war should come between Spain and the United States, the Government would be able to move in the field of naval and military operations with a celerity, a completeness of organization, an effectiveness which would astonish the world. The army of the United States is now practically on a war footing. Not only have our fighting ships been equipped with ammunition and fully manned, but every possible preparation in the way of supplies and opening of lines of communication has been made. Our naval authorities know now, and have known for months, just how quite vacant position may be established to various parts of the West In-

CANNOT INSPECT MEAT

Federal Officers Deprived of Their Power by a Decision in Court.

By a decision handed down by the United States District Court at Kansas City, Mo., by Judge John C. Rogers at Fort Smith, Ark., the entire system of Government inspection of meat was declared unconstitutional. The opinion of the jurist is to the effect that Congress has no authority to create the office of meat inspector and to place such an office in the packing houses in the United States to examine the product before it is packed and stamped or delivered for consumption.

The opinion was handed down in the case of a man named Harry Boyce, who was indicted by the Federal grand jury on the charge of attempting to bribe a Government meat inspector. Boyce is foreman in the fresh meat department of the Jacob Dold Packing Company. The court holds that Congress exceeded its power in creating the office of meat inspector and that even if Boyce had attempted to bribe such an official he could not be held to an offender. His act, the court decided, was not a crime against the Government. Under this decision the packers of this country may disregard the meat inspection statutes with impunity.

EIGHT-HOUR LAW IS UPHELD.

Important Supreme Court Decision on a Case Appealed from Utah.

In the Supreme Court at Washington an opinion was handed down in the case of E. V. Holden vs. the sheriff of Salt Lake County, Utah, upholding the constitutionality of the territorial law fixing a day's work in smelters and mines in the territory at eight hours.

Mr. Holden was arrested for violating the law and was sentenced to imprisonment. He brought the case to the Supreme Court on an appeal to secure a writ of error on the ground that the law was unconstitutional in that it was in relation to deprive a citizen of life or property without due process of law. The court held that such was not the case, but that the law was an exercise of the State's police powers.

Justice Brown said in passing upon the question that it was not the intention of the court to pass generally upon the constitutionality of eight-hour laws, but that in so far as State laws were asserted for the protection of the lives, the health or the morals of an unusually class, they could be no doubt of their propriety or of their constitutionality. There could be no doubt of the exceptional and unhealthful character of work in smelters or others, because of bad air, the heat, the noxious gases, and hence the wisdom of the State legislature. The decision of the Supreme Court of Utah was affirmed.

RATE IS CUT 836

War Begins Between American Roads and Canadian Pacific.

There are dollars was clipped from the passenger rate on the line between Chicago and Seattle and other points on the coast points Monday morning. The rate hereafter will be $51.50. Up to that day the authorized charge was $87.50 on the all-rail route of the Northern Pacific, while steamboat transportation it had been as high as $81.50. The cut, therefore, is one of more than 50 per cent.

The reduced charge will be put into effect until the warfare between the American lines and the Canadian Pacific is settled, either by satisfactory agreement or the backing down of one or the other interest. Passengers for points beyond Seattle are accordingly bright, for American lines are determined to make the fight a bitter one and the Canadian Pacific shows no signs of weakening.

The rate of $31.50 will be applied through Omaha, Kansas City and other Missouri river gateways, as well as through St. Paul. Through Missouri river cities, however, the rate charge will be said on the rebate plan, purchasers being obliged to deposit the regular rate, $67.50, with the agent who sells the ticket, at Seattle, $36 will be refunded in Omaha. There no more persons traveling together may secure their tickets via the Missouri river gateways at the flat rate of $31.50. Through St. Paul the rate will be sold at the flat rate of $31.50.

Washington, Newport, Vicksburg, Annapolis, Castine, Bancroft and Helena; gunboats Vesuvius, torpedo boats Porter, Foote, Dupont, Cushing, Ericsson and Winslow, and the monitors Amphitrite, Terror and Puritan.

Meantime, in the Pacific ocean the United States has the battleship Oregon, and the cruisers Olympia, Boston, Raleigh, Petrel, Baltimore and Bennington, the coast defense vessel Monterey and some old vessels. A portion of this force only would be necessary for a descent upon the Spanish possessions in the Philippines, where the insurgents are still in the field.

All this is giving Spain the benefit of every doubt as to her ability to make a fight. The probability is that there would be only one naval fight, and that a short one, off the harbor of Havana. Then it would be all over.

"Madalise," she said, at last, "no one has a greater respect than I have for the bonds of husband and wife. I mean for the good faith and confidence there should be between them. In days gone by I never spoke of your poor father's faults—I never allowed anyone to mention them to me. If any of the neighbors ever tried to talk about him, I would not allow it. So, my darling, do not consider that there is any idle curiosity in what I am about to say to you. I thought you were so happily married, my dear; and it is a bitter disappointment to me to find that such is not the case."

There came no reply from Lady Arleigh; her hands were held before her eyes.

"I am almost afraid, Sentry as I love you, to ask you the question," Margaret continued; "but, Madalise, will you tell me why you do not live with your husband?"

"I cannot, mother," was the brief reply. "Is there, tell me, dear,—is it my fault or yours? Have you threatened him?"

"It is through no fault of mine, mother. He says he himself."

"Is it from any fault of his? Has he done anything to displease you?"

"No," she answered, with sudden warmth, "he has not indeed, he could not, I love him so."

"Then, if you both are displeased each other, and really love each other, why are you parted in this strange fashion? It seems to me, Madalise, that you are his wife only in name."

"Alas, mother—and I shall never be any more; but do not ask me why—I can never tell you. The secret must live and die with me."

"Then I shall never know it, Madalise?"

"Never, mother," she answered.

"But do you know, my darling, that it is wearing your life away?"

"Yes, I know it, but I cannot alter that fact. Ask, mother," she continued, "as you are in good health and live together, you must never mention this to me again."

"I will remember," said Margaret, kissing the thin, white hands, but to herself she said that matters should not continue. Were Lord Arleigh twenty times a lord, he should not break his wife's heart to that cold, cruel fashion.

A sudden, terrible shame to Mrs. Dorcham—that would go to Hectorgrove and pen him herself. If he were weary and sore her away from Wilmtree House, it would not matter—she would have told him the truth. And of the truth that she had told him was that the separation was slowly but surely killing his wife.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Margaret Dorcham knew no peace until she had carried out her intention. One day she invented some excuse for her absence from Wilmtree House, and started on her expedition, strong with the love that inspired the weakest heart brave. She drove the greater part of the distance, and then dismissed the carriage, resolving to walk the remainder of the way—she did not wish her servants to know whither she was going. It was a delightful morning, warm, brilliant, sunny. The hedgerows were full of wild roses, there was a faint odor of newly mown hay, the sweetest of all sounds, the song of birds filled the air.

As Margaret Dorcham walked through the woods, she fell deeply into thought. Almost for the first time a great doubt had crossed her, a doubt that made her tremble and fear. Through many long years she had clung to Madalise—she had thought her love and tender care of more consequence to the child than anything else. Knowing nothing of her father's rank or position, she had flattered herself into believing that she had been Madalise's best friend in childhood. Now there came to her a terrible doubt. What if she had stood in Madalise's light instead of being her friend?

Suddenly her face grew deathly pale, her lips grew white, a terrible cry, her own name repeated, fell from her lips, her hands as one who would rain ward off a blow, for, standing just before her, looking down on her with stern, indignant eyes, was the stranger who had interested his child so.

For some minutes how many she never knew they stood looking at each other—he stern, indignant, haughty, she trembling, frightened, cowed.

"Have you no words?" he said, at length, in a harsh voice.

Cowed, subdued, she felt on her knees at his feet.

"Woman," he cried, "where is my child?"

She made him no answer, but covered her face with her hands.

"Where is my child?" he repeated. "I intreated her to tell me where she?"

The white girl opened, and some feeble answer came which he could not hear.

"Where is my child?" he demanded. "What have you done with her? For heaven's sake, answer me!" he implored.

Again she strove to speak, but words could not catch; and he bent over her. If ever in his life Lord Mountdown lost his temper, he lost it then. He could almost, in his impatience, have forgotten that it was a woman who was kneeling at his feet, and could have MEANT her until she spoke intelligibly. His anger was so great he could have struck her. But he controlled himself.

"I am not the most patient of men, Margaret Dorcham," he said; "and you are trying me terribly. In the name of heaven, I ask you, what have you done with my child?"

"I have not injured her," she sobbed.

"Is she living or dead?" asked the earl, with terrible calmness.

"She is living," replied the weeping woman.

Lord Mountdown raised his face reverently to the summer sky.

"Thank heaven!" he said, devoutly, and then added, turning to the woman—"Leave and swift!"

"No, not well, but she will be in time. Oh, sir, forgive me! I did wrong, perhaps, but I thought I was acting for the best."

"It was a strange best," he said. "To place a child beyond its parent's reach."

"Oh, sir," cried Margaret Dorcham, "I never thought of that! She came to me in my dead child's place—it was to me as though my own child had come back again. You could not tell how I loved her. Her little head lay on my breast, her little fingers caressed me, her little voice murmured words of love to me. She was my own child—I loved her so, sir!" and the poor woman's voice was broken with sobs. "All the world was hard and cruel and cold to me—the child never knew all the world disappointed me—the child never died. My heart and soul clung to her. And then, sir, when she was able to run about, a sweet, graceful, loving child, the very joy of my heart and sum total of my life, my doctor died, and I was left alone with her."

She paused for some few minutes, her whole frame shaken with sobs. The earl, wonderfully, spoke kindly to her.

"I am quite sure," he said, "that if you erred it has been through love for my child. Tell me all—have no fear."

"I was in the house, sir," she continued, "when the news came that my darling had died in his sitting room with my—with little Madalise—and when I saw the commotion that followed upon his death I thought of the papers he used to sign, and, without thinking, I went to my desk, and took a sad list it under my shawl."

"But tell me," said the earl, kindly, "why did you do that?"

"I can hardly answer how now," she replied—"it is so long ago. I think my other motive was dread lest my darling should be taken from me. I thought that if strangers opened the box and found out who she was, they would take her away from me and I should never see her again. I knew that the box held all the papers relating to her, so I took it deliberately."

"Then, of course," said the earl, "you know her history?"

"No," she replied, quickly; "I have never opened the box."

Never opened it! he exclaimed, wonderingly.

"No, sir. I have never even touched it; it is wrapped in its old sheet just as I brought it away."

"But why have you never opened it?" he asked, very wonderingly.

"Because, sir, I did not wish to know who the folks that really was, sir, in discovering that, I should discover something also which would compel me to give her up."

Lord Mountdown looked at her in astonishment. How woman she was what new full of contradictions! What strength and weakness, what honor and dishonor, what love and selfishness did her character exhibit!

"And my daughter you say is living, but not well? Where is she?"

"I will take you to her, sir," was the reply, "if you will only follow me."

"I will not keep you a minute," said the earl, hastily. "Is it time, Mrs. Dorcham, that you knew my name, and my daughter's also. I am the Earl of Mountdown, and she is Lady Madalise Charlewood."

CHAPTER XXV.

On hearing this Margaret Dorcham was more frightened than ever. She rose from her knees and stood before him.

"If I have done wrong, my lord," she said, "I beg of you in pardon me—it was for the love I bore the child, for the child whom I loved and cherished was a grand lady after all!"

"Do not let us lose a moment," he said —"Where is my daughter?"

"She can not be more than here, but we cannot walk the distance—it too great," replied Margaret.

"Then we are near to the town of Lynton—I'll be bound," Lord Mountdown said; "we will go to a hotel, and get a carriage. I can hardly endure this suspense."

They reached the principal hotel at Lynton, and Lord Mountdown called hastily for carriage. Not a moment was to be lost—time pressed.

"You know the way," he said to Margaret, "will you direct the driver?"

He did not wait for her to answer, he daughter Lived. If she was married or single, what did he care or anything else. All one thought was that he had found her, never to lose her again.

He sat silent, face shaded by a hand during the whole of the drive, thanking heaven that he had found Madalise's child. He never noticed the woods, the hills, the beautiful country through which they drove with the service of Sherwood; he did not even recognize the picturesque, quaint old Dower House that he had assumed so greatly some little time before. He saw a thing only—his child. He never answered to him to ask whether his daughter was mistress or servant; he only knew that the carriage had stopped, and that very shortly he should see his child. Presently he found himself in a large hall gay with flowers and covered with lofty carving, and Margaret Dorcham was trembling before him.

"My lord," she said, "your daughter is ill, and I am afraid the agitation may prove too much for her. Tell me, what shall I do?"

He collected his scattered thoughts.

"Do you mean to tell me," he asked, "that she has been kept in complete ignorance of her history all these years?"

"She has been brought up in the belief that she is my daughter," said Margaret —"the truest nothing else."

"It was wickedly unjust," he said, "cruelly unjust. Let me go to her at once."

Pale, trembling, and frightened, Margaret led the way. It seemed to the earl that his heart stopped beating, and a thick mist was spread before his eyes, that the singing of a deep sea filled his ears. Oh, heaven, could it be that after all these years he was really going to see Madalise's child, his own last daughter? Very soon he found himself looking on a picture framed in golden hair, with dark blue eyes, full of passion, poetry and sorrow, sweet crimson lips, sensitive, and delicate, a face so lovely that its pure, matchless beauty almost overpowered him. He looked at it in a passion of wonder and grief, of love and longing; and then he saw a shadow of fear gradually darken the beautiful eyes.

"Madalise," he said gently; and she looked at him in wonder. "Madalise, he repeated.

"I—I do not know you," she replied, surprised.

She rose from, when he entered the room, on a little couch drawn close to the window, the sunlight, which fell full upon her, lighting up the golden hair and reflected faces with unearthly beauty. When he addressed her name, she stood up, and on like her mother did she appear that it was with difficulty he could refrain from clasping her to the arms. But he must not frighten her, he observed—he saw how fragile she was.

"You call me Madalise," she said again —"but I do not know you."

Before answering her, Lord Mountdown turned to Margaret.

"Will you leave us alone?" he requested, but Lady Arleigh stretched out her hand.

"That is my mother," she said—"she must not be sent away from me.

"I will not be long away, Madalise. You cannot desire to wound the gentleman unnecessarily, my dear, do not let it appear you."

Mrs. Dorcham retired, closing the door carefully behind her, and Lady Arleigh and the earl stood looking at each other.

"You call me Madalise," he said, "and you speak of a mother. What can you have to say?" A sudden thought occurred to her. "Has Lord Arleigh ever you to me?" she asked.

"Lord Arleigh!" he repeated in wonder. "No, he has nothing to do with what I have to say. He does not, he do not know anything—and I will tell you why I am here."

He never answered to him to ask why she had named Lord Arleigh. He saw her pale, half exhausted, half frightened, upon the couch, and he sat down by her side.

"Madalise," he began, "will you look at me, and see if my face brings back no dream, no memory to you? Yet how foolish I am to think of such a thing. How can you remember me when your baby-face rested on me for only a few minutes?"

"I do not remember you," she said, gently—"I have never seen you before."

He started, then, as if returned to a home so full of tenderness and pain that she was startled by it, "this is hard!"

"You cannot be the gentleman I used to see sometimes in the early house that I only remember, who used to amuse me by showing me his watch and take me out for drives?"

"No, I never saw you Madalise, as a child—I left you when you were three or four days old. I never saw you since, although I have spent a fortune in order to ascertain."

"You have?" she said, wonderingly. "Then, who are you?"

"That is what I want to tell you with out startling you. Madalise—dear heaven, how strange it seems to utter that name again! You have always believed that you were the only child that quitted the room to be your mother?"

"Yes, always," she repeated, wondering.

"And that wretched man, the reputed, you have always believed to be your father?"

"Always," she repeated.

"Will it pain or startle you very much to hear that you are not even distantly related to you—that the woman who has only chosen as your foster-mother because she had just lost her own child?"

"I cannot believe it," she cried, trembling violently. "Who are you who tells me this?"

"I am Robert, Earl of Mountdown," he replied, "and, if you will allow me, I will tell you all."

"Tell me," she said, meekly.

"I am your father, Madalise—and the best part of my life has been spent in seeking for you."

Ned Buntline's Escapade.

I suppose that every man, woman and child in the United States has read at least one of Ned Buntline's stories of adventure, escapes into or see brigandage. Ned was a prolific writer, and for many years his tales were immensely popular. A little while before the war, when Ned was a resident of Nashville, he had trouble with the editor or one of the Nashville papers on account of his author's rage. The two men met in the street, knocked down and pummeled; then Ned fired. The editor dropped dead in the tracks and Ned was arrested by a great crowd for a lamp-post execution. The rope was also in running and he escaped. The Nashville City Hotel was kept by Hon. Cave Johnson, jumped in front of a shed in the rear slid down the precipice into the Cumberland River, and Nashville knew him no more.

Revenge is the sweetest thing in the world. Ned Buntline never was seen in Nashville after his escape. The great Cumberland river ran down to Clarksville, in Montgomery County and when he struck the water and that of Tennessee of his feet the State of the "Buntline" had lost all attraction for him. But he appeared somewhere. He wrote a play; many stories, and the villain in every one is Nashville man. Nashville blushes today when she thinks of the last number of her citizens who have been ventilated by Ned Buntline—one of her best people, whose name was known all over the State. Col. Edward F. C. Judson.—New York Press.

Edward Everett Hale said in a lecture on the old streets of Boston the other day: "An old Bostonian regards the straight checker-board streets of other cities with a contempt which is not to be described, while the people of other cities claim Boston was laid out by the cows."

FORTUNE FOR TELEPHONE GIRL.

SADIE HOLMES, of San Francisco, has been a telephone girl in San Francisco for eight weeks, her father's reverses of fortune having forced her to earn his own living. But now fortune smiles, and she is known as Lady Strathcona and has a fortune of $1,000,000 and an estate in Wales. "It's like a fairy story." Lady Strathcona said, when asked for details. "The property belonging to Lady Jane Strathcona, who died two months ago, passed to my father at her death, by reason of the English law of entail. This was not unexpected, but what my father did not know, until we informed by the London lawyers, was that the title and that portion of the estates that is in Wales passes to the eldest daughter of the heir. I am papa's eldest daughter, so you see I am the fortunate one."

This brief but comprehensive explanation was fully corroborated by the statements of Mr. Holmes and by documentary evidence in the shape of a bundle of formal legal papers that were received from London Lady Strathcona is 23 years of age and very pretty.

The Humiliating Bath.

It is not infrequently said that daily bath is weakening. This is such a great mistake that it is difficult to understand how it is ever made. A daily bath is just as necessary to bodily purity as daily prayers are to well spirits, and it should be as conscientiously taken. In some places, and at some time that cannot be specified, this observation has come to my notice, and its truth made its impression a lasting one. "A lady confines not to get clean, but to get clean to be clean." That remains too long in the bath may be weakening. But a quick bath in either very warm or even hot water, followed by a cold dash, has only good effects. A refreshing and practical bath is one in moderately hot water with a little soap in it, a good sponge, and a coarse, strong-spun white soap, a sponge and a coarse-cloth washing. These cloth is both practical and cheap, at the same time sufficiently rough to remove all dirt and not rough enough to scratch.—Woman's Home Companion commands impressive and her pictures have been so full of the ragged poetry of the streets that they have won for her the title of "artist-lessons of the street arab." In all her pictures there is a record that impression on the real and sympathetic.

Determined to be a Widow.

Miss Ida of Rochdale recently married a red flower as a substitute for her betrothed, who died before the wedding day. He was a son of Sir Isidore Hedaya, vice-chancellor of the Imperial academy at Pekin. The young woman, having determined to marry no one else, adopted this means to enter and henceforth a family and so be treated as a widow. The people of Rochdale are talking of holding a mock-ark to commemorate Miss Ida's virtues.

Advice about Nothing.

It evidently makes no small difference as to what a woman ate, says a publication which claims to be authority on culinary topics, if she would make well long enough between meals to get hungry, but she doesn't, and there's where the trouble begins. Nature is a tremendous old joke. Given the time, she will digest and assimilate almost anything that she is once fairly to. Unless a woman wastes or works for a living she doesn't need three meals any day of her life. It takes systematic work to consume that much food. Dieticians are too clever to fill the furnace with coal unless there is a trip to make, an elevator to run or work to do. It doesn't matter what a man does like as long as he is decent and healthy but it is the duty of every good woman to be as good looking as her circumstances will permit. Women often ask these advice only ill and brutal.

Working Girl's Great Chance.

"The average home holds out a far more comfortable time, a more beautiful life, a healthier existence, and better wages, than does the office, store or factory to an intelligent girl or woman," writes Edward W. Bok of "The Working Girl's Chance," in the Ladies' Home Journal "The same time devoted, for example, to the study of sweetness or housewifery, if given to the study of nursing or domestic service, would mean twice the income to a bright, steady girl. Unfortunately girls will not see this, and thousands of them will continue struggling through an existence in the outer world, which could have far more comfortable lives and better wages in excellent homes. How the average girl can deliberately shut her eyes to the opportunity which fairly glares upon her as a good maid, cook, companion or housekeeper, of any more pretentious average comprehension. There has never been a time when mistresses were readier or more willing to pay good wages for good domestic service—wages compared to which the pittance paid in shops or factories sinks into insignificance. And, on the other hand, the salaries of women in positions, as recent statistics plainly show, are gradually on the decrease because of the willingness of hundreds of girls to work for a mere pittance. Every business house has to-day waiting lists of scores or hundreds of applicants while hundreds of homes cry out for intelligent domestic service."

The "Company" Room.

A young housekeeper, in planning her furnishings should regard the care of her delicately wrought before she decides upon its fittings, advises the New York Post. If it is to be a reception-room pure and simple, it should take on the look of formality which belongs to such an apartment. If not, it is to be a reception-room and family best room besides, little touches of use are indispensable. Where only one room can be devoted to the combination use of reception room, parlor and perhaps family sitting room also, the scheme of furnishing would be very different from that which begets a suite of three rooms to be devoted to these respective purposes. Rare skeleton may fine the walls to the height of 6 feet, perhaps, and at such materials as are needed to store rare library the first time bring solid and durable, not of character that will stand exposure to light and air. The rugs and hangings must be of the same order, and if this quality of wear is taken into consideration there is no reason why the room may not preserve its freshness to the point of reception formality, even in the smallest flat. The trouble is that the inexperienced furnisher buys for such a hybrid room the dainty bric-a-brac and light silk and enameled furniture that are sold under the general term of parlor furniture. Then looking to the formal reception they proceed to let the apartment suffer consideration.

Teacher for Sixty Years.

Miss Charlie S. Edgar of Rahway N. J. has been a teacher for sixty years in the Sunday school of the Second Presbyterian Church of that place. Recently the officers and teachers remembered the event and presented her with a gold engraved resolution reciting the good work she has performed, and expressing the esteem in which she is held by the community.

A WORD OF ADVICE

To Those Coming to Alaska or the Klondike Gold Fields.

One thing should be impressed upon every miner, prospector or trader coming to Alaska, to the Klondike, or the Yukon country, and that is the necessity for providing an adequate and proper food supply. Whether procured in the States, in the Dominion, or at the supply stores here or further on, the trust be his primary concern. Upon the manner in which the miner has mastered or neglected this precaution more than upon any one thing will his success or failure depend.

These supplies must be healthful and should be concentrated, but the most careful attention in the selection of foods that will keep unimpaired indefinitely under all the conditions which they will have to encounter is imperative. For instance, no food cooked with baking powder must be relied upon for the chief part of every meal, imagine the helplessness of a miner with a can of spoiled baking powder. Buy only the very best kind; it is the cheapest in the end. Experience has shown the Royal Baking Powder to be the most reliable and the trading communities now uniformly supply it a brand, as others will not keep in this climate. Be sure that the bacon is sweet, sound and thoroughly cured. There are the absolute necessities upon which all must place a chief reliance, no one could be circumstanced to be neglected. They may, of course, be supplemented by as many comforts or delicacies as the prospector may be able to pack or desire to pay for.—From the Alaska Mining Journal.

A book of receipts for all kinds of cookery, which is especially valuable for use upon the trail or in the camp, is published by the Royal Baking Powder Company, of New York. The receipts are thoroughly practical, and the methods are carefully explained, so that the inexperienced may with its aid, readily prepare a tempting repast for a good, wholesome meal, or even dainties if he has the necessary materials. The matter is in compact though durable form, the whole book weighing but two ounces. Under a special arrangement the book will be sent free to miners or others who may desire it. We would recommend that every one going to the Klondike procure a copy. Address the Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.

A panelled indian maiden stands on guard in back of a stream in Yellowstone Park. The spot is near a pretty little lake within sight of the Lake Hotel, which is visited every year by hundreds of people from all parts of the globe. For three a small stream flowing between two hills into the river. But it is one day. Use went from the door to Fresh in front, three miles from the shore.

After considerable trouble P. Jay Tarcos of St. Paul succeeded in taking a photograph of the maiden. The picture shows the Indian to standing on the hills, with the left arm extended upward, the right arm to close to the side, and the legs are in the position she would assume when taking a step forward. All the Indian stands in the picture as a well eight feet high. The figure not a natural height, for first and foremost, and the feet. The feet weighs six pounds.

In hotter weather fevers with the exception of the newly planted seeds grow in most shaded places. It is therefore essential that they never dry out and that they be kept in partial shade. It is not wise however to soak the plants during weather needed at last. The Tide of Travel to Alaska.

Owing to attractive rate now existing between Seattle and Portland and Alaska, via Seattle, the tide of travel to Alaska will be very large this season. Several other vessels are being completed, and all are booked for full capacity. The Queen will run to St. Michael and the Yukon. The Alaska steamers run directly from Seattle and Portland, but principally from Seattle. Seattle is 500 miles nearer Alaska than San Francisco, and this makes the shortest travel from the west coast straight to Seattle. The rate quoted in booklet has reason, on purpose of reaching a year of popular comfort. The purpose of this book is to show to the workmen of gold seekers passing through Seattle and give them all the information necessary to avoid looking for a pass as well enable the pilgrims to get through as comfortably.

The increased travel to the far west has made the transcontinental railroads on their profits. That for instance, the Great Northern Railway, which is the shortest and quickest line from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Seattle and Portland. The latest development in this line is a fast train, the Alaska Limited, which, leaving St. Paul daily at 5.00 p. m., after the arrival of trains from Chicago, and the north and east, runs solid to Seattle, Canada, that point on the third morning at 9 o'clock. Berth and a half tickets in advance of all previous schedules. A Spokane it connects with the N. P. & S. Ry. Co. and, that fine sailing great Northern steepers and tourist cars. This across the continent train is constructed throughout, and includes the finest modern has palace sleepers and family tourist cars, a dining car serving meals a la carte, and a library observation car, which is the favorite lounge of the elegant club, with library, writing desks, bath rooms, barber shop and big windows for the outlook. In every respect the train, a equal to the best on the best railway lines.

The action of the Times has watched the growth of the Great Northern with much interest. It is the only road that runs across the full width of the Northwest, and has never figured in the speculations of Wall Street. The Great Northern is entitled to full consideration from the traveling public, and excellent service is guaranteed. Time 58 Via Daily Times, Feb. 11.

The Russian did not complete the construction of the under the 1,000 feet of the Cuban Cangos but the first such it put adjournment pending it could to Mr. Hoote in Manila. the return of the naval committee, who were authorized to recess adjournment for the full period to the time for the relief of the victims and survivors of the Maine. About twenty years of the 1,000 feet were disposed of. Many days were required to secure the necessary signatures and to get them into the files. Three of these days, however, consisted of appropriating $500,000 for the Mississippi River Commission, and increasing the appropriation for Boston harbor from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 were adopted. An entirely new bill, under the rules, had to be introduced, under the rules. Then on the great part of the Senate passed the Right of Way Bill. Called to a seat from the Pacific Coast, a member of education Mr. Thurston (Nebraska), in an extended speech, opposed the admission of Mr. Quay, while Messrs. Burrows (Mich.) and Hawley supported the Pennsylvania claim. The pension calendar was cleared by the passage of several private pension bills. A few bills of a general character were also passed.

Henry W. Corbett was on Monday confirmed as minister to Japan by a senate vote. Mr. Corbett was elected senator for this state by a vote of 51 to 39. The Senate began consideration of the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill, and had not completed it when it adjourned. The House passed the sundry civil appropriation bill after four days' debate. The appropriation for representation at the Paris Exposition was passed over as a point of order. The sudden change of sentiment which is often witnessed when members go on record was twice illustrated on Friday in the House, to equality of the whole, where there is no record of the vote. Knocked out a provision in the bill for an appropriation to pay those in the Cornish-Augustine contest, notwithstanding the recommendation of the violators of the internal revenue laws, and in committee an extra month's pay was voted the employes of the House. When the sundry civil bill came back to the House, however, both of these proposed items were promptly defeated.

The House entered upon the consideration of the Land bill relative to mineral claim and matters, on Tuesday. The bill is identical with the measure passed by the last Congress, but Mr. Loud gave notice of an amendment permitting the examination at any time of mineral claims upon which not more than 25 per cent of the purchase money has been paid. An interesting speech on the tariff was made by Mr. Cox, (Tenn.), in opposition to the bill, and Mr. Perkins (Rep., Iowa) in favor of it. The Senate passed a resolution for erection of a bronze tablet to the memory of the victims of the Maine. The Bankruptcy bill and the Alaska homestead and right of way bill were debated.

Wednesday's debate in the Senate on the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill was finished. Mr. Carter (Mont.) delivered a vigorous speech in reply to that made by Mr. Hawley (Utah) in the course of which he made a strong defense of the honor of Congressional committees and of officials in the several departments charged with the execution of the laws. Several features of the debate was a speech delivered by Mr. White (W. Va.), in which he explained that the Canadian Pacific Railway is controlled in the main by American interests, and how and why the agreements of that great railroad ought to be accepted by the United States. The House spent the day in debate upon the Land bill, relating to mineral claims and matters. The speeches were quite attended little interest. The speakers were Messrs. Brodhead (Pa.), Olmst, and Dolph (Dem., Ga.), in favor of the measure, and Messrs. Bell (Colo.), Bowers (Rep., Md.), Clark (Dem., Mo.), Rice, Neg., Ohio), and Tawney (Dem., Minn.), in opposition to it.

In the Senate on Thursday the House amendments to the bankruptcy bill were non-concurred in, and Messrs. Hoar, Nelson and Edmunds were appointed as senate conferees. During almost the entire session the debate on the Alaska homestead and railway right of way bill. One of the features of the discussion was a speech delivered by Mr. Vest, in which he replied to the idea of homesteading any part of Alaska or constructing railroads in that section. His amendment to exclude the homestead privilege at the mouth of the Yukon and the Sound was defeated. The amendments to the conference investigation of the mineral lands of the peninsular of Lake City, S. C., was referred to the Committee on Commerce. Senator Pettigrew, of S. D., introduced a bill to extend to ex-soldiers and sailors of Seattle, Wash. In the House the Land bill to correct mistakes in some of the several claim and entry public laws of the United States, was passed by a vote of 202 to 110, the ability of Pennsylvania joined with the Democrats and Populists in overwhelming this bill. It now goes to the Senate. Very early in the session of the Fifty-fifth Congress Mr. White (Rep., N. C.), the only colored member of the House, asked unanimous consent that there was taken appropriating $1,000 for the family of the unnamed late Gen. Orlando Poe, which was objected to. It will be taken up again on Friday.

MRS. PINKHAM CONQUERS BACKACHE.

Four Women Owe Their Present Happiness to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you last June, I was not able to do anything. I suffered with backache, headache, bearing down pains, pain in my lower limbs, and ached all through my body. Menstruation was very painful. I was blessed a mother. You advised your advice and now am well and stronger, and able to do all my own housework. I took medicine from a physician for over a year and it did me no particle of good. I would advise all suffering women to write to Mrs. Pinkham. She will answer all letters promptly, and tell them how to cure those aches and pains so common to women. Mrs. J. F. WEST, Marysville, Texas.

I think it is my duty to write and let you know what your medicine has done for me. For two years I suffered with female weakness, bearing-down pains, headache, backache and too frequent occurrence of the menses. I was always complaining. My husband urged me to try your Vegetable Compound, and I thank God I have taken three bottles and it has made me feel like a different woman. I advise every woman that suffers to take your medicine and be cured. Mrs. GARRETT LEONTY, 618 N. Prince St., Lancaster, Pa.

I had suffered for over two years with backache, headache, dizziness, prostration, falling and ulceration of the womb, leucorrhœa, and about all the pains a woman could have. I had tried doctors, but with no success, and it seemed as though death was the only relief for me. After using three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and four packages of Sanative Wash, I am well. Have had no more pain, or any trouble. Backache or headache. Mrs. CLARISSA HARLEY, Cream Ridge, N. J.

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was afflicted with female complaints so that I could hardly walk. My back ached terribly at times, I could not sleep, and was so nervous that I could hardly keep still. I tried all over. Was not able to take anything on account of the time. I had no appetite and was so nervous that I could hardly sleep. I have taken but two bottles of your Compound and feel like another person, can eat and sleep to perfection. In fact, am perfectly well.—Mrs. SUE MCCLELLAND, Athol, W. Va.

SMUT IN WHEAT AND OATS.

Bureau of Agriculture, Feb. 27, 1890.

To the editor of the Journal:

I learn through some of my correspondents that they observe a development of the smut fungus attacking the growing grain, in some cases to a destructive degree, and that you would perhaps like a statement of our methods for prevention in the future. The new method, by which we control the smut of grain, was discovered by Prof. Jensen, of Copenhagen, and is now in general use in Europe. It consists in treating the seed grain with a solution of formalin, or formic aldehyde, which is a gas dissolved in water. The strength of the solution is one pint of the commercial formalin to fifty gallons of water. The grain is soaked in this solution for about twenty minutes, and then dried, when it is ready for sowing. The cost of the treatment is about one cent per bushel. The machine we use for treating the seed is a modification of the Bordeaux mixture machine, which is in use by many farmers for spraying potatoes. The seed is put in a tank, the solution turned on, and the machine set in motion, when the grain is thoroughly mixed with the solution. The machine is then stopped, and the grain allowed to soak for twenty minutes, when it is shoveled out on the floor to dry. It is then ready for sowing. Some of the machines in use for spraying potatoes have been found to work very satisfactorily in treating the seed grain. The solution will keep indefinitely in a tight cask, and may be used over and over again. Full directions for preparing the solution and treating the seed grain will be published in the bulletin of the Department of Agriculture, which will be ready for distribution about the first of March.

Respectfully,
J. STERLING MORTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.
