As Mrs. [illegible] was driving into town Saturday the [illegible] of the buggy broke when she was just [illegible] and frightened the team so that they started up [illegible] put [illegible] the buggy and [illegible] the [illegible] was holding fast to the lines [illegible] the dashboard when they got loose and ran a few rods farther when they were caught. Mrs. [illegible] was somewhat bruised [illegible] of the tumble, but was not seriously injured.

It is estimated that during the life of an ordinary person they consume a peck of dirt. We do not believe the estimate will hold good as to the users of water from Wayne's [illegible]. If the appearance of the outside of the [illegible] which is [illegible] since the city has been [illegible] the [illegible] and pumping the [illegible] to [illegible] of the [illegible] one of the [illegible] of the [illegible] states.

It cannot be done. No man ever [illegible] who can take up his editorial pen and please all men, nor do we intend to try. No [illegible] who ever [illegible] a [illegible] sensible to edit a newspaper. He may be close to the [illegible] age, he may even be an angel. If it were possible, but about one edition of his paper would be issued when he would run [illegible] with the real thing—with these [illegible] people whose [illegible] to be out of place on [illegible] they are in somebody's [illegible] business.—Grand Island Independent.

In railroad circles there is a belief prevalent that the close relations of the Northwestern and Union Pacific may soon be severed as a result of the building of the Illinois Central into Omaha. The capitalists owning a controlling interest in the Central also own a controlling interest in the Union Pacific, Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, Oregon Shortline, Chicago & Alton and the Baltimore & Ohio. They have grown tired seeing the [illegible] western traffic of the Union Pacific turned over to the Vanderbilts at Omaha and go east to the seaboard over their lines to the exclusion of the roads in which the real owners of the Union Pacific are interested and it is believed the [illegible] family will be [illegible] there.

[illegible] the only [illegible] Wheeler Day' at the Greater American exposition in August as an attraction to help draw a crowd when every well informed person knows that General Wheeler is on his way to the Philippines and cannot and will not be at Omaha as advertised. This is only one of the many [illegible] advertisements sent broadcast over the land and a management that will resort to such [illegible] lying methods to attract persons to the exposition will rob the victims when once within their grasp. It is the [illegible] of desperate people and deserves the [illegible] that is bursting from all sides.

Of all the mean, despicable, God-forsaken, hell-deserving creatures that cumber the earth with their mean presence, the most contemptible, mean, vile and worthless, is the wretch, or being, who will use the name of a lady in such a manner as to cast reproach or stigma upon her character. Such creatures may have been put upon earth for some purpose, but it is certain their usefulness has never been made apparent. The devil most certainly neglects his duty in not compulsorily indulging in a roundup here on earth and claiming his own. Earth has no use for such people, hell is their home, and the devil should take care of his family. This not only applies to the individual who does so directly, but to the one who will circulate a report that some one else has done so, for the purpose of gaining the other fellow [illegible].—[illegible] Tribune.

It is probable that many a time when a fair [illegible] he will ask her to accept his [illegible] his promising future and his [illegible] that she is really yearning for a [illegible] little longer and for some [illegible] offers [illegible].—Cattlemen's [illegible].

Mrs. Wm. Mears of Wayne came up Monday and remained until Tuesday noon for a visit with the "Kids." [illegible] has been appointed by the governor as state insurance examiner. Tom will be a good man for the place, and his many friends here as well as elsewhere will rejoice over the position going to a man that has proven himself worthy in every respect of the [illegible] given him by the governor of the great State of Nebraska.—Cedar County News.

Here is the way the Ponca Journal says the democrats and populists have fixed matters in Dixon county—the agreement was reached at a meeting of the central committees of the parties [illegible] was decided to hold the county conventions at the same time and place, [illegible] at [illegible] on September 22 and a basis of division of the offices was agreed upon by the committees [illegible] to the [illegible] for their ratification. This provisional agreement provides that the populists shall be represented on the county ticket for the offices of treasurer, sheriff and judge and the democrats shall have the balance of the places."

If the only hope of success of the republican party in Wayne county lies in a course of [illegible], in being afraid to call upon county officials to perform duties as required by law and to not having the courage to condemn abuses that result in increased taxes, then indeed it is in a sorry predicament and deserves to [illegible]. We have faith to believe that the conscience of the voters of this county has not become so corrupted and morally degraded as to have reached any such level and that instead of that they are heartily in favor of having the affairs of the county properly administered and that they do not care who the official is that is found not living up to the high standard of their expectations, they are ready to see him, or her, or the party that endorses their course go out of power. The Republican has stood up for the administration of the affairs of the county in the manner the tax and the people who pay the bills expect they shall be conducted, and not as the [illegible] of those who think it highest province of an official to do as little as possible and absorb all the funds in sight for the performance of that little. It has no excuse to offer for the course it has pursued and it does not believe that either the interests of the republican party or the community in general demands that it change its course in the least.

He stepped into the bucket and has a faint recollection of holding hard at the rope. The man above shouted and asked Mr. [illegible] if he was ready, but receiving no response, pulled him out the rope having fortunately twisted about his hands, which no doubt saved his life as he was unconscious when taken out and remained so about [illegible] minutes before he revived.

Madison Chronicle: The fusion hosses had better keep their eye on Editor [illegible] of the Wayne Democrat, for every once in a while he grows over the [illegible] and tells about the return of prosperity, just as he does in an account of a visit he made to Winside, in which he says: "[illegible] the [illegible] we found hard-eyed [illegible] in business, setting up binders, buggies and wagons. Marshall [illegible] talked about taking a trip out west or to Paris to get rid of his surplus wealth. Walt Gaebler was so busy selling hardware that he scarcely had time to talk a little politics. The afternoon passenger continues to be a mixed train—hogs, cattle and human beings all go on the same train—the stock getting the preference of place in the train's makeup. How the road manages to have any passenger trains at all, except local, is a query to us for generally the most disgusting thing to a traveler is a long weary wait at a way station with the thought constantly haunting him that he will miss some important connection. As a matter of fact Wayne people ought not to kick on these waits of hours for the branch train to get in, it gives the traveler passing through a golden opportunity to take in the beauties of our city and country from a position between Philleo's lumber yard and the stock yards and affords them the one opportunity of a lifetime to breathe in the lifegiving ozone of this grand climate as it comes to them laden with the fragrance of the yards to the south. Sometime all these things will be different and then we will all mourn for the good old times, when those lengthy stops of the passenger and hog trains will be but a reminiscence.

The A. O. U. W. lodges of Northeast Nebraska will hold a [illegible] picnic on the fair grounds at Wayne on Wednesday, August 21. Congressman [illegible] of the Fourth district, Grand Master Workman [illegible] and other prominent speakers are expected to be present. It is thought that about [illegible] lodges will participate. F. P. [illegible], deputy Grand Master Workman, is endeavoring to get enough members and their families from Norfolk lodge to occupy a special car and attend the picnic.—Norfolk News.

Beaver stockmen: It is purely a business proposition with the rangemen—this matter of holding back their shipments this year until such time as the stock has received the full benefit of the [illegible] grass. Nobody is suffering, however. There is no meat famine. But when the stock does begin to move the market will get the best line of feeders from the west that it has ever gotten. In this connection it might be well to state that by the west is meant Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Nevada, Montana and Oregon.

Considerable speculation is being indulged just now in the cattle trade as to where the fall and early winter supply of heavy feeders is to come from. A long list of letters from correspondents, cattle breeders, raisers and shippers, over a wide range of country, indicate an undoubted shortage of steer cattle, 1,000 pounds and upward, suited for immediate entry in the feed lot. Correspondents everywhere report plenty of 600 to 800 pound cattle, but all queries with respect to the supply of heavy and fleshy feeders weighing 1,000 pounds and better elicit replies confirming what is now quite the general belief: that the available proportion of such cattle is decidedly small and far short of the usual number on hand and of the number which will in all probability be required to meet the demand from farmers during the coming fall and winter. It appears from general information available, that not only is the supply of "native" feeding cattle of suitable weights short, but that the ranges will also turn out a smaller proportion of such cattle than in former seasons. The past two years prices for beef and feeding steers were sufficiently high as to tempt range owners into selling off their steer cattle at a younger age than usual, and the result will, it is stated, be noted this fall in the small supply of feeding steers. The scarcity of heavy feeders, it is said, is maintained, and there appears little reason to doubt such a condition, will be the cause of the feeding of steers of a younger age and will also make farmers strong competitors with the packers for larger steers.—Exchange.

"Yes, you must go. But I am very sorry, Dick. Don't you remember we were to have gone together to hear the nightingales sing? However, we will go to-morrow," she added. "To-night I will run only to the soldiers' hut and listen for ten minutes. There is sure to be a nightingale singing in the shrubbery."

Mr. Chelford and Dick both being absent, Miss Gray, with Netta and Bella, joined Caroline and Mabel at dinner, and they were all merry save Caroline, who had never been merry since her accident, but even she smiled now and then.

[illegible]

Dick gone—Dick! Then she must do what she had to do alone! And perhaps it was best so, after all. Was it not more fitting that she, who had lost all that life had to offer, should be the one to make the discovery? Yes—yes, so let it be.

"If I can only live through to-morrow!" she exclaimed, as she sat crouched against the bed. Without a thought, however, of [illegible] As those precious [illegible] of peace and of [illegible] happiness had [illegible] before her, now her horizon was bounded by the thought of being through the morrow.

Presently she rose, secured her door, lighted a taper and unlocked her desk. Lovingly she took out Neville's treasured letters and kissed them, and then went to a cabinet in which she kept the presents that her betrothed had made her. They were costly and beautiful—several books handsomely bound; a diamond pendant, which had belonged to his mother; a lovely suite of pearls—necklace, eardrops, ring and pendant; a sapphire brooch and bracelet; some glittering Indian ornaments and other jewels.

[illegible]

"Fifteen—thousand—pounds!" fell slowly from the lips of Mabel's father.

"Fifteen—yes, that's the figure," laughed the other man. "Well, how much of it am I to have to-night?"

"The utmost I can do is five thousand down, and, to scrape that together, I have [illegible] John Chelford, and [illegible] You must see that I can't do more," said Mr. Chelford, [illegible]

"When you have to compose a bill that I want," rejoined the other, with a disagreeable laugh, low and distinct, like his utterance.

"You were willing a little while ago to take ten thousand, and now you demand fifteen," exclaimed Mabel's father.

"Yes, now I demand fifteen! Moreover, I mean to pocket it! You've kept me waiting, you see, and, besides, you are about to be connected with a man who cannot count his gold. Of course I increased my price, as you would have done in my place."

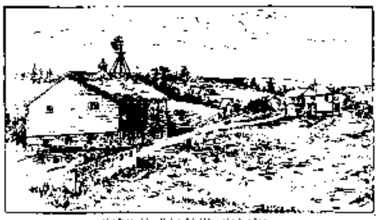
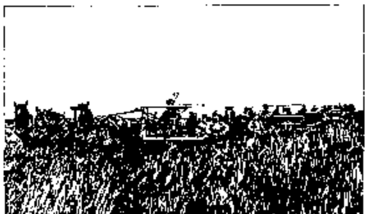
LAND OF GREAT PROMISE.

Wonderful Resources of the Western Canada Country Being Recognized and Rapidly Developed

IN these days, when the [illegible]



FARM IN WESTERN CANADA.



A MANITOBA WHEAT FIELD.

AN ALBERTA STOCK FARM.

[illegible] in all the provinces of Canada is nearly perfect. The utmost possible freedom has been given municipalities to manage their own affairs.

No country has a superior educational system. In the greater part of Canada, where homes are to be found for the millions, the schools are about three miles apart in settled districts, and they are free. All the expenses, including teachers' salaries, are paid by a Government grant and a general taxation on the land, whether occupied or not, within the district. The teachers are all properly certificated. One-eighteenth part of the whole of the "Fertile Belt" from Manitoba to the Saskatchewan and beyond is set apart for the maintenance of schools [illegible] very liberal and wise provision. [illegible] the growth of the country, it may be stated that the school population of Manitoba in 1871 was about 800. At the present writing it exceeds 50,000. There were [illegible] teachers in the province in 1876. There are now 1,200. The average salary paid teachers in rural districts is $500 per year. The schools are thoroughly inspected at intervals to see that they are kept up to the mark.

Mr. J. A. Smart, deputy minister of the Interior at Ottawa, Canada, has a large immigration staff, at the head of which is Mr. F. Pedley, the superintendent. The latter gentleman delights to talk of Canada's resources, and in the course of a conversation with the writer said that Government experimental farms, in only [illegible] and to put his land in condition for the crop of the following year.

The winters are [illegible] discomforting. The air is crisp and dry, and a temperature of 40 degrees below zero is less uncomfortable in that atmosphere than 15 degrees above in the moisture-laden atmosphere of the Atlantic coast. This is the testimony of all who have lived in both climates. The weather during each season is steady, not changeable as in the East.

The wheat of Western Canada is well known to be extremely hard, and the yield from 30 to 50 per cent more than in the States south of boundary line. There is an easily explained reason for this: In winter the frost penetrates the ground to a considerable depth, the natural [illegible] the [illegible] heat of the summer is kept moist by the slow melting of these deep frosts. The moisture ascending towards the surface nourishes the roots of the grain, stimulating growth and producing the wonderful crops that makes this region so [illegible] famed. Again, the sunshine is a little longer just when needed, when the heads are ripening, there being nearly two hours more daylight daily from the middle of June to the first of July than in our State of Ohio.

The average yield varies with varying conditions. The average some years has been over thirty bushels per acre, while in other years it has fallen to eighteen bushels. With reasonable prices even the lowest average will yield very large profits. The cost of raising an acre is [illegible]

[illegible] The [illegible] to [illegible] the power of the [illegible] It may be [illegible] stated here, though one of the most northerly in Canada, is not [illegible] farther north than St. Petersburg, the capital of Russia, further south than any portion of Scotland, Denmark, Norway or Sweden, and as far south as Dublin in Ireland, Liverpool in England and Hamburg in Germany, so that we see [illegible] to picture Canada as the frozen region of the north.

Railways traverse all the settled parts of the country. Fuel is convenient and cheap everywhere. The laws are as good as in any other locality in the world. Mob [illegible] is altogether unknown from one end of the Dominion to the other. The laws are enforced with the most scrupulous impartiality and with a promptness and vigor that inspire the confidence of the peace lover and fill the breast of the would-be law breaker with the dread of their vengeance.

Not only in agriculture and stock raising are unsurpassed opportunities in the young Dominion of Canada. The fisheries of the country are inexhaustible. Ocean, lake and river teem with the finny tribe. Its salmon find [illegible] and are famous throughout the world.

Several of the provinces, notably British Columbia, have enormous tracts of timber, all convenient to market. British Columbia is one of the best fruit growing districts in the world, while in the east [illegible] there are large areas of [illegible] lands open to settlement. In minerals Canada appears likely in time to lead the world. That entire region from the boundary line north to the Arctic circle appears to be one vast deposit of gold, silver, copper, lead and iron. British Columbia is surprising the world by the enormous output of her gold, silver and copper mines, while the Klondike, almost wholly in Canada, is known to-day in every extremity of the earth. Her output this year is estimated to be about $20,000,000 in gold, and competent authorities say it will double yearly for a long time to come.

Strange Tribes in Asia.

There are strange people who inhabit the valley of the Brahmaputra, the largest tea-producing tract in India. This territory is bounded on the north by a range upon range of mountains, starting with hills, which rise to a few hundred feet above the level of the plains, and culminating in the snowy peaks of the Himalayas. In these hills, between Thibet and British territory, live a number of independent tribes of Mongolian origin, who, secure in their rocky fastnesses, owe no allegiance [illegible]

Does Your Head Ache?

Are your nerves weak? Can't you sleep well? Pain in your back? Lack energy? Appetite poor? Digestion out? Boils or pimples? These are sure signs of poisoning.

From what poisons?

From poisons that are always found in constipated bowels.

If the contents of the bowels are not removed from the body each day, as nature intended, these poisonous substances are sure to be absorbed into the blood, always causing suffering and frequently causing severe disease.

An Exceptional Combination.

The value of medicine does not rest entirely on its power to cure. It must also be pleasant to take, and must act gently and naturally. The California Fig Syrup Co. has attained success because it has met these requirements. Its remedies are acceptable to the most delicate system, and are recommended by the entire medical profession, because they are known to act on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and to be free from every objectionable quality. In the process of manufacturing figs, senna and other laxative plants used to form the California Fig Syrup Co.'s well-known remedy, the method of the California Fig Syrup Co. is known to accomplish the full medicinal effect of the combination. It is probably the only town in the United States that has had a sun dial more than seventy years old and still keeps it in use and which is the property of a township trustee. Harmonie was founded by the Rappites, a religious society of which the head was George Rapp, who came to America from Germany in 1803 and founded the town of Harmonie, Pa. Rapp died in 1847, and the society then moved to Indiana, where it remained until 1824, when it sold the town to Robert Owen, who founded the town of New Harmony. Owen's scheme of socialism was a failure, and in 1827 the property was sold to a number of individuals, among whom was William Pelham, who purchased the sun dial from the Rappites. Pelham died in 1852, and the property was sold to Thomas Stackhouse, who died in 1857. The property was then sold to Jonathan Lucas, who died in 1867. JONES, THE BUGGY MAN.

WAYNE, NEBRASKA.

WAYNE REPUBLICAN

Judging from the candidates mentioned in connection with the republican nomination for Supreme Judge Lincoln and Omaha have a cinch on men endowed with the necessary qualifications for that eminent position.

Congressional aspirants for the place of John S. Robinson are beginning to come to the surface. There seems to be an idea quite prevalent that the Hon John is a one term man and that his successor will undoubtedly be a republican.

If Billy Peebles does not use his position as supervisor of the census for this congressional district to further his own political aspirations, we are very much mistaken in the man. The appointment of enumerators and all others over which he has any control will be so fixed as to secure some faithful workers for Billy E. See if the future don't confirm this guess.

The residents along the valley of the Illinois river are up in arms against the opening of the Chicago drainage canal, claiming that unless the state and federal dams now in that river are removed before the sewerage of the great city is turned into the river, death in many forms will stalk through the valley along the stream and that it will become in a few years one vast graveyard because of the disease carried among them by the polluted stream.

The Central and South American Republics have an idea prevalent among them, fostered by designing foreigners who seek to prejudice them in order to secure trade advantages, that the United States is likely to extend and enlarge on its policy of annexation and conquest until it has included under its control the entire American continent, and that an invasion of their countries is not to be unlooked for at any time. Laboring under this delusion, which is being fostered and kept alive by the interested ones, these countries are gradually becoming very suspicious and much prejudiced against us.

Have you heard ex-governor Holcomb's explanation as to what he did with the difference of the amount of money drawn from the state treasury and that paid for house rent. Even Silas knows there are times when silence is golden and the present is one of those times.

Governor Poynter and Adjutant General Barry are at San Francisco awaiting the arrival of the First Nebraska. The governor is bent on getting himself right before the boys and in order to do so is getting as near the gang plank as possible in order to extend the glad hand of welcome and whisper in their ears that "it was all a dirty republican lie about that veto of [illegible]"

At last we believe we are on the track of the religious sect that can claim "Bix" of the State Journal as one entitled to all its rights and privileges. We have been surprised for lo these many years that he was not a Baptist because of his aversion to water and have become convinced that he could not be a disciple of John Wesley. Just where to place him was a puzzle that took the decease of Robert G. Ingersoll to solve. "Bix" expresses the belief that "the ultimate destiny of the race will be the same as it would have been had Ingersoll never lived," in other words "Bix" teaches the faith of John Knox.

The republicans of the state don't seem to be tied hand and foot ready for the delivery to anyone in the matter of nominating a candidate for Supreme Judge. In all probability one will be chosen whose eminent fitness for the place will not be called into question. There is no call for nominating any man solely because of one act generally approved by the people at large. It requires a man broad in mind, honest in purpose and with sufficient stamina to do what he believes to be right regardless alike of friend or foe. Nebraska has many lawyers eminently fitted to wear the ermine and who will be an honor to the bench and to the state, whose names have not been prominently mentioned for the place and at whose back there is no machine or clique of politicians and it is possible that when the time arrives for the republicans to name the man who will succeed Judge Harrison they will do their duty.

Several [illegible] cases in Hawaii [illegible] under the contract labor system and this country may yet give that government some trouble. A person who recently arrived from the islands told of the sufferings of three Americans who were placed in jail because of their refusal to work under the terms of the contracts signed when they went to Hawaii and it is not improbable that the government of Austria-Hungary will be called to the matter and the United States be asked for some sort of reparation.

"It cannot be that many Americans," also says the Cleveland Leader, "realize the utter approach to slavery which exists under the American flag in the little group of islands in the Pacific ocean which came into the possession of this republic about a year ago. This country does not comprehend the extent to which the natural rights of the many are subordinate to the profits of the few in that part of the domains of the United States. The contract system of labor in the Hawaiian islands is like limited slavery. It enforces work under conditions really fixed by the employer alone for years at a time, and sends a man to jail for refusing to go on with a task which they seldom understand in advance and which is often practically too heavy for their strength." This condition of affairs, however, was well known to the advocates of Hawaiian annexation, particularly those in congress, yet they did nothing to remedy it, and since annexation thousands of contract laborers have been imported into Hawaii, who will be subjected to semi-slavery for years to come. It is a situation that reflects no credit on this republic.—Omaha Bee.

The Senate investigating committee have concluded their labors and made a report of their findings in the case. The report was handed to Lieut. Governor Gilbert, who is acting instead of the governor while that gentleman is at San Francisco to meet the boys of the First Nebraska and square himself with them. The Lieut. Governor, acting under instructions of the Governor refused to place the report on file. The report sets out that the recount commission under the guiding hand of Edmisten, Maret and others high in fusion circles attempted by forgery and otherwise to count in an amendment that would have changed the constitution of the state so as to have put in two more Supreme court Judges, that Ex Governor Holcomb knew all about the deal; that the latter gentleman had drawn about $900 more from the state treasury to pay house rent than he used for that purpose, that "Uncle Jake" Wolfe has been crooked in his school land deals in fact it shows that a more corrupt and rotten gang never undertook to hold up a state than has held sway under the reform administration.—St. Paul [illegible]

The Italian press demands satisfaction and indemnity for the Louisiana lynching, and the Italian government to save itself must act in the premises. [illegible]

[illegible] St. Paul Republican.

The populist party in Nebraska [illegible] Bartley and Moore [illegible] Edmisten, Porter, Jim Dahlman [illegible] Herdman [illegible] and Moore took the people's money and the former is serving time [illegible] The Edmisten Holcomb aggregation [illegible] attempted to thwart the will of the people by deliberately changing the ballots of the people. [illegible] Bartley's theft of half a million dollars [illegible] Bartley committed a great crime and justly deserves the condemnation of honest men in all political parties. The crime for which he suffered was but a petty forgery compared to the trap door deeds of Edmisten and his associates in their effort to pollute the ballot box. Does the pop party condemn such work? Edmisten, Dahlman, Herdman, Maret and other members of the gang are managing the "[illegible]" and Holcomb stands as the preferred candidate of the pop party for the greatest office within the gift of the people of the state. Is it any wonder that honest men in all parts of the state are becoming disgusted with the sham reforms of fusion?—Kearney Sun.

There has apparently been a decisive check put upon the formation of inflated trusts and the indications are that combinations and consolidations hereafter effected must be put on the basis of actual value in order to sell their stock. The United States Investor remarks that the trusts owe their existence to the easy money conditions which recently prevailed. They found their opportunity in the fact that the world had become seriously disturbed over a contingency of a material reduction of its income. The promoters offered the public 6 and 7 per cent investments to take the place of securities on which the investment return had been curtailed to figures far below those. But the inflated and dangerous character of the trusts having been pointed out the securities became largely unsalable. The underwriters and promoters now have them on their hands, says the Investor. They themselves have had to carry them. The leading institutions have practically declined to make loans on them. Hence the underwriters and promoters have been forced to lock up large amounts of their own capital in the trust securities and the loss in interest to them is piling up each day at a rate which must previously trouble them.

A promoter of industrial combinations recently said that the old way of organizing them can no longer be worked. It is now impossible to raise cash on any "two for one" proposition, he declared. The public will not take any more "water." A good project may be carried through, but there is no chance for poor ones. "If a consolidation is to be effected now" he said, "the plants must be put in on the basis of actual value and the sellers must be willing to take pay in the securities of the new company. The public will not put their money into stocks unless they can be known to have real value." This situation had been predicted by conservative financiers as inevitable, but it has come about sooner than was expected. It does not mean that there will be no more combinations or consolidations organized, but it does indicate that the day of excessively overcapitalized trusts has gone by, [illegible]

There is another consideration suggested by the Investor and that is as to what would happen in the event of a tightening money market. [illegible]

Nebraska and Missouri both have anti-trust laws for the suppression of combinations in restraint of trade. While these laws have been a dead letter in Nebraska they have been very effective in Missouri. Nebraska not only has a general anti-trust law that prohibits every species of combination in restraint of trade, but it also has on its statutes a law expressly framed to prevent combinations among fire insurance companies that prevent active competition through underwriters boards and rate makers. While there was a great deal of bluster about the enforcement of the law that prohibited the insurance combines when it was enacted no attempt has yet been made by the attorney general to have it enforced or even to test its constitutionality. In fact there has been no attempt on the part of the underwriters to cover up the work of the prohibited compact.

In Missouri, however, where they have an attorney general who does not play fast-and-loose in dealing with trusts and lawless combines, the insurance combine has been compelled to dissolve.

The recent decision of the supreme court of Missouri which pronounced the insurance combine as coming within reach of the anti-trust law has compelled each fire insurance company doing business in that state to instruct its agents to keep their hands free from all compacts tending to prevent free competition. The instructions issued by one of these companies to its agent at St. Joseph, where the legal contest was first instituted, are very specific. They direct the agent "hereafter to refuse in any manner to be connected with, create, enter into, become a member of, or a party to, any pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, or understanding with any corporation, partnership, individual or any other person or association of persons to regulate or fix the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, or to maintain such price when so regulated or fixed, and that if said agent is now connected with, or is a member of, or a party to, any pool, agreement, contract, combination or confederation, or any club compact, board of underwriters or other association, under whatever name, to fix or limit the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, or for the fixing or regulating, directly or indirectly or for the maintaining of the price or premium to be paid for insuring property, the agent will at once withdraw therefrom and forever cease to be connected therewith."

In view of the fact that seventy-three fire insurance companies were temporarily suspended from doing business in St. Joseph, besides being adjudged to pay a fine of $1,000 each, it is not likely that the state's authority will be further defied. It may also be taken for granted that the Missouri anti-trust law will be inforced in every other city of that state so long as its prosecuting officers and courts fearlessly discharge their duty.—Omaha Bee.

The Wife's [illegible]

[illegible] It seems to me that very few [illegible] with the many really enjoy life, they are so dissatisfied with what they can afford that it takes away the [illegible]. A truly good thing as far as the woman is to have a certain share of the profits as her own, to do with as she pleases. There is no [illegible] to the wife of any man working hard for the family and trying to carry her [illegible] [illegible]

What to Expect in a Child's Love.

It is not [illegible] we should expect of children the sort of love of which adults are capable. The child's love for the parent and the parent's love for the child are essentially different, and we may only arouse a sort of antagonism in the young by insisting upon our right to a self-sacrificing affection. Let us be content with the sweet dependence, the demonstrative fondness that is nature's response to our [illegible] accepted bestowal of ourselves upon our children. A degree of sturdy selfishness, however, is the prerogative of healthy childhood, and cannot be regarded as altogether blameworthy.

The Tight Skirt.

Of course, the new tight skirt as it is, a about a single [illegible] over the back, when trailing a foot or two, in length over green lawn or velvet pile carpet is all very well; but how about the half-attempted, half accomplished version of the dressmaker who just misses the right curves and gores creases in the wrong places? Then, indeed, the dress's [illegible] is short [illegible]. The new dresses in her hands become deeds of disaster instead of things of beauty, and there is much gnashing of teeth over disappointed ambitions.

The Woman Who Stoops.

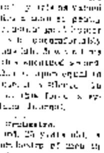
The woman who stoops is rare, thank goodness, but she does exist as an eyesore to beholders and a discomfort to herself. Weakness of the system is sometimes responsible for stooping shoulders, but carelessness is the great cause. Poring over books, writing for hours at a time and neglect to aid a defective vision with glasses are the main causes.

The cure should begin with the pil-

[illegible] knowing the exact moment in which a man is [illegible] and when it is best to let him alone. A woman who possesses this weapon generally rules by that fine instinct which strengthens her rope and [illegible] her husband's [illegible]. [illegible] a multitude of little [illegible] and precautions, [illegible] as valued as [illegible] [illegible] Ladies' Home Journal.

Leads an Orchestra.

Miss [illegible] Sanders, 25 years old, is the leader of an orchestra of men in Charleston, S. C. As a young girl she conducted [illegible] orchestra of [illegible] At the Atlanta exposition she was given a gold brooch by the ladies. She plays for all the leading dramatic attractions that visit Charleston. She tells a laughable experience with a well-known New York manager, to whom she had been presented hurriedly as "having charge of the music." Taking it in a liberal sense, he brought forth a liberal supply of sheet music and put it in her care, then remarked: "Little girl, how long before your father will be here?"



MISS SANDERS.

A Hint.

After all it's a bit cruel to take flowers from their [illegible] places in a vase of water, and choke them to sudden death by wearing them in the hot streets. A good deal more enjoyment can be had out of them by letting them live in peace, and in looking at them comfortably encased in a vase of water.

When a Woman Faints.

To care for a person who has fainted, lay the person down, keep the head low, loosen the clothing, give plenty of fresh air and dash cold water in the face. Smelling salts and stimulants should only be used when consciousness has returned.

HORSESHOE MAGIC.

It Existed Thousands of Years Before Horseshoes Came Into Existence.

Horseshoe magic is a subject which seems to be of perennial interest, says a writer in St. Paul's, mainly because it touches that little substratum of superstitious beliefs which is to be found in most of us, though living a materialistic people in a materialistic age, and despite the [illegible] away from [illegible] childish things, we none of us confess to it. As a matter of fact, however, we are always, either really or metaphorically, turning over our [illegible] when we see a new [illegible] or picking up a rusty horseshoe as a harbinger of luck. But the point that now seems to be symbolized in horseshoe magic is the circumstance that [illegible] and [illegible], horseshoe magic has nothing to do with horseshoes. It existed long before horses were [illegible], and it has [illegible] in places where horses [illegible] known.

It comparatively [illegible] the horseshoe [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] has been [illegible] a protection against [illegible] a belief which has [illegible] the present day. But the horseshoe [illegible] has been a [illegible] of [illegible] superstitions [illegible] time [illegible] horseshoe [illegible] painted and [illegible] as Amulets [illegible] and temples in the interior of [illegible]. It has been [illegible] found in the Aztec [illegible] of [illegible] discovered recently by [illegible] in the region now known as Rhodesia.

It has been found [illegible] on the sacred [illegible] of the tribes of Central Australia and [illegible] on the [illegible] of the [illegible] through the religious mysteries peculiar to those [illegible] were Messrs. Spencer and [illegible] last year to induce the [illegible] to expose the [illegible] mystery in them, but [illegible] and they [illegible] nothing save that [illegible] indispensable part of their mystic rites. The horseshoe magic is found also in [illegible], in [illegible] of the Amazon, at [illegible], in Zealand, in the temple of the goddess Mut in Upper Egypt [illegible] [illegible] Hindoo [illegible] has [illegible] [illegible] some few [illegible] over our doors.

[illegible]

The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] are often used as a vegetable, and are considerably popular, being found on the tables of the wealthy [illegible]. They are served, not only boiled, but roasted, steamed, [illegible] and as dressing for poultry and meats.

Was Johnny on the Spot?

The young man came out of a La Salle street office shop with a hammer in one hand and a small piece of board in the other and [illegible] up and down the street. It was 9 o'clock in the morning and the four [illegible] was [illegible]. After a brief survey he turned to the doorway again and producing a nail from his pocket began to fasten the board to the door frame. Then it was seen that it was a sign and it bore the magic words:

BOY WANTED.

The young man hadn't struck the nail about four feeble blows when he felt his clothing [illegible] to the sleeve. He turned his head. There stood the boy who wanted the job for which a boy was wanted.

"Did you hire a boy yet?" he asked.

"Great Scott, no!" said the [illegible] assistant. "I haven't got the sign up yet."

"Well, you don't need to put it up now," said the small boy. "I'm here. What do you want of the boy?"

Which impressing the young man as pretty good logic, he pulled out the nail again and took sign and boy into the store.—Chicago Chronicle.

An Evasive Answer.

London Answers tells this story: "John," said a clergyman to his factotum, "I shall be very busy this afternoon, and if anyone else calls I do not wish to be disturbed."

"All right, sir. Will I tell them you're not in?"

"No, John. That would be a lie."

"An' what'll I say, yer reverence?"

"Oh, just put them off with an evasive answer."

At supper time John was asked if anyone had called.

"Yes, there did," he said.

"And what did you tell him?" asked the clergyman.

"I gave him an evasive answer."

"How was that?" queried his reverence.

"He asked me was yer reverence in, an' I ses to him, ses I, 'Was your grandmother a hoot owl?'"

The Little Dressmaker.

The little dressmaker who was walking across a field, on encountering a bull, said she'd better cut him to avoid a gore.

If some people profited by their errors it would help [illegible] dividends.

Gov [illegible] Wilbar was a passenger east Sunday afternoon.

C. J. Lund went to Omaha Thursday afternoon with three cars of fat cattle.

Mr. Strubie and bride of [illegible] Rapids, Iowa, were over Sunday visitors at the home of [illegible] in our city.

It is reported that S. J. [illegible] has bought the Andrew [illegible] farm six and a half miles east of the city and paid therefor [illegible] per acre [illegible]. Mr. [illegible] expects to take possession next spring and will greatly improve the farm.

S. [illegible] spent several days in Omaha last week trying to buy some "[illegible]" [illegible] that [illegible] at Saturday for the Hills to see what he could [illegible] where they grow them.

Randolph and Carroll played a game of base ball lately and last week's Randolph Times contained a first class half column roast of the town and its people because of the treatment it alleges the club received from the Carroll boys. It is a surprise to us to hear Carroll charged with all the mean things attributed to its people by the Times and think it must be that the writer was hot under the collar because he and his club were beaten at ball that caused him to play such a vigorous game of bawl through the columns of his paper. The experience of Wayne people in their associations with Carroll will lead most of them to believe the Times is wrong.

That laborers are scarce and the supply not anything like equaling the demand is being demonstrated daily in our midst. Farmers find it almost an utter impossibility to secure the help necessary to put the wheat in stack and many who do not wish to are going to be obliged to thresh out of the shock. By going together and helping each other they can get up threshing crews sufficient to keep the machines running providing they do not get in too close proximity to each other. For several days farmers have been offering $[illegible] per day and board and some of them even offer better wages than that and then find that it does not secure the needed help—[illegible] these prosperity days.

Prosperity in Winside.

The additions to the brick buildings of Frank Weible and Walter Gaebler by which they will double the size of their storerooms will soon be begun, they having ordered the brick yesterday. The only fear of delay is through inability to get brick layers, as the brick is ordered for immediate delivery. We are pleased to note this evidence of prosperity on the part of Messrs. Weible and Gaebler in thus expanding and at the same time adding to the permanent improvements of our rapidly growing town.—Tribune.

An Almost Fatal Runaway.

Friday evening the team of A. G. Mattier ran away with him, upset the buggy, and pitched him out head first, striking in the hard road and fracturing his skull and for a time it was thought he was dead, but in a little while he returned though even now he is lingering very near eternity's brink. It appears that something or other [illegible] broke about the [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] to the place after [illegible] and he tied the team to the place on the north side of E. M. Smith's lumber [illegible] got his [illegible], returned to the buggy and [illegible] preparatory to going home and when he attempted to get into the buggy they started to go [illegible] he was entirely [illegible] causing him to make a quick [illegible] for the lines and instead of getting hold of both only got one of them thus pulling the team around so that a [illegible] once resulted as above stated. Mr. Mattier was taken to the home of his mother in the city and Dr. Leisenring rendered the necessary surgical aid and made him as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. His brother [illegible] of Bloomfield came down Saturday morning and has been at his bedside constantly ever since.

[illegible]

We have been accustomed to look on Tekamah as a very sleepy, slow town [illegible] [illegible] by the ages that [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] state [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] streets are being [illegible] and [illegible] up, but the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] their thoroughfares. [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] clothes as is indicated by the [illegible] from the Journal of that city, the only thing about the [illegible] that keeps [illegible] from being registered at the head of the [illegible] in Nebraska [illegible] that [illegible] didn't die.

We have what is probably the first case in the state of Nebraska of the bite of the kissing-bug. On Monday evening the boy of Timothy Rahn, who lives in the orchard, was bitten on the under lip by some kind of an insect which he was unable to describe as he did not know anything had happened until after it was all over, but his lip and in fact the whole face became very badly inflamed and swollen, the mucous membrane of the lip was punctured and as all the symptoms were the same as described from the bite of the kissing bug there is little doubt that the injury was inflicted by that insect. At last reports the boy was doing well.

MARRIED.

[illegible]—Lore—In the town of Dubois, Nebraska at high noon today, at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lore, the marriage of their daughter Nell to George A. Bailey will occur. It is a pleasure to make the above announcement, because in the person of the groom our readers will recognize one of Wayne county's best young men, one honored and respected by his fellows because of the straight life he has led and who by his gentle manly bearing is enabled to count his friends by the hundred. He is the Carroll agent for the [illegible] Elevator Company in whose employ he has been for several years and where he has built for himself an enviable reputation as a business man entitled to the respect and confidence of his fellows. The bride is a most estimable young lady well known to the people of Carroll where for several terms she was a teacher in the public schools, in which capacity she gained the love and respect of parents, pupils and all with whom she was brought in contact. The young couple will be at home in Carroll in a few days to their own home that has just been completed and is one in which their friends will always receive a cordial welcome. We know that we but echo the sentiment of all the acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey in hoping that theirs may be a voyage of happiness through life.

J. H. COYLE, County Clerk.

There are few cities or towns the size of ours that can boast of as many fraternal organizations as can ours and yet they continue to multiply; the latest to claim attention is the Royal Brotherhood of Sidewalk Decorators whose place of meeting is around the corner of the First National Bank where with jaws of [illegible] the juice is forced from Battle Ax, Climax, Horseshoe and other less known but equally well beloved brands, and with lips compressed into the proper shape this noble brotherhood never fail to hit a fly or furnish filth enough to soil the skirts of any lady that is so unfortunate as to pass before the expectorations have become dried. After a time and with sufficient practice we are satisfied that this noble band will develop artistic talent that will command the attention of painters, frescoers and decorators the world over and will compel them to come hither in order that they may become filled with the many new ideas and designs that greet the eyes of people by every morning, noon and night.
