HIDDEN TERROR

Very often what is recalled is not the actual event, but the feeling which it produces. This is the case with the hidden terror which is the subject of this story. It is a feeling which is not always recognized, but which is often the cause of much suffering and distress. It is a feeling which is often the result of a hidden cause, and which is often the cause of a hidden effect. It is a feeling which is often the result of a hidden cause, and which is often the cause of a hidden effect. It is a feeling which is often the result of a hidden cause, and which is often the cause of a hidden effect.
